HATHAWAY.

Dec. 30.—A happy New Year to one and all.

A green Christmas this year.

Born, Dec. 23, to Lewis Rector and wife, a fine boy.

The death of David Marshall cast a pall of sadness over this neighborhood just upon the eve of Christmas. Huey, of Somerset, in the presence of a very large gathering of grief-stricken relatives and friends. At the conclusion of the sermon, the Odd-Fellows, of which order the deceased was a member, took charge of the remains, and conducted their funeral service, after which the interment took place in the new cemetery near the church. The father and mother have the sympathy of all in their very, very sad bereavement, and may their loss be their eternal gain, and may they join him in that heavenly home to dwell with God and his angels. Is the wish of this writer.

We have always condemned the idea of copying items from other papers to fill the neighborhood colnmns of the RECORDER, but the following is so true that I could not refrain from copying it. Show me the man you honor and I know by that symptom better than any other what kind of a man you are yourself; for you show there what your ideal of manhood is.

If you want to know anything about the moon ask Howard Kirkpatrick, as he is a close observer of that planet. A few nights since he called on his best girl, and as they were gently cooing over the front yard gate he suddenly noticed that the moon was coming up in the west. It rose higher and higher until it got directly over the happy couple, when it suddenly changed its course and went slowly down the same track that it had traversed in coming up, and set in exactly the same spot from which it had risen. No cause can be given for the moon's strange actions except that their presence had some peculiar effect on it, as the older inhabitants say they never knew it to do the like before.

CHRISTMAS DAY AT HEBRON.

Christmas day at Hebron was one of special note. The Sunday School of the Lutheran Church had prepared a fine program which was successfully carried out. The church was filled far beyond its seating capacity. The shutters were closed and blinds were down, with lamps lighted giving the appearance of a night meeting. An evergreen tree reaching to the ceiling, was almost hid with presents. In the songs, recitations, dialogues and exercises the members of the school acquitted themselves grandly. The Hebron Sunday School is one of the live, growing, up-to-date organizations for good in this county. The members have a mind to work, and are sensible of God's favor toward them. Among the presents took from the tree and gathered up about its roots the dames of the pastor, his wife and granddaughter were found—a fine lap-robe, ladies scarf, picture of parsonage, souvenier card with handkerchiefs, was droppedinto the pastors lap. Every member of the school received a large package of choice candy. No matter if some had been very indifferent in attendance, all were treated alike. Every number on the program was appropriate. All spoke forth the anniversary of Jesus' birth at Bethlehem. No Santa Claus nonsense hid the real meaning of the day. All present were profuse in praise of the service. It was good and will do good.

ONE WHO WAS THERE.

THE RECORDER.

BURLINGTON. - - KENTUCKY

College Men and the Army.

The apparent inability of the government to induce college graduates to compete for the many vacant second lieutenancies in the artillery corps is attributed by a contemporary to the pay ($1,400 per annum) of that rank. It says that this is too small as compared with the opportunities of civil employments to attract college men. We doubt the sufficiency of the explanation, since it is difficult to imagine a graduating class the majority of whose members would not jump at the offer of employment at $1,400 a year, with such additional allowances in kind as make the compensation equivalent to perhaps $1,700 in value. A second lieutenant's pay is far above that of the average, not the exceptional, clergyman or school teacher, while the young professional man has a weary apprenticeship to go through before he can demonstrate his earning power as equal to his abilities. The disinclination of college men to compete for commissions must be attributed, declares Boston Transcript, to an indisposition to follow the profession of arms as a career, rather than to inadequacy of military pay. It has the attractions of permanency, regularly and assured increase. Every five years the pay of each grade up to a certain limit undergoes an automatic advance. From the second lieutenant, unmounted, who begins service at the rate of $116.67 monthly, draws $128.23 after five years, $140 after ten years, $157.67 after 15 years, and $163.33 thereafter, in the same grade. Only when general rank is attained does the progressive increase for each five-year period in a grade cease. When we reckon the various allowances and commutations to officers it will be seen that while their pay may not be munificent, it is not such as to freeze the martial ardor of a young man with predilections for the career.

Capacity of Naturalization.

It has been frequently said that, under the new naturalization law, aliens must be able to show some understanding of our institutions and system of government. It is certain that the new law makes great advance in the safeguards it furnishes against naturalizing unfit applicants. But what it says with respect to the alien's knowledge is very slight. In a recent application for naturalization before Justice Pound, of the supreme court of New York, at Lockport, a special assistant United States attorney is quoted as saying that the applicant shall have read the constitution of the United States, have a knowledge of the state, county and municipal governments and know about taxes and schools. The judge, however, declined to accept this statement, and quoted the requirement of the statute, which is merely that the applicant shall be "attached to the principes of the constitution of the United States." This, remarks Case and Comment, leaves much to the discretion of the court. But there is quite certainly a tendency on the part of the courts to demand more proof of the fitness of the applicants for naturalization.

A man possessed of a single talent, backed by great self-confidence, will achieve more than a man who has ten talents, and yet lacks belief in his ability. The mind cannot act with vigor in the presence of doubt. A wavering mind makes a wavering execution. There must be certainty, confidence and assurance, declares the New York Weekly, or there can be little efficiency. An uneducated man who believes in himself, and who has faith that he can do the thing he undertakes, often puts to shame the average college-bred man, whose overculture and wider outlook have sometimes bred increased sensitiveness and a lessening of self-confidence, whose decision has been weakened by constant weighing of conflicting theories and whose prejudices are always open to conviction.

A college girl in the west, while attempting to escape from hazers, fell, receiving injuries from which she will probably die. This phase of the higher education for women is not going to lessen the prejudice against it to any extent. At a time when hazing among men's colleges is being denounced as brutal, its introduction among feminine institutions will prove a serious handicap to the advocates of equal intellectual advantages.

A "hero" medal has been refused to a policeman in Connecticut who, at the risk of his own life, saved a drowning baby. The refusal is based on the fact that he only did his duty. But very often that is the highest kind of heroism, for heroic things are not always done simply because they happen to be one's duty.

SERMONETTE.

"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom."

Sacred and profane history can produce examples which absolutely prove the truth of this declaration.

The fear of God is the open door to the sure, safe pathway of God-given wisdom which leads unerringly through the maze of human life and conditions and lands the soul at last on the commanding heights of God's certainty.

Human wisdom at best is but partial wisdom.

It has its limitations inflexibly determined by the finite.

It can but partially grasp and understand the complex circumstances and conditions of the present, and as for the future, what can man do but guess?

How pitiably circumscribed is the life which has only human wisdom on which to rely.

But it is not so where the wisdom of God unites with the wisdom of man, for the wisdom of God not only understands all the mysteries and perplexities of the life of the present, but it sees with unerring vision into the future and knows the end from the beginning. Hence it is that the one who walks in the wisdom of God shall not err in vision or stumble in judgment.

Solomon was richly endowed with human wisdom. Naturally he had a keen and discerning mind, and trained, as undoubtedly he had been, in all the learning of the east, he was splendidly equipped from the human point of view to direct wisely and well the affairs of a kingdom, but all this did not blind his heart to the fact that he needed God more than anything else.

We know this because Scripture tells us that "Solomon loved the Lord, walking in the statutes of David his father." Here, then, we discover the secret of Solomon's wisdom and greatness and power. He loved God and so feared God, for this second condition is but the corollary of the first. Love of God inevitably leads to Godly fear. The one finds its expression and its complement in the other. Fear of God then was the beginning of Solomon's wisdom.

There is no more beautiful picture in all the Bible than this one of the fair young king humbly bowing before God, and asking for divine help in directing the affairs of the kingdom. Read it. Solomon's prayer and God's answer are a sermon in themselves.

THE STORY.

A WORLD conquest! Why not? King Solomon asked himself the question. A vision of greatness and power had come to him, a vision of one scepter over all the world and that scepter his, a vision of conquest of the nations to the east and the west of his kingdom, and he the triumphant conqueror.

Benaiah, the captain of the hosts of Israel, had been the first to suggest the thought to him when the former had urged an expedition against Rezon, who was then ruling at Damascus, and who was to be feared because of the enmity which he bore King David. Solomon well remembered the stirring campaign of his father which had made of Rezon an unrelenting enemy. The latter had been one of the chief warriors of Hadadezer, king of Zobah, and had escaped with a company of men when David had conquered the land and had killed Hadadezer. At that time Rezon had sworn to be revenged upon King David, but the opportunity had not come, and Benaiah, thinking that Rezon might plan an expedition against the new king, Solomon, proposed that the armies of Israel proceed against him.

And as an outgrowth of the suggested campaign had come the broader vision of a world conquest. Why stop at the conquest over Rezon? Why not extend the borders of Israel to the very ends of the earth? Why not signalize the beginning of his reign with a brilliant series of military expeditions, such as had marked the first years' rule of the kings of other lands in former ages?

King David, his father, had left him a strong army, which was already feared by all the nations about, and it was but natural that he should be ambitious to have its powers further extended. And where was there a nation that had such a mighty warrior as was Benaiah? Had not the fame of his deeds gone abroad, so that it was known everywhere how he had met in single-handed combat and had slain two lion-like men of Moab? And was it not also known how he had gone down in the time of snow and had slain in its lair a fierce lion, which had terrorized the entire country round and had destroyed not only sheep and cattle but women and children as well? And then the Egyptians had good reason to know of the mighty Benaiah, for had he not slain their strongest warrior, after a desperate combat, his only weapon being his staff, while the Egyptian was armed with sword and spear?

With such a leader and with an army which had not known defeat for years, where was the foe which could stand up against it? Where was the nation which could not be conquered? Such were the questions which came to the mind of the young King Solomon after Benaiah had proposed the expedition against Rezon, and the vision of world-wide conquest opened up before him.

"Better send for Nathan the prophet and Zadok the high priest, and talk it over with them," came the thought, which brought a temporary check to the glow of enthusiasm which thrilled his being as he had pictured all the magnificence and glory and power which would be his when he had brought the whole world at his feet.

"But why talk with them?" he impatiently ejaculated. "If it were a question as to the religious observances, or the laws of the nation, it would be well, but what know they about war and conquest?"

And turning with an air of decision, as though that matter was settled and out of the way, he summoned one of the servants and dispatched him with a message to Benaiah and the other chief warriors of Israel that they should meet him in conference that day at the palace, "for," said he to himself, "we must needs lose no time, for so vast an expedition will require long and careful preparation."

As may well be supposed, Benaiah and the other officers of the army were highly pleased at the promise of such extensive military operations, and the active work of preparing for the expedition soon aroused unusual interest and enthusiasm throughout the kingdom. Not a word of commendation or of condemnation had come to the king from either Nathan or Zadok, although Solomon knew that they must have heard of the plans. But he felt rather relieved and glad that they had not sought him out, for he did not care to go into too deep an analysis of the motives and desires which actuated him in seeking a world conquest. Somehow, he felt that it would not meet their approval, and he was glad he did not have to answer uncomfortable questions and enter into long explanations as to his plans.

"But you must have God with you if your plans are to be a success," came the voice of conscience from within, for Solomon loved the Lord, and desired to do all that the Lord required. "Yes," Solomon persuaded himself, "but would it not be to the honor and glory of God to bring all kingdoms and all nations under the dominion of the nation whose God is the Lord? I will hold sacrifices at Gibeon and all the nation shall know that the Lord is with me in this thing."

So saying, King Solomon gave orders that Zadok prepare for the services, and on the appointed day he went thither, with all his courtiers and the chief men of his army, that they might worship. Day after day the ceremonies continued until at last a thousand burnt offerings had been sacrificed upon the high place. During all those days of worship and service the heart of the young king had been singularly touched and stirred, and there had come to him a new realization of the need of and dependence upon God. He had come to Gibeon filled with the great ambition to send his armies out into the world and extend his scepter to every nation, and one day when the question had arisen in his heart whether he was willing to give up that ambition if God was not with him in the plan, a fierce, impatient spirit had seized him, and the impulse was strong upon him to forthwith leave Gibeon and plunge headlong into the completing of the plans of the expedition.

"But would you attempt to conquer the world while yet you cannot rule your own spirit?" came the voice from within.

With sudden horror and an inner revulsion of feeling, Solomon realized the awful crisis which faced his life. Was he ready for a world conquest while yet he had failed to conquer his own heart? Was he ready to rule over the world, while yet he had not proved that he could rule righteously over the nation which had chosen him as king?

With these questions uppermost in his mind, while yet he was shaping answer to them, he sought his couch that night, and in a dream thought God spoke to him, asking him what he should give to him.

It was all so real that during all the years which followed Solomon never questioned but that God had visited him in person and had given him the promise of his blessing because he had chosen the wisdom and understanding of God rather than all the kingdoms of the earth. And more than once, as the borders of his kingdom extended and riches and honor and power flowed unto him, did he exclaim: "Verily, the Lord hath kept his word and hath given not only wisdom, but all else besides."

RULED BY TRUSTS

PROOF OF REPUBLICAN PARTY'S UNWORTHINESS.

Time Has Shown the Truth of Judge Parker's Charges Made in 1904, of the Roosevelt-Corporation Alliance.

The more we examine the history of the last campaign for the presidency, the more we must be convinced that Judge Parker was right and that his opponents, whether they called themselves Democrats or Republicans, were wrong. In his speech at Esopus, on October 24, 1904, Judge Parker declared that the president [illegible] trusts had come [illegible] "in an effort "to satisfy the country that the trusts were opposed to his administration;" and that the corporations were contributing largely to the Republican corruption fund, while pretending to be hostile to Roosevelt. And in this connection he added: "Political contributions by corporations and trusts mean corruption. They cannot be honest. A corporation will subscribe to a political party only because the corporation expects that party, through its control of public officers, executive or legislative, to do something for the benefit of the corporation, or to refrain from doing something to its injury. No other motive can be imagined; in the nature of things, no other motive can exist." In short, Judge Parker charged the president with conniving with the trusts and moneyed corporations in defending the people of this country.

The New York Times, the New York World, and the Brooklyn Eagle made similar charges. In an editorial the Eagle, on October 16, 1904, said:

"Payments have been made and obligations correspond. As it is now too late to modify the program, under the auspices of Cortelyou, collections will continue." And again in the same article, it said: "Corporations are not in the habit of giving something for nothing."

Developments in the investigation of the life insurance companies and other corporations have demonstrated the truth of these charges. And developments in connection with the present panic commenced on the very day on which the president was denouncing the criminal rich in a speech at Nashville, while Cortelyou was in conference with them in New York, and was lending them money out of the public treasury to enable them to absorb all the resources of ordinary industrial institutions and railroads, prove that the same conspiracy to delude the people is still in existence. Cortelyou, the same man who managed the business end of the conspiracy in 1904, is now managing it with a view to greater results of the same character in 1908. Why did the trusts and moneyed corporations contribute such enormous funds to elect Roosevelt in 1904? This question was answered by the New York Evening Post in 1904, as well as it can be answered now, when in an editorial article it said:

"Manufacturing corporations and trusts make contributions, not to testify their admiration for President Roosevelt, but to purchase privileges and immunities. They put money in Mr. Cortelyou's slot and take out a tariff duty. This scarcely concealed partnership between the Republican party and the favored interests which think they will find their accounts in keeping it in power constitutes the peculiar offense and menace attending the use of huge campaign funds. It is a revolting thing, yet no intelligent man will deny the substantial accuracy of Judge Parker's indictment. The plan to buy the lawmaking power, in the expectation of favors to come, is as detestable as it is wicked; and the best way to rebuke and defeat it is to put a party in office whose policy is not to have any privileges to sell to any man."

Civil Service.

The president has notified, but not in an official way, the heads of departments that federal officials cannot go to the next Republican national convention as Roosevelt delegates, and that the third term boom in official quarters must be immediately snuffed out. That is all very good, and it is consistent with the belief that the president is sincere in his rejection of the third term. But it would have been still better if the notice to the heads of departments had been official. It would have been best of all if it had simply and directly called attention to the rules of the reformed civil service, that holders of official positions should refrain from mixing in politics, and should leave the work of conventions and other political machinery to others. The federal officeholders should not be organized into a machine for booming any one.

Inconsistent Policy.

The central fact when the Republican party assembles its full complement of staff officers in Washington and proceeds to reassure the country is that it has control of over a quarter of a billion dollars of the country's earnings, which it reports as a surplus of available cash above the needs of government in the same week it begins demanding more.

TOOL OF WALL STREET.

Majority in Congress Not Likely to Effect Financial Reform.

Those who expect that congress will enact the financial reform legislation that is demanded will probably be doomed to disappointment. Some kind of a financial measure will perhaps be agreed to, but it will fall far short of meeting the unfortunate conditions that Republican politics have produced. In any event, only a compromise measure may be expected, for even the bankers are divided into two schools of finance. One school believes inflation through asset currency will insure prosperity, and the other school is anxious for a central bank through which all financial blessings should flow. Those who believe in more currency are also divided in opinion upon what it shall be based, whether on the assets of the banks, or upon bonds and stocks. There is also a serious difference of opinion about the rate of interest the bankers shall pay on this new currency. The bankers propose 3 per cent, and those who are intent on a flexible currency that will be retired as soon as its purpose is accomplished, think that not less than 7 per cent. should be paid, or it would continue in circulation.

Bank currency based on the "assets" of the banks without any other security, is a return to the state bank system that existed before the creation of national banks to force a market for United States bonds, but the people will never consent to again use currency that is not good anywhere, and that has not the faith and credit of the United States behind it, and can be used in all business transactions without question.

The most able financiers are convinced that the inflation of the currency has gone far enough, and that it not inflation that is needed, for inflation of the currency has been persistent and is still going on. The volume of money in circulation is now about 50 per cent. more per capita than it was ten years ago, and is progressing at the rate of nearly 5 per cent. a year. As the Democrats are not charged with the responsibility of legislation, and will be prevented by the autocratic rules of the House of Representatives from having any voice in formulating the bill that may eventually be reported by the committee and that will be given the right of way by the all-powerful committee on rules, the minority can but criticise and propose such amendments as they determine are necessary for the protection of the public. Thus the Republicans must assume the full responsibility and be answerable for the consequences.

The present financial system has been built up by the Republican party for the special advantage of the national banks, and to further tinker with it will eventually produce more disaster for the people than they are now suffering. The whole system is wrong in principle, and in practice is an adjunct of the frenzied financiering of Wall street, for there has never been a Republican secretary of the treasury that has not been the willing tool of the Wall street bankers.

Exit Prosperity.

Our exports are increasing at a great rate, while our imports are proportionately decreasing. Yet we are in the midst of the worst panic the country has experienced since 1873, when spurious Republican prosperity collapsed by reason of its inherent rottenness. Republicans are crying for inflation, for "credit currency," for "asset currency," for "shinplaster currency," for the deposit of government money in banks. But all these would only make matters worse. The gold standard is seriously threatened. Gold and currency have been at a large premium, specie payments have virtually been suspended. Practically, the government and the banks have become bankrupt. Thousands of workmen have been thrown out of employment. There is no such thing as real confidence in business or politics. And this is the end of Republican "prosperity," which has ever been a mere fake, except to the few. Quackery is always the worst possible treatment. Important financiers like Jacob H. Schiff realize this, and warn their friends of the dreadful times ahead. Schiff, who is a Jewish philanthropist, and the head of the great international banking firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., made a speech recently in which he said:

"There can be little doubt that the coming winter is going to bring great disaster to many of those near us, many of respectable and honest appearance, who have always managed to support themselves, but who have hovered on the border line between support and non-support, who can lay nothing aside because their means do not allow, for all their earnings are necessary to show a dignified and respectable front to the world."

Schiff is not a calamity howler. He is not a politician. He was talking to his own people, and urging them to prepare for the long winter which they must spend in poverty resulting from enforced idleness and bankruptcy. The truth is always patriotic as well as philanthropic.

Viewing with Alarm.

Mr. John D. Rockefeller thinks the panic "is due to the needless alarm of the people and their action in withdrawing accounts from solvent institutions." But can the people be expected to be free from alarm when they view the selfish actions of the trust magnates and the untoward political management of the Republican leaders? With financial and political leaders united to allow the plundering of the people can they be blamed for "viewing with alarm" the state of affairs?

Sensible to the Last.

An old Scotch woman used to be attended by a doctor to whom she invariably gave a guinea when he went to see her. He had told the friends with whom she lived that her death would probably be sudden, and one day he was hurriedly sent for, as she appeared to have become unconscious. On his arrival he saw at once that she was dead, and, taking hold of her right hand, which was closed but not rigid, he calmly extracted from it the fee which she had provided for him, and as he did so, he murmured:

QUARREL IN THE NAVY

SURGEON GENERAL RIXEY ISSUES A STATEMENT.

ABOUT HOSPITAL SHIPS

Washington. — Surgeon General P. M. Rixey of the Navy issued a statement Wednesday night which tells of the serious dispute between the navigation and medical bureaus and probably explains the resignation of Rear Admiral Brownson. The quarrel has arisen over the probable selection of the president of a medical officer to command the hospital ship Relief.

While disclaiming exact knowledge as to the cause of Admiral Brownson's resignation, the surgeon general in his statement leaves little room for doubt that the controversy he reviews was a potent factor.

Dr. Rixey maintains that hospital ships, as a rule, always have been commanded by medical officers, with a sailing master and civilian crew for purposes of navigation. This particular vessel, he says, formerly belonged to the army and always was commanded by a medical officer when used as a hospital ship.

Recommended by Joint Board.

In attempting to unify the medical services of the army and the navy, he says, a joint army and navy board of medical officers which was convened by executive order more than a year ago recommended that hospital ships should be commanded by medical officers and that recommendation was approved by both the secretary of war and the secretary of the navy in general orders. Since the civil war, he says, all hospital ships and medical transports of the army had been placed under the surgeon general of the army. He says further that Japanese naval hospital ships were commanded by medical officers after having tried line officers.

These ships, he says, are simply floating hospitals, properly under the control of the medical department, and should be conducted in peace exactly as in time of war. This is especially so, he adds, because during war time line officers cannot be spared and do not, and should not, desire the command of these ships.

He maintains that it always has been a doubtful question if the Geneva and The Hague agreements could guarantee the neutrality of these ships if combatant (line) officers and crews were aboard, and it was this doubt which prevented the Japanese during the recent war with Russia from using line officers on hospital ships.

"The internal administration of the bureau of medicine and surgery," he says, "has been in my opinion too much interfered with by the bureau of navigation. This interference has at times caused grave concern as to how I could meet the needs of those under our care."

The hospital ship Relief, he says, should now be with the battleship fleet on its cruise, but he adds, "the bureau of navigation thought otherwise and the fleet of 15,000 men, with its auxiliaries, is without a hospital ship and will be until it arrives at Magdalena bay, more than three months from now." He adds that he cannot understand how Admiral Brownson should be especially interested in the officering of hospital ships,as his duties lie in another direction, and that he should not interfere in a matter pertaining entirely to the bureau of medicine and surgery, and therefore to be decided by the secretary of the navy.

Income To Be Used For Support of Students—Number of Beneficiaries Not Determined.

Boston, Dec. 28.—Details of the plans of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, head of the Christian Science church, in relation to the charitable institution which she is to found, are contained in an editorial by Archibald McLellan in the current issue of The Christian Science Sentinel.

The editorial says in part: "Mrs. Eddy has consented that the institution which she purposes to found will bear her name, therefore it will be known as 'Mary Baker G. Eddy's Charitable Fund.' The board of directors will be located in Boston, the recognized headquarters of the church, and in plan and scope this fund will be an educational opportunity by which indigent persons will be taught the science of the Christ healing as practiced by Jesus and as made known through the writings of Mrs. Eddy.

"The sum of $1,000,000 will be devoted to this sole purpose. Mrs. Eddy's benevolence will be open to all those individuals who are genuinely interested in Christian Science for its truth's sake, and who shall present to the board of directors satisfactory certificates as to their indigence, their religious views and their moral character.

"The students of Christian Science will be maintained by this fund until such time as the board of directors shall have pronounced them good healers of the sick, and deliver to them certificates to this effect.

"The beneficiaries of this fund and the families of those who have families are to be supported from the income of the fund, and the number of students and their families to be supported will depend upon the amount of this income.

"Mrs. Eddy has turned this matter over to a prospective board of directors for them to work out the details of the charity. In the meantime, no further information upon this subject can be given out, and no letters of inquiry should be addressed to Mrs. Eddy."

MYSTERY IN CRUEL MURDER

WOMAN'S NUDE BODY FOUND IN POND AT HARRISON, N. J.

Newark, N. J.—A murder, combining the elements of mystery and deliberate cruelty that take it out of the ordinary, was committed on the Hackensack Meadows in the town of Harrison early Thursday, and the nude body of the victim, a comely woman of perhaps 30 years, was found nearly submerged in the icy waters of a little pond. Only the feet projected when chance passers-by broke the ice in which the exposed portions were incrusted and dragged the body ashore.

The dead woman was finely featured; her hair and nails gave evidence of a recent and scrupulous toilet, and such of her clothing as was subsequently found suggested in texture and style an owner of refinement.

Two men, who occupied a yacht moored near where the body was found, are detained by the police.

The most important clew obtained was furnished Thursday night by Peter Coogan, a watchman employed by the Marine Engine company, who recognized the body as that of a woman whom he had seen crossing the meadows in company with a man early in the day. Later he saw the man alone. He then carried a bundle in his arms. The man was short and stout.

Two girls returning to their home in Harrison long after midnight heard a woman's cries floating over the marsh land. They seemed to come from the direction of the pond and, to the startled girls sounded like "Spare me," and "Help!" Nearer home the girls were approached by a well-dressed stranger, who accosted and followed them until a policeman was met with, when he turned and fled.

FOOTBALL PLAYERS ARE HEROES.

St. Louis Boys Help Rescue Trainmen from Bad Wreck.

Seattle, Wash.—St. Louis university football athletes made heroes of themselves before daylight Monday morning near Brocket Station, on the Canadian Pacific, when they arrived on their way to the coast, 20 minutes after a head-in collision between two freight trains. The engine crews and train men were under the debris, some of them scalded frightfully by escaping steam.

Medical student members of the team set to work to rescue the victims and materially aided, though working against escaping steam, in saving life and limb. They operated on three of the crushed trainmen. Brakeman Ormsbee was crushed to death and Fireman Chris Von Wald and G McKinnon were so badly injured that they may die.

The wreck was caused by the failure of the operator at Brocket to deliver orders. He afterward fled.

Woman Dead; Husband Arrested.

Macon, Ga.—The body of Mrs. John Watts was found badly charred on the banks of the Comulgee river Wednesday. She was the wife of John Watts, formerly impounding officer of Macon. The last seen of Mrs. Watts alive was when she left the house of a friend at one o'clock Tuesday afternoon. It is reported there was some trouble between Watts and his wife about another man. Watts was arrested and jailed. The coroner's jury decided the body had been burned after the woman's death

NAMED TO SUCCEED MALLORY.

William James Bryan Appointed Senator from Florida.

Jacksonville, Fla. — Gov. Broward Wednesday appointed William James Bryan of this city, to be United States senator, vice Stephen Russell Mallory, deceased, for the balance of the term, expiring March 4, 1909. Mr. Bryan is a prominent young attorney, only 31 years of age, and now holds the position of county solicitor for this (Duval) county. He was born in Orange county, Florida, October 10, 1876. He is the son of John M. Bryan, who served 14 years as state senator and afterwards as a member of the state railroad commission. He has always been active in politics and at present is a member of the Democratic executive committee. About two months ago Mr. Bryan announced his candidacy for the United States senatorship to succeed Mr. Mallory. He is not related to William J. Bryan of Nebraska.

Senator Mallory was born November 2, 1848. He entered the confederate army in 1864 and in the spring of 1865 was a midshipman in the confederate navy. He studied law and began practicing at Pensacola in 1874. He was elected to the state legislature as representative and senator and later served two terms as a congressman. He was elected to the United States senate in 1897 and was reelected in 1903.

MOVE FOR WALSH LOST.

Judge Anderson Refuses to Order the Banker Acquitted.

Chicago.—Judge A. B. Anderson late Thursday refused to take the case of John R. Walsh from the jury in the federal court and order the defendant dismissed on a plea made by Attorney John S. Miller. The court not only turned down the argument that the government had not made out a case, but ordered the defense to proceed with the trial.

The jury which had been excluded from the room during the day was recalled at four p. m. and preparations to proceed with the defense were continued. The court instructed Mr. Miller to prepare a written complaint against any further evidence which the attorneys hold should be excluded from the record. In doing so the judge declared that portions of the evidence already objected to would be given to the jury.

Bonfils and Patterson Fight.

Denver, Col.—A warrant was sworn out Thursday night for the arrest of Fred G. Bonfils, one of the proprietors of the Denver Post. The warrant was sworn to by ex-United States Senator Thomas M. Patterson as the result of an encounter between the two men at an early hour in the morning, during which Senator Patterson was knocked down and painfully injured. This was the culmination of a newspaper fight which has been going on for some years between the proprietors of the Post and Patterson.

ROUND ABOUT THE STATE

What Is Going on in Different Sections of Kentucky.

IN DANVILLE JAIL,

Under Heavy Guard, Negro Reed Begs For Protection.

Danville, Ky.—In the custody of several deputy sheriffs, Charles Reed, the negro who probably fatally shot Chief of Police Smith, of Harrodsburg, arrived here, and at once was placed in the county jail for safekeeping.

The deputies said that, to foil a mob of some 50 or 60 armed men, bent upon taking Reed from Harrodsburg jail and lynching him, they had hustled him out of the building through a secret exit, flagged a train, placed him thereon [illegible] this town.

A strong guard is on duty at the jail, here, as Harrodsburg is only nine miles distant, and the deputy sheriffs fear that the mob, when it learns of the escape will come to Danville to seize the prisoner.

Reed begs his captors to protect him. He is in abject terror, despite promises of the officers to keep the lynching party out of the jail.

OFFICIAL PLUMS

Louisville, Ky.—In the form of Christmas gifts to his friends Dr. Ben L. Bruner, secretary of state-elect, announced his appointments for his office staff. As had been understood, Jackson Morris, of Jackson county, was made assistant secretary at a salary of $1,000. Will L. Lyon, of Horse Cave, Hart county, was made corporation clerk at a salary of $1,800. Mr. Lyon is from Dr. Bruner's own county. W. E. Bidwell, of Louisville, who made himself famous during the late campaign by accompanying the governor as a staff correspondent for the Louisville Herald, was given a $1,500 clerkship. Floyd Thatcher, of Morgantown, was made office secretary and stenographer at a salary of $1,200.

The appointment for the assistant secretaryship of state must be approved by the governor.

Warnings on Christmas Tree.

Mayfield, Ky.—Robert Hillman and James Richardson, of the northwestern part of this county, attended an entertainment at Jackson's Schoolhouse and received warning notices, which had been put on the Christmas tree for them by unknown persons. The notices were wrapped separately in small boxes with a skull and crossbones marked on the top, and warned them not to deliver the tobacco they had already sold to buyers, who do not belong to the association.

Suspect Night Riders.

Lexington, Ky.—Two fires in the same neighborhood and of mysterious origin caused the spreading of the report that night riders were abroad in Fayette county. One of the seven big tobacco barns, all filled with burley, on the farm of W. Z. Thompson, near Donerail, was destroyed. At the same time, about a mile away, half a hundred men were beating out flames that destroyed six acres of stubble and threatened the destruction of two big barns on the farm of Thornton Moore.

Fatally Wounded His Uncle.

Williamsburg, Ky.—John Watson shot and fatally wounded his uncle, Lee Watson, at the home of the former. John Watson claims his uncle came up to his fence, where he was standing with a shotgun, and told him he was going to kill him, whereupon he shot him. He surrendered.

Crushed By An Auto.

Louisville, Ky.—While running at a high rate of speed an automobile occupied by and belonging to Robert Kiefer, superintendent of the Old Times Distilling Co., skidded to a curbing and ran over Mary Lutterbeck, 8 years old. Both her legs were crushed and she was internally injured.

Banana Killed Him.

Saloons Must Close on Sundays.

Louisville, Ky.—The upper board of council passed the two liquor ordinances, When the mayor signs them saloon licenses will be $500. All places must close at midnight and remain closed all day Sunday.

BOUND BY "BLOOD OATH."

Adjutant General Believes Night Riders Have Taken Pledge.

Lexington, Ky.—Maj. P. P. Johnston, Kentucky's new adjutant general, who is depended upon to settle the night riders' troubles in the tobacco belt, left again for Hopkinsville.

He hopes to convict the men guilty of assisting in the burning of the several tobacco warehouses at Hopkinsville without trouble, but admits that to bring them before the grand juries while the present state of feeling exists would be equivalent to dismissing them.

[illegible] tigation, is firm in the belief that there is a "blood oath" among the riders, and that no member of the organization will betray his neighbors.

"The blood oath," said Maj. Johnston, "is certainly holding the band together, but it is certain that there will be a leak somewhere and then the truth will be known."

Maj. Johnston does not think all the members of the tobacco organization countenance the night riders, but he is confident that there is a secret klan inside the association which is responsible for the outrages.

LOUISVILLE JUSTICE

Accused of False Swearing and the Withholding of Funds.

Louisville, Ky.—Five warrants, four charging Magistrate Frank J. Hoffman with false arrest, and the other accusing him of false swearing, were served upon him here. They were sworn out by County Attorney Seligman.

The following sums are said to have been held by Hoffman as justice of the peace: $25, the property of H. A. Richardson; $104, belonging to Isaac Aldridge; $88.95, to W. A. Arnold, and $37.65, to A. M. Link.

The fifth charge accuses the magistrate of having sworn that he had paid over money to one Cornell, which oath Cornell and the county attorney swear is false. Hoffman makes the defense that the rule of his court is not to pay over money until the 60 days for appeal have passed.

Gunning Casualties.

Louisville, Ky.—Among the casualties here was the death of Lytton Stout, aged 11, who, with Robert Stivers, a chum, went out hunting to Sotonville, a suburb. Lytton slipped on a bank and the contents of his gun were discharged into his side. Henry Lyons, aged 23, shot off an old flintlock his great-grandfather had used, and when the weapon burst it tore off his right arm.

Third Time's a Charm.

Louisville, Ky.—For the second time this city has been enjoined from building the tuberculosis ward of the city hospital. Several days ago it was proposed to erect a ward on Chestnut street, but Judge Miller granted an injunction. Then earth was broken at the intersection of Preston and Madison streets, and another injunction followed.

Sheriffs Puzzled.

Frankfort, Ky.—Owing to the question of the constitutionality of the Croan dollar dog tax law the sheriffs are unable to make their final settlements with the auditor and receive their commissions. Sheriff T. J. Hill, of Lincoln county, was told by Auditor Hager that such settlements will be held up until the question is decided.

Boosts the Licenses.

Maysville, Ky.—Pursuant to the preconcerted plan of Kentucky mayors, the common council of this city ordered saloon licenses increased from $300 to $500, and druggists' liquor licenses from $150 to $500. The vote was unanimous. There are 22 saloons and five drug stores here, but only three of the latter sell liquor.

Which Shall It Be?

Louisville, Ky.—Brewers here are complaining that the increase in the price of malt and barley has so reduced their profits that they're making practically nothing, and either measure must go down or prices must go up.

FEAR OF DEATH

From Hydrophobia Preyed Upon Negro's Mind Until He Succumbed to Imaginary Ills.

A PUZZLE TO THE DOCTORS.

Calvin Rice, colored, who was bitten by a mad dog near Richwood, on December 4th, and who was treated at the Pasteur Institute, in Chicago, died at Walton, last Monday. He had not been getting along well for several days, and, of course, the report had gained circulation that he was suffering of hydrophobia, and the most sensational articles concerning the old man's condition appeared in the papers every day. The citizens for a considerable distance around were worked up to a high tension by the reports that were put in circulation about the patient's horrible suffering. Dr. Menefee, the attending physician, made a close study of the case and was unable to detect anything that lead him to believe the old man had hydrophobia. Several physicians were called in by Dr. Menefee for consultation, and it was agreed that Rice's trouble was other than hydrophobia. He was in bade shape, a fact recognized by the physicians, and Monday Dr. Menefee had his patient moved to Walton that he might be able to give him better attention, but shortly after arriving in Walton, Rice had one of the "spells" that had been puzzling the doctors, and in a short time he was dead. Rice complained there was something in his throat, and one night he inserted a tin dipper handle in an effort to dislodge the imaginary obstruction. Rice's trouble created great interest on the part of the doctors, besides opening up a fruitful field for speculation for other people.

VERY ENCOURAGING

Is the Outlook for the Tobacco Situation.

Don't Fail to Attend the Meeting at Burlington, January 6.

To the Tobacco Growers and Farmers of Boone county:

At the last meeting of the District Burley Tobacco Society at Winchester, Dec. 10th, after carefully canvassing the whole situation and discussing every face of the subject, for the best interest of the farmer—both landlord and tenant; it was the unanimous opinion of the whole Burley Tobacco belt (35 counties being represented,) to raise no tobacco in 1908.

The American Tobacco Co., who manufactures about 75 per cent of our burley tobacco, claim they have enough tobacco on hand with what they are getting from the dumper, to supply their wants, and could not use our pooled tobacco, of which we have of 1906 crop 65,000,000 pounds, and of 1907 crop 110,000,000 lbs., making 175,000,000 lbs. on hand, and of course, according to this statement, this much in excess of what is needed to supply the needs of our whole country, and if another crop is raised in 1908 will add another excess, and of course, make the farmers receive still less price for his labor.

Again, the A. S. of E. have with hard work pursuaded our banks and monied men to assist us in financing and putting in order the 1906 crop and we have carried this until now when the 1907 crop is ready to be cared for, and we again have to ask our friends and banks to assist us to finance it. They ask us, "Do you expect us to continue piling up our money in the tobacco, year after year? Do you propose to raise another crop with all this on hand?" and the factories tell you they do not want it and cannot use it—no business in that. The only solution to this is to cut out a crop and allow the factories to clean up and catch up, and the farmers to take his bearings. There is not a farmer in the whole belt that cannot, very profitably, use a whole year in fixing fence, filling washes, cutting briars, etc., and then in 1909 pitch all the tobacco crop you want to and sell direct to the manufacturer at profitable prices and continue for 10 to 15 years without having to make the fight again every year. If the farmers will insist on raising a crop of tobacco in 1908 it may cause all this pooled tobacco to be thrown on the market, and we at once fall to where we started (to starvation) prices which will be made by the trust,

We claim that we at Frankfort made peace with the American Tobacco Co., and our fight now is, the pooled farmer against the unpooled, and we as A. S. of E. farmers want to make a peace proposition to you who have not pooled with us, we want to put the great responsibility on your shoulders; we now appeal to you and to every tobacco grower and farmer in Boone county to meet us in Burlington in mass meeting January 6th, 1908, at 1 p. m., when we will make you the proposition, and we expect to have the best speaker in the state to entertain you.

I have just received notice calling District Burley Tobacco Society to meet the American Tobacco Co.'s buyer at Winchester, January 2, claiming they want our tobacco and are coming to do business with us, and I feel confident that when I come back I can make a report to you at Burlington, January 6, that will be very encouraging to all growers of tobacco, and I again appeal to every grower of tobacco and all who are interested in the welfare of her people in Boone county to make especial effort to meet with us in Burlington on January 6, as business of great importance will come before us.

J. C. HUGHES,

A WORD TO THE WISE.

Winchester, Ky., Dec. 25, 1907.

This Christmas is one of great joy to all of us. We have succeeded in forming an organization that is solid and effective. We have pooled, prized and sampled over 60,000,000 pounds of the 1906 crop. We have financed that crop, and now have it ready for the market. We have pooled at least 120,000 acres of the 1907 crop, and it will be rapidly put into condition and stored until it is proper to sell it. We have maintained law, order and public decency throughout our district, and have given to every citizen of the Commonwealth who obeys the law the advantage of the law, and have protected the insurance companies, who have protected us, better than was ever done in their history, since only two or three barns have burned in this entire district of fifty odd counties since our Society was formed. All of this is remarkable, and refutes the oft repeated predictions of those who wished us ill.

Our new Governor of Kentucky with happy inspiration called a conference between all parties interested in the production, sale, and manufacture of tobacco. Our district leaders responded, and met at Frankfort the representatives of the Trust, the warehouses, the independent manufacturers, and foreign governments. We laid before them the whole situation, hesitating to tell them nothing of our troubles and desires, and demanded equal frankness on their part. The results have been many. The Trust is aware that the feeling throughout the district is more intense than it had dreampt of. It is aware of the kind of causes that have produced it. It is aware of the strength of our organization. It is aware of our desire to do right, and deal justly with them as with all men. On our part, we have learned of good reasons for some of the past actions of the trust, which some of us doubtless have attributed to improper and antagonistic motives. We were informed that it was not opposed to our union; that it was not opposed to our price, and that it wanted to buy our tobacco. The second of January was also fixed as the day when Mr. R. K. Smith, Vice-President of the Trust, will come to Winchester and look at our samples for the purpose of buying tobacco, if we can get together, which both parties seem to think will be an easy thing to do.

The situation today is, we must, without fail, cut out the 1908 crop. It is imperative and must be done at once. The person who has refused heretofore to pool his tobacco, and to cut out next year's crop, has little or no excuse for continuing to refuse to do so. The high market price that the outsider has been receiving will immediately vanish when the American Tobacco Company supplies itself in this city on January second. It will be unfortunate for the outsiders, but they cannot expect us to show much grief when the price which we made for our own benefit, but which they have taken advantage of, and at the same time attempted to destroy, goes to pieces, and leaves them with the bag to hold. The only hope which the outsider has at present is to get into the pool as quickly as possible. The tendency now is to shut him out, but no action has as yet been taken, and if he acts quickly he may save himself. A word to the wise is sufficient.

Wishing you all a Happy New Year, in which tobacco worms will not trouble you, I am yours sincerely,

LUCIEN BECKNER,
Secretary Burley Tobacco Society.

This year has 366 days. The one day extra is given for the benefit of the old maids.

Last Wednesday was the quietest Christmas day experienced in Burlington for a long time.

The Masonic Lodge of Erlanger, had a nice lunch served after the annual election of officers, last Friday.

This winter has been open to the center, but don't flatter yourself that the remainder will be as agreeable.

Another year gone and the burdens or the pleasures of life, as the case may be, are shortened to that extent.

A Higher Health Level.

"I have reached a higher health level since I began using Dr. King's New Life Pills," writes Jacob Springer, of West Franklin, Maine. "They keep my stomach, liver and bowels working just right." If these pills disappoint you on trial, money will be refunded at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger, 25c.

While moving a pile of trash, last Friday morning, Willie Hughes uncovered a snake about 12 inches in length, and having the marks it was pronounced a spreading adder. Mr. Hughes battled the reptile and brought it up town where it was inspected by many. A lively snake on December 27th is unusual in this part of the country.

It Does The Business.

Mr. E. E. Chamberlain, of Clinton, Maine, says of Bucklen's Arnica Salve. "It does the business; I have used it for piles and it cured them. Used it for chapped hands and it cured them. Applied it to an old sore and it healed it without leaving a scar behind." 25c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

Uncle Sam's agents are exasperatingly slow sometimes, but they finally show up.

The wedding epidemic in Burlington has attracted the attention of the citizens of the surrounding territory to such an extent that very little else has been talked about over the neighborhood telephone lines, for several days, and, funny to relate, a young lady in Burlington went to the phone the other day and placed the receiver to her ear to ascertain if the line was in use, when she heard her name called. She listened a short time, when she was surprised to hear all about her approaching nuptials to the minutest detail. The person who was talking went on to enumerate other weddings in Burlington that are booked for the early future. The young lady who heard the conversation claims that everything she heard is news pure and simple to her.

Supt. Adams, of Grant, who is making his annual tour of the common schools, and writing up same for publication in the local papers, says of Mt. Zion school: "Elbert S. Ryle is the principal of the school; he holds a State certificate; hails from the county of Boone; has taught several years; and preserves good order in his room; he enrolls the fifth and advancing grades and does a great deal of high school work; there were 12 girls and 13 boys in this room on the day it was visited, but one short of the number enrolled; the pupils were quiet, orderly and at work; the interior of this room has a very inviting appearance; new shades of a light cream color hang over each window; the walls are decorated with several interesting and beautiful pictures; windows have been cleaned; the stoves polished; wreathes of forest foliage in the corners of the room, and the floor cleaned. Virginia Webb has charge of the primary department."

Williamstown, Ky., Dec. 26—Just fifty years ago last Monday H. C. White, the police Judge of this city and his good wife were married. They decided on that day they would celebrate the anniversary of the occasion in a fitting manner. A general invitation was sent to nearby relatives and friends to be present and assist in the celebration, while printed invitations were sent to those abroad. They responded in large numbers, and despite the fact that the Judge was unable to greet his visitors who had come from far and near to help make the occasion a happy one, on account of illness, but the day was not allowed to be spoiled on that account. The guests partook of the bountiful lunch that was spread for the occasion and departed late in the evening wishing the aged pair many happy returns of the day. Judge White is one of the oldest citizens of Williamstown, being now in his 78th year, and his good wife is 69. Eight children have been born to them, all of whom are still living. Among the guests from a distance who were present were, Mrs. Jennie Hanks, Covington; Miss Crawford, Louisville; H. B. Riddell, Covington; Lewis Northcutt, Walton; James White, Petersburg; W. V. Grant and family, Circleville, O.; Mrs. Anna Orr and family, Cincinnati; Miss Julietta White, Chicago, and Mrs. M. H. Stanhope, Lexington.

A petition with a long list of East Bend people's names attached, has been presented to County Judge P. E. Cason, requesting to him to have all the dogs, killed, muzzled or penned up. This is asked as a protection of the public against mad dogs.

John Baldon, the eleven year old brother of Callie Baldon, had a narrow escape from a very serious accident on Christmas day. He was using powder in his celebration, and poured a quantity out on a rock and applied a match, thinking he could get out of the way of the flash, which burnt him considerably about the face, involving one of his eyeballs, which is not seriously injured.

The peaceful army of A. S. of E., about 250 strong visited Rabbit Hash as per appointment, last week, and induced something like 100 growers to sign the pledge to raise no tobacco next year. Hons. J. W. Kennedy and J. C. Hughes addressed the crowd and considerable enthusiasm prevailed. A fine dinner was served and enjoyed by all. The army considers that it accomplished considerable by its visit. It was about the liviest day in the history of Rabbit Hash, and an occasion that will long be remembered by those who were present.

It is said that some of the growers in the neighborhood, who had sold but had not delivered their tobacco, to the Rising Sun buyer got a move on early in the day to get their tobacco across the river before the arrival of the army, and to say they hustled conveys only a faint idea of the rapidity with which they moved. Some tobacco that was not stripped was loaded on wagons and crossed to Rising Sun.

A strange black Shepherd dog with some white about it and supposed to be mad, created considerable excitement down on the East Bend road, last Monday. The animal was headed towards Burlington, and several armed with guns went out to meet it, but it did not put in its appearance, and what became of it is a mystery.

The Old Friend and the Hour

By Kate Masterson

ANOTHER year has found us just as we were getting comfortably used to the idea that summer had really gone.

Busy people never have time to dwell very much on the passing of the seasons.

The days are so full of tasks and Father Time is always catching up and getting ahead of us in spite of his advanced age.

It is always the same old story!

Spring surprises us with its blossoms and its bursting brooks and then summer has come and gone before we know it.

Very few of us stop to think that this swiftness of time in its passing indicates that we are really living rather than lolling through life.

It is only when the days hang upon our hands that we know how blessed are those other times when we have to make lists of the many things we have to do and get up early mornings to begin them.

Of course we are likely to complain that we get so little done, especially at this time, when the calendars tell us that another 365 days have become a part of yesterday's 7,000 years.

We look back regretfully and repine that we have so little to record in the way of achievement, beyond the mere act of living from day to day and from week to week.

But living in the right spirit, striving, if not always accomplishing and completing the tasks we set ourselves, is nothing to regret.

It comes near to that simple life that sounds so grand and inspiring when it is lived in the woods, but which is quite as fine when lived in a big city.

There is no doubt that when we try to set up standards of happiness and contentment and peace at the close of a year that has had its rifts of sunshine and its stretches of shade, that it is impossible to put wealth, or fame, or success, personal popularity, beauty or even health itself forward as the great, good thing that makes life worth living.

The thing that counts is the ability and the desire to feel an interest in things, in events and persons—in the game of life itself.

All the other blessings pall unless that interest remains. It is very closely akin to health for it is a part of youth, of vitality, of life.

It has become the general practice to speed the departure of the old year with every indication of rejoicing, welcoming in the new with acclaim and expressions of satisfaction.

It is natural and wholesome to look forward, but those of us who wish to include the brick of gratitude in the building of our characters should learn to omit our complaints of the luck the old year has brought us.

In truth, the new year will be to a great extent like the old—what we make it and how we take it.

Things will happen in accordance with the same laws that guide this big earth of which we are a small part.

So we can greet 1908 in a calm and happy manner, rather than with any manifestations of frenzied joy at its coming, and let us have the good manners to speed our parting guest, 1907, politely.

With all his faults we know him for what he was and the new year is as yet a stranger to us.

We can hope and believe that all good things will come with him, but let us avoid the hackneyed congratulation on the passing of a twelvemonth that probably treated us better than we deserved.

The dawning of another January is invariably the time for what are called "good resolutions," which translate themselves into rash promises, usually broken before the new year is well under way.

That was the old-fashioned way of expressing an inclination to reform one's bad habits and people kept on from youth to old age making these good resolutions every 31st of December, finding themselves each year further from perfection than ever.

Good resolutions are not so prevalent, or at least not so noisy as they used to be at this time.

They have become popular material for the comic papers and everybody knows what a joke they are.

Nevertheless, the close of a year is a capital time for a look back, a retrospect in which we can see the faults that are on the mend with us, or the ones that have persevered and grown stronger.

Maybe some new tendency has sprung up which does not promise well.

At all events if we are able to get a new view of our characters as though a searchlight had been thrown in on our souls, we are in a fair way to improve.

It is only when we blindly consider ourselves as right in everything that we are all wrong.

It is only when we blindly consider ourselves as right in everything that we are all wrong.

So if your look back shows you mistakes and errors and misbeliefs, be glad that the New Year gives you a clean slate to try for the right road and the true goal.

Be thankful for the mental perspective when you see it with clear sight—with new true eyes.

There is no need of making resolutions, for right seeing means right thinking and right thinking is the path to right living.

Perhaps your faults are those mean little ones which you would like to exchange in a bunch for one noble sin, but there are no exchanges of that sort or we should all be noble sinners.

The petty faults are the thorns that cluster round some of the finest roses in life's big garden, crowding, jarring, overtopping one another in their eagerness to get to the light.

Maybe the old year has been a good friend in some special instances that you can recall.

Perhaps it brought you back with a short, sharp shock from a too arrogant happiness or an overconfident success.

Be glad of that jar, even though it kept you stirred up for awhile.

Perhaps the past 12 months have healed some breach or brought some ship home, the white sails of which you have been watching wistfully for months or years far out at sea.

Perhaps some millstone has fallen from you and you stand free at last on the great highway with long, manacled arms reached out to the sky.

Be glad!

Or peace has settled on a troubled ocean and you can greet the sunrise with a smile and a prayer of thankfulness for another day.

Maybe there is a cradle in one corner of your home this New Year's eve with a most important guest cuddled in down blankets and rose-leaf palms upturned for your kisses.

No need to tell you to be glad.

Or success has come to crown some effort at which you have toiled rather wearily, hardly daring to hope.

Or if it has been withheld, be glad that you have nevertheless tried. It will all come to you some day.

The old year has taught us lessons.

Let us profit by them and enter into the new armed with experience rather than plunge into it as though it were a rose garden.

It is quite as full of danger and conflict and clouds as the old friend that is going.

Let us wish it will have even as much sunshine and gladness and joy.

We can meet it with splendid hope and lively faith—for those two qualities are what make our dreams come true.

Let us cherish a few good hopes that it may bring us the things we stand in need of—health, happiness, good friends success, joy and the clear vision that will teach us to discern the false from the true.

May it leave us our beliefs and our ideals.

Teach us to love more and to hate not at all.

To be content with the blessings that we have.

To cultivate sweetness and good nature rather than exclusiveness.

To meet the world with a smile.

To stifle criticism of things and people.

Never to make little of our own.

THE POOR OLD YEAR.

Hit Him Again. He's Got No Friends.

GOOD BY, OLD YEAR.

By Clifford Kane Stout.

Good-by, Old Year, your mission ends
With midnight chimes and all is done;
The records writ with joy or less,
The deeds fulfilled and guerdons won
Are hung as trophies round thy rime,
And thou are named with olden time.

Forevermore; oh, fateful past,
That saw so much no law can change;
Beginning and the end of things
That were to be, the new and strange,
The old and worn and bloom and blight,
Passed to the dark or born to light.

And, oh, for some happy year;
Sweet wedding bells rang joyously;
Old friends clasped hands and strangers met,
And sunshine fell so glad and free
On buoyant youth, and smiles were fair,
And laughter bantered pain and care.

Some tears must fall in every year;
Your portion came when grief had set
A badge of mourning on the hearts
Of some whose love could not forget,
And hopefully, without dismay,
They covered friends of yesterday.

Good-by, Old Year; we regret the New;
When we recall your gifts and cost
May then a double portion show
Thy favors won o'er which was lost.
Good-by! A hand at parting; then
A benediction and amen.

Little Jeffrey's New Year Luck

LITTLE Jeffrey was an orphan lad whose father was killed in a railroad accident when Jeffrey was a tiny baby in his mother's arms. And the mother had been made so ill by the sudden death of little Jeffrey's father that she was no longer able to care for her baby and a few months later she went to join the father and baby Jeffrey was left all alone in the world.

Then friendly neighbors who had too many babies of their own to find room for this little fatherless and motherless boy had him taken to an orphan asylum and he grew up with 50 other boys and girls who had no mother or father.

When Alice Lane came to the home she was eight years old. Her mother and father had died within a few weeks of one another and it was a sad-eyed little girl who crept about the big rooms of the home. Little Jeffrey had a big heart and he felt very sorry for Alice.

On the third day after her arrival he walked up to her and planting himself in front of her he said:

"Alice Lane, why do you cry so much? Why don't you play?"

He was such a funny, freckle-faced little fellow that Alice smiled a faint little smile. It was the first one since her mother's death. Then the tears came again and she sobbed:

"I want mamma, Jeffrey. I want papa, too, and my own home. This is big and lonesome and they don't love you like mamma and papa."

From that time on Alice and Jeffrey were the best of friends. He was such a cheerful little fellow and often so droll that many times Alice laughed in spite of herself.

But when Alice began to talk much of her home and her mamma and papa he began to wish for one, too. The wish grew and grew until at last he felt that there was nothing in the world that he wanted except a mother and a father and a home. When Christmas time came and the children wrote their wishes on a piece of paper one of the house mothers read in Jeffrey's: "Plea, I don't want nothing but a father and a mother and a home with flowers in the window."

From time to time children were taken from the orphans' home by people who had no children of their own. The house mother hoped so much that little Jeffery would be chosen and his wish granted. But the people who came passed by the eager little fellow who eyed each newcomer hopefully.

So Christmas day passed and Jeffrey received sweetmeats and warm clothing and an iron engine, but not the father and mother and home.

He cried himself to sleep that night and Alice had to turn comforter for the next few days.

"Mamma always said New Year's was the lucky day and maybe you'll get them then. And if you don't, then you will some other time, 'cause Mother Burns said she'd try."

On New Year's morning Jeffrey was awake early, and his first thought was:

"Maybe the mother'll come to-day."

A few hours later a very pretty woman dressed in velvet and furs followed by a tall man came to the home. Little Jeffrey looked up hopefully. But the woman seemed not to see the boys for her eyes were scanning the faces of the little girls. When she came to Alice she started.

"That's the one, Jerome," she said eagerly. "The same gentle face and blue eyes and golden hair. We must have her. It will seem like having our little Alice back again!"

When she learned the name of the little girl she had chosen she was still more interested.

"You would like to go home with me dear, wouldn't you?" she asked Alice.

"Yes, ma'am," answered Alice, "but I couldn't go without Jeffrey, 'cause he's been my friend and he wants a father and a mother so bad."

"Oh, but I don't want a little boy, dear. I just want one little girl to make it seem as though my own Alice were living," answered the lady.

"Then I can't come," said Alice, "unless they make me go."

For a few moments the man and woman talked together and the man seemed to see in little Jeffrey all the things that other people had missed. He saw the honest blue eyes, the firm mouth and the manly walk, and he saw years ahead when the same little boy might be his partner in business. Then he said to Jeffrey:

"We want a son, as well as a daughter. So we will take you home and give you a happy New Year."

"New Year's is the lucky day, isn't it?" answered Jeffrey, beaming into the faces of his new parents. And the smile won the lady's heart and she took him as gladly as she did Alice.

So Jeffrey found his father and mother and home and a sister all on a happy New Year's day.—Farmers' Review.

POVERTY IN ENGLISH CITIES.

Appalling State of Misery That is Unknown in America.

No country in the world exhibits so painfully and so publicly the squalor and suffering of the poor as England. There are slums in New York, but London is all slums. The misery of the poor and the vices to which the poor fly for an anodyne to misery, overflow the precincts of the East End and stain Mayfair. If selfishly bent, a man can escape the evidences of human suffering in an American city. The people of Fifth avenue might never know that there was such a thing as abject poverty if they did not see it in its least unfavorable aspect from a cab window while on their way to their country houses on Long Island or in New Jersey. But in London there is no escape. Base, brutalizing poverty sweeps along Park lane and gazes with sorrowful, cowardly eyes at the palaces of South African millionaires. It crowds the June morning parade of smart ladies in Bond street. It touts for cabs or needlessly sweeps crossings in front of the restaurants. It fills the Strand with drunkards and Piccadilly with prostitutes. It is to be seen in the squares of the fashionable neighborhoods where its presentment is drunken women asleep with their babies in their arms. England may be the richest country in the world, but London is a swamp of dreadful poverty. In degree the provincial cities are as bad. Who that has ever seen them can forget the palpable miseries of the poor of Edinburgh and Glasgow and Dublin?—American Magazine.

MARTYR TO HOME COOKING.

Wife Wanted Him to Eat It for Her Own Experience.

The first part of the dinner had gone off with quite surprising success, but when the young housewife put the dessert upon the table there seemed to be a halt in the proceedings. "I don't believe I'll take any of this, dear," her husband said. "You see, I've eaten so much, and you know, desserts aren't my strong point anyway."

"That's a delicate way of saying that they aren't mine," she pouted. "But you'll have to eat this one, anyway, for economy's sake, if for nothing else."

"Why?"

"Because"—this in a confessional tone—"it represents so much. I was hunting my cook books this afternoon for something that would especially please you, when I found this recipe. My first attempt was a dismal failure, the second only a little better, and—well—this is the sixth. If you don't take it I'll feel that all my experience has gone for nothing, to say nothing of the butter, eggs and—"

"I'm just waiting for my share," he announced in the tone of one determined to prove that marriage is not a failure.

Effect of Serving on Grand Jury.

"There is one sure way to get a man interested in the proceedings of the criminal courts," said the gray-headed man, "and that is to put him on a grand jury. Just let a man once serve the public in that capacity and thenceforward he becomes an indefatigable student of the criminal records. The result of his experience is, in a way, inevitable. Naturally any man with a spark of curiosity about him is anxious to know the outcome of the trials of the persons he has found indictments against. In following these cases through the various courts he acquires an interest in judicial proceedings that really never dies."—N. Y. Sun.

"When Dr. Creighton was bishop of London," he said, "he rode on a train one day with a small, meek curate.

"'You don't mind my smoking, I suppose?'

"The meek, pale little curate bowed and answered humbly:

"'Not if your lordship doesn't mind my being sick.'"

YOUNG MAN'S BRIGHT IDEA.

Some People, However, May See Selfishness in Suggestion.

The head of a certain Pittsburg manufacturing concern is an old gentleman who built up his business from nothing by his own dogged and persistent toil, and who has never felt that he could spare the time for a vacation. Not long ago, however, he decided that he was getting along in years, and that he was entitled to a rest. Calling his son into the library, he said:

"Tom, I've worked pretty hard for quite a while now and have done pretty well, so I have about decided to retire and turn the business over to you. What do you say?"

The young man pondered the situation gravely. Then a bright idea seemed to strike him. "Say, pop," he suggested, "how would it do for you to work a few years longer and then the two of us retire together?"—Harper's Weekly.

The Italian government has made a claim against Kentucky for $75,000, the value of tobacco belonging to that government and which was destroyed by "night riders" at Hopkinsville. This sum augmented by the cost of sending the militia to protect Hopkinsville from a repetition of the raid, the cost of the investigation by the fire marshall and a special term of the Christian co. Circuit Court, will show "night riders a decidedly expensive class of citizens.

Keep Breeding Ewes Vigorous In The Fall

Sheep men are generully under the impression that the condition of the ewes at the time of breeding has a marked influence on the succeeding crop of lambs. If ewes are in vigorous condition and improving in flesh, the prospects are thought to be favorable for the production of a large percentage of lambs. It is equally accepted that the condition of the ewes in the fall prior to going into winter quarters has an effect on the susceptibility of the flock to such diseases that are more or less prevalent during the winter season. It is certain that the ewes may be gotten into vigorous condition much more cheaply and easily in the early fall than at any time later, and it is equally true that a vigorous condition is the best preventive of disease.—Ex.

How to Preserve Shoes.

An excellent preservative of shoe leather is vaseline. If a small quantity be applied to new shoes it will soften the leather, and if enameled leather will keep it soft much longer than ordinarily and render it less liable to crack, says the New York Globe. If worn shoes are cleaned and blackened and then rubbed with the vaseline, their appearance and wearing qualities will be much improved. Have a box of oats handy when the shoes are taken off, remove all mud and dirt, lace or button them, fill half full with oats and stuff the tops with crumpled paper. When necessary to wear the shoes, empty them and they will be found to have kept their shape and will not be drawn if they were in the least damp when taken off.

A CRADED SCHOOL

Is Just What Burlington and the Surrounding Country Needs.

Rev. Edgar Riley's visit to Burlington, last week, was in the interest of a graded school which he hopes to be able to establish here to begin September 1, 1908. He will take pupils in the preparatory grades and put them through the high school branches. If he succeeds in securing the number of pupils he desires, he will be assisted by other well qualified teachers, whose services are already pledged to him.

The school Mr. Riley is proposing to establish here is just the kind that this part of the county needs, and it should receive a liberal encouragement from the country for miles around, as the day has come when good schools and good roads are about the most important institutions in any community, and by them the standing of the citizens as to intelligence and enterprise is estimated. The town of Burlington is particularly interested in the success of the school, as it would be of more local benefit than anything that could be introduced here. The territory upon which the school would depend for support has the pupils and the parents have the means with which to educate them, and unless they pull together and succeed in bringing a good school into their vicinity, it will cost hundreds of dollars more to educate their children than they anticipate. As a matter of economy a good school at home is at least seventy-five per cent cheaper than others, to say nothing about the satisfaction to parents of having their children at home all or a good part of the time. It is plain to any thinking parent that the dollars and cents a local school would save is a small part of the consideration in its favor.

At one time Burlington was an educational center, and a good school well patronized was in progress all the time, and there is not a single reason why these old conditions should not be restored, while, on the other hand, there are all kinds of reasons why a good graded school should be in progress here, and such will be the result if those directly interested in schools will grasp the present opportunity which to them may never come again.

Mr. Riley, who is trying to work up the schools, is a son of C. W. Riley, of Bullittsville, is well prepared for the work, is ambitious and energetic. He is no stranger to the people upon whom he would depend for patronage, and, being a young man, would work hard to give them value received for their money and make the school a success. The people of the county know Edgar Riley and his past career in his recommendation to them. Putting him at the head of your school is not like taking up a stranger, who is after your money only.

Now, if you are interested in a good school—one that will take your children through the higher branches, call at the RECORDER office and subscribe all you can to the article Mr. Riley left there.

Poultry and eggs are manufactured articles in the sense that they are made from the grain, roots, vegetables and milk raised on the farm and these foods may be looked on as chiefly raw materials, which naturally bring lower prices than the manufactured articles, so that the best way of getting all there is to be got out of farm crops is to convert them into finished products before we let them pass out of our hands. Grain and other crops have been cheap for years past; pigs, sheep and cattle go up and down, and most grades of them are "down" at present, but eggs and poultry rise and fall in price systematically with the seasons.—Inland Poultry Journal.

Good Roads In America.

America always realized the importance of good roads, but it is only within the past few years that practical work has been done to secure them. The advent of the road machine in the early 80's began the era of better roads, but in some sections the machine made roads are even worse than they were before. It was thought nothing more was necessary than smoothing the surface, lowering the edges of the road and working the dirt up into the middle. This looked all right and was good enough for a short time, but the absence of "bottom" caused the road to wear out rapidly and get into worse condition than before it was "worked." In the early 90's the good roads movement began taking definite shape in many sections which discarded the time-honored system of "working-out" road tax for the cash method and an improvement was immediately noted. Then came the advent of the stone crusher and the agitation for good roads, which has reached every part of the country. While plenty of frightful roads may now be found everywhere, state and government supervision has wrought wonderful changes. Every year several hundred miles of macadam road are built and twenty years from now ought to see America as famous for its good roads as France is now.

The United States Bureau of Agriculture is setting the pace in the construction of sample stretches of road in various parts of the country, and this is having a splendid effect.

Feeding Oats to Horses.

The weight of oats per bushel varies from 30 pounds to 50 and even 55 pounds in some of the western irrigated states. The Office of Experiment Stations notes an experiment on three pair of Percheron horses which were fed light and heavy oats. The practical results of this experiment seem to indicate that pound for pound, the light oats have nearly the same feeding value as the heavy oats. Although the heavy oats contain a higher percentage of protein, and carbohydrates and a less percentage of fiber than the light oats, it seems probable that the relative proportions of these constituents are such that they are more easily and thoroughly digested. It should be remembered that although the two grades are practically equal, pound for pound, they are not equal, quart for quart, and that in feeding by measure, as is usual, allowance should be made for heavy oats and a less portion given. Since oats are bought and sold by weight instead of measure, there seems to be no gain made in buying the heavy oats at an advanced price over the light oats.

Dairy Cows and Fertility.

The Department of Agriculture in its bulletin says that skim milk is worth from 15 to 25 cents per hundred pounds for feeding purposes on the farm. It is difficult to estimate the total feeding and fertilizing value of skim milk to the farmer. Without it less stock will be raised on the average farm. With less stock there will be less manure, and the fertility of the soil will decrease year by year until the land has reached such a stage of poverty that it will no longer produce profitable crops. Farmers should receive at least 25 cents per hundred pounds for skim milk sold from the farm. Even where that price is received, the average farmer does not invest an equal amount, as he should, in commercial fertilizers. When more stock is kept and the skim milk fed to it, the fertility taken by the crops is replaced and the land kept in proper condition. The farmer of the North Central States is learning this lesson. The price obtained for milk in these States is not as high as in the East, but the net profit seems to favor the western farmer, as he is able to produce milk more cheaply on account of the abundance of feed which can be raised on his fertile soil.

Large Crowd, Free Lunch and Splendid Music.

Everything Passed off Peacefully.

Henceforth Monday, January 6th, 1908, will be known as "Burley Tobacco Day" in Burlington, that day having been given a special place in history by the assembling of from 500 to 700 of Boone county's sturdy yeomanry to give expression of their determination to assist in the conquering of the tobacco trust, and to prevail upon many of their countymen to strengthen their cause by agreeing to raise no tobacco in 1908, the result of which will be the prolonging of the hard fight that is now on and seriously handicapping any future action of the pool it may deem proper to take on behalf of the growers.

It was indeed a great day with those who are fighting the tobacco trust, and the proceedings, Monday, revived the interest in this part of the county and many of the growers heretofore lukewarm are now enthusiastic Equity men and have signed the agreement to raise no tobacco in 1908.

Early in the forenoon the members of the Society of Equity began arriving in Burlington, each carrying a tobacco stick and having a tobacco leaf for a hat band. The largest delegation came from Walton and Richwood and was headed by the Walton brass band, which discoursed sweet music during the day. At noon a free lunch consisting of ham sandwiches and coffee was served in the street back of the court house. This was one of the big features of the occasion and was enjoyed by hundreds of people. About one o'clock the large crowd was concentrated in front of the court-house to listen to the music by the band which occupied the balcony over the portico. At the conclusion of the music it was announced that Hon. R. H. Elliston would speak in the circuit court room, to which place there was a general rush, and, in a few minutes, the spacious room was packed as never before, while scores were unable to get closer to the speaker than the top of the stairs.

When Mr. Elliston arose to begin his address he looked into the faces of several hundred intelligent farmers anxious to hear the message he bore, and for two hours they listened to his masterful effort, which was applauded at frequent intervals. The speaker realized the gravity of the occasion and appealed to his hearers, not as an assemblage of persons interested the in parcelling out of offices with fat salaries attached, but as an organization of the brains and muscle of the land bent on righting a wrong from which the individual members had long suffered. The attention given the speaker was intense throughout, and the arguments he adduced evidently caused many to come to the conclusion that the proper step is to raise no tobacco in 1908. There was nothing in Mr. Elliston's speech calculated to excite anyone to violence, or to suggest an excuse for any unlawful act in carrying out the aims and purposes of the society in the interest of which he spoke. The appreciative audience stimulated Mr. Elliston to one of the great efforts of his life, and at the conclusion of his speech the applause was tremendous.

Joseph C. Hughes, of Richwood, who has been an earnest worker in the Equity cause from its inception, followed Mr. Elliston in a brief speech, in which he explained to the audience much of the workings of the pool, and what the outlook for success is, and urged the growers to stand together on the proposition to pitch no crop in 1908.

At the conclusion of Mr. Hughes' speech all those in the audience who were in favor of not raising a crop of tobacco in 1908 were asked to stand up, and with three or four exceptions every man in the vast audience arose. When all were again seated, those who favored raising a 1908 crop were asked to stand up, and not a man got up. This test showed conclusively the feeling of the large crowd on the question, and after the meeting adjourned many signatures were secured to the "no tobacco agreement," which gives the opposition to a 1908 crop in this county great impetus, and the leading equity men will see that the work they did in Burlington last Monday will bring forth much fruit

The crowd in town was very large but decidedly orderly, and by four o'clock in the afternoon nearly everybody had gone home, many who came in the morning strong anti-equity men going home thoroughly converted, and having "signed."

Messrs. C. L. Griffith and Joseph C. Hughes, and others, who have devoted much time and labor to the equity movement in this county, were very much pleased with the results of last Monday's meeting, and went home delighted, while the members from the several "locals" considered the day one well spent, and regarded the question of a this year's crop as settled, which they believe will have a great bearing in bringing about a sale of the 1906 tobacco.

The Walton band rendered faithful service throughout the day, and the young men who compose the band deserve the thanks and the compliments of the public for their valuable contribution to the day's program.

ON THE TRAIL OF THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY

Ominous Muttering Now Heard in India

Calcutta, India.—It is serious ignorance of the world's big news to be unaware that there is at present in India a widespread sentiment of resentment, if not actual revolt, against Great Britain, which may at any time find sporadic expression in revolution. Great Britain, with the self-confidence of the strong, does not seem to be paying much attention to the matter, although some persons, recalling that this year marks the fiftieth anniversary of the mutiny, are nervously calling public attention to certain disturbing signs.

Anyone who gets as close to the natives as the missionary does—which is far closer than any other white man—knows that the foremost subject of thought and agitation among them is what they consider their wrongs at the hands of the government. They claim that they are being dealt with in high-handed and oppressive fashion; that they are denied anything approaching a proper measure of self-government; that the public offices are open to them in a decreasing degree, and that, in short, India is being ruled for the welfare of Great Britain, and not of India.

The "India for the Indians" Cry.

Now a fair-minded observer cannot by any means agree with all of the positions of the Indian agitators; nor can he withhold a great deal of admiration for the fairness and disinterestedness of the British officials. Nevertheless, he is bound to recognize the seriousness, not to say ominousness, of this "Swadeshi" or "India for the Indians" agitation. Without putting much credence in the talk of a national uprising against the white man's rule, (as one precaution, the native troops have never been permitted to serve artillery since the mutiny) it cannot be denied that the deep-flowing, ever-increasing and widely-manifested tide of India's national sentiment is worthy of most serious consideration.

In every city of the empire the "Swadeshi" signs may be seen in abundance on the stores of tradesmen who have pledged themselves to deal in India-made wares exclusively. This commercial and industrial side of the "Swadeshi" movement has a direct relation to the industrial teaching in mission schools. The native papers are full of "Swadeshi" talk; and it is not wholly absent from the praiseworthy national missionary organization which Indians have organized, the object being to further the evangelization by native Christians alone, unaided by foreigners. Furthermore, one frequently runs across "Swadeshi" mass meetings; I found one under way in College square here, with hundreds of students listening eagerly to the impassioned speeches. It was rather surprising that the Y. M. C. A student leaders were able to gather a crowd, fully half as large, only 50 yards away.

The oriental dearly loves intrigue and agitation; especially is this true of the Bengali "babus," or educated Bengalis, who are foremost in the "Swadeshi" movement. The Bengali, contemptuously declares the Briton, is an idle, boastful talker, and neither a fighter nor a worker. My own inquiries developed the repeated assurance, on the part of informed persons, that the "Swadeshi" movement has not, to any perceptible degree, at least, extended to the villages, which contain 90 per cent. of the native population. Bearing in mind the undoubted Christian revival which is to be found in some parts of India, and the potency of this new national movement, it is evident that mission work here is bound to take an added interest during the next few years.

Making Men of Outcasts.

Whatever tends to put the stamina of manhood into this people contributes indirectly to the missionary undertaking. For the first and last factor of Indian life is the caste system, which dooms the majority of the people to a lot esteemed lower than that of the cow. If it were not for this caste system, with its unbridgeable divisions, no foreign power could long control this nation of three hundred millions of people. This same spirit of "karma-kismet" fate, which leads a man to dull acceptance of his lot, rather than to a cherishing of the spirit of self-improvement and ambition which marks the westerner, keeps back the nation from development, so that its golden age is in the past. The greatest need of India is simply men.

As is well known, the converts of the missionaries have been chiefly from the lowest classes—those who are below caste, in fact, the outcasts, the sweepers. Having nothing to lose by accepting Christianity, thousands of these have embraced the gospel; and they are to-day entering the Christian church in large numbers. The motives of many are doubtless mixed, but they at least afford the missionary material on which to work. The material is not of the best, but it is human. Here, as in all heathen lands, it is to be borne in mind that the missionary is really after his converts' grandchildren; no missionary known to me expects to see a completely transformed and Christianized people come out of raw heathendom.

So he bears with the short-comings of his Christians. He laboriously tries to set them on their feet, and though they fall a hundred times from the ideals of self-respect and self-support, coming to him with the bland assurance, "You are my father and my mother; please help me," he does not lose heart. For he has ever before his eyes the spectacle of outcasts who have been made over into noble men and women by the power of the Christian religion.

How Sons Excel Fathers.

Undoubtedly the missionaries are transforming their people. One of the Methodist missionaries at Lucknow pointed out to me a young man belonging to their church, the youngest of three sons, whose father never earned more than eight rupees a month in his life. All the boys are products of the Methodist school One of them is secretary to the governor, and all are in government employ, winning their places in competitive examination, and the salary of the most poorly paid is 150 rupees a month, or 19 times that of his father This is the sort of thing that is being accomplished all over India.

The schools of India are the crowning glory of mission work; they are the mills of which manhood and womanhood is the finished product. Of a few of them I shall speak more in detail next week. In my final article upon India They are a distinct and powerful contribution to the forces which are creating a modern national consciousness in India.

One phase of missions to which the government contributes its support, financial and otherwise, is the industrial school work. The Indian is proverbially unprogressive and uninventive; the mission schools are teaching the manual arts and in modern fashion, so that new enterprises for the winning of the livelihood are being created and old ones revived.

For the Christians, be it understood, are practically a caste by themselves in most places. They are cast off by their families, friends and co-religionists; and it is necessary that some means of livelihood, not dependent upon neighborhood favor, be taught them. Thus industrial training has a most practical relation to missionary success; since not all, nor, in these days of great ingathering, a very large percentage of the native Christians can be employed by the missionaries in any capacity.

The powerful social leverage which is exerted by female education in a land where women are kept "behind the curtain," is almost incomprehensible to one accustomed to the liberty of the west, and to the equality of the sexes. The missionaries have far-sightedly set to work to make the very springs of India society Christian.

Physical hardships are more numerous for missionaries in India than for those in any oriental land. Cane to India in the hot season; some missionaries were cruel enough to gloat over this fact, for most travelers see India only in its daughtful "cool" season, and then wonder why anybody should complain of the climate. The missionaries have my sympathy; people who work as they do in a temperature ranging up to 150 degrees are not out for a pleasant time. Trying to accompany them on their rounds nearly finished me; hereafter I prefer to read about their labors in a book.

Accustomed though the American be to the plague as an occasional horror which never peeps in at one of our seaports, it is not congenial to go ranging about the native quarters of cities where the deaths from plague number more than 200 a day. Yet there lies the missionary's lot, and he will explain that very few white persons die from plague, although cholera exacts a heavy toll. Nobody seems to know just what the plague is; even the natives have come to a hazy realization of the fact that it is transmitted by some sort of dirt germ. Therefore, during plague season, many natives may be seen wearing shoes and sandals, to avoid cuts on their feet through which the plague might enter.

Snakes are a real peril in India. some 50,000 persons dying annually from snake bite. A certain missionary upon whom I called had a native nurse for each of his two little children; perhaps he thought I looked as if I regarded this as a missionary extravagance, for he explained that they dare not trust a child outdoors for a minute alone because of the danger from snakes. Altogether, missionary work in India is not an Edoenic experience—especially since at some place the missionaries labor for years without a convert. One British veteran has had only three converts in 15 years. At Benares the three strong missions average only two or three accessions a year.

REAL ESTATE MAN'S DREAM.

Buys Last Lot on Most Crowded Spot on Earth, But Hasn't Collateral.

"Speaking about the phenomenal value of real estate in the crowded parts of Manhattan island," said the real estate man, "I had a dream last night of a place where land was so valuable that it made land here seem like acreage property.

"This place was on an isthmus between the two hemispheres, a narrow strip of land that was the most crowded spot on earth. There was just one street along through this isthmus, and all creation that passed from one hemisphere to the other had to pass along this thoroughfare.

"Sure, this was a place to do business, if there ever was one, and by gracious there was a vacant lot on the great isthmus thoroughfare, just one vacant lot, with a sign stuck up: 'For Sale, to Close an Estate. Inquire of So-and-So.'

"And of course, I sort of sauntered into the office indicated on the sign right away, and I says to the man there:

"What are you asking for that lot down there at 22?' And he says:

"'A million dollars a front foot.'

"'How much is there of it?' I asked him, and he says:

"'Seventy feet,' and I says:

"'Well, I'll take it,' just like that, because I knew it was a bargain; never'd been offered at that price in the world, I knew, except to close an estate, and the only wonder to me was that somebody hadn't snapped it up before I came along.

"So I bought the only vacant lot on the great isthmus thoroughfare, and the man said he'd have the papers made out right away and I could drop in at 9 o'clock the next morning and pay the money and he'd hand over the deed; and then I went out and stood on the sidewalk and saw those wonderful multitudes of all the peoples of the earth, passing in those amazing processions; crowds that made the people passing on Broadway and Fifth avenue, New York, seem like the lines of stragglers working their way out along to some county fair; and then I goes down to that vacant lot at 22, my lot, and stands there and sees 'em go by from there, and pats myself on the back and says to myself.

"'Well, son, thank goodness, you've finally hit up on something that you're going to make something on; large money.'

"And I was congratulating myself like that, watching the people go by, when all of a sudden it struck me that 24 hours was a pretty short time for me to raise $70,000,000 in, with me a good ways from home; for this was a cash sale, you understand, cash on delivery of the deed, and I knew perfectly well that I'd find a string of men waiting in the office in the morning any one of them ready to snap this bargain if I wasn't there with the money, and I suppose it must have been worrying over how I was going to get the $70,000,000 together in that time that woke me up."—New York Sun.

The cattle industry of the state of Tamilpas is coming to the front. One stockman and commission man alone, Bartolo Rodriguez, shipped 48,000 head last year to Cuba and Yucatan, which amounted to $1,500,000. He has a fine ranch near the City of Tampico called Monte Alto, with 300 head of cows and bulls, costing about $500 a head, imported from the United States and Switzerland. Careful estimate made by the shippers to the north of Tampico places the total number of cattle and horses in that area at 2,000,000.—Mexican Herald.

HAS AIDED TRUSTS

REAL EFFECT OF REPUBLICAN PARTY'S POLICY.

Figures in National Platforms Conclusively Prove That the Democrats Are the Real Friends of the Taxpayers.

The two sides of the tariff issue must be considered in deciding whether the Democratic position, or the Republican, is for the best interest of the majority of the people. The Republican national convention declared in 1888: "We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection." In 1892, it said: "We re-affirm the American doctrine of protection." In 1896, it said: "We renew and emphasize our allegiance to the policy of protection as the bulwark of American industrial independence and the foundation of American development and prosperity." In 1900 it said: "We renew our faith in the policy of protection to American labor; in that policy our industries have been established, diversified and maintained. By protecting the home market competition has been stimulated and production cheapened." In 1904, it said: "Protection which guards and develops our industries is a cardinal policy of the Republican party. The measure of protection should always at least equal the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad. We insist upon the maintenance of the principle of protection, and, therefore, rates of duty should be readjusted only when conditions have so changed that the public interest demands their alteration." The same platform also said: "A Democratic tariff has always been followed by business adversity; a Republican tariff by business prosperity." The present panic, which is producing business adversity, shows that Republican platforms are not to be relied on when attempting to forecast the future, and the history of the panics since the war shows that the panic of 1872 was under a Republican administration, and a Republican tariff for protection. The panic of 1892-3 was in full blast before Mr. Cleveland was elected, and the United States treasury was left by the Harrison administration practically bankrupt. The semi-panic of 1901, when prices of commodities and of stocks and bonds rapidly declined and factories were closed or reduced their output, was under Republican auspices and the present high protective tariff. The present panic, perhaps the most disastrous in its consequences that ever occurred, has followed the boast that a Republican tariff has "always been followed by business prosperity." Such are the declarations of the Republican party, and the undesirable results of its tariff policy.

The Democratic position on the tariff in 1876 was: "We demand that all custom house taxation shall be only for revenue." In 1880: "A tariff for revenue only." In 1884: "The Democracy pledges itself to reduce taxation to the lowest limit consistent with due regard to the preservation of the faith of the nation to its creditors and pensioners." In 1888, the platform of 1884 was reaffirmed and further declared: "It is repugnant to the creed of Democracy that by such taxation the cost of the necessaries of life should be unjustifiably increased to all our people. Judged by Democratic principles the interests of the people are betrayed when by unnecessary taxation, trusts and combinations are permitted to exist, which, while unduly enriching the few that combine, rob the body of our citizens by depriving them of the benefits of natural competition. Every Democratic rule of governmental action is violated when through unnecessary taxation a vast sum of money, far beyond the needs of an economical administration, is drawn from the people and the channels of trade, and accumulated as a demoralizing surplus in the national treasury." In 1892: "We denounce the Republican protection as a fraud, a robbery of the great majority of the American people for the benefit of the few. We declare it to be a fundamental principle of the Democratic party that the federal government has no constitutional power to impose and collect tariff duties, except for the purpose of revenue only, and we demand that the collection of such taxes shall be limited to the necessities of the government when honestly and economically administered." In 1896: "We hold that tariff duties should be levied for purposes of revenue, such duties to be so adjusted as to operate equally throughout the country, and not discriminate between class or section, and that taxation should be limited by the needs of the government, honestly and economically administered. We denounce as disturbing to business the Republican threat to restore the McKinley law, which has twice been condemned by the people in national elections, and which, enacted under the false plea of protection to home industry, proved a prolific breeder of trusts and monopolies, enriched the few at the expense of the many, restricted trade and deprived the producers of the great American staples of access to their natural markets."

In 1900: "We condemn the Dingley tariff law as a trust-breeding measure, skilfully devised to give the few favors which they do not deserve and to place upon the many burdens which they should not bear." In 1904: "The Democratic party has been, and will continue to be, the consistent opponent of that class of tariff legislation by which certain interests have been permitted through congressional favor, to draw a heavy tribute from the American people. This monstrous perversion of those equal opportunities which our political institutions were established to secure has caused what may once have been infant industries to become the greatest combinations of capital that the world has ever known. These especial favorites of the government have, through trust methods, been converted into monopolies, thus bringing to an end domestic competition, which was the only alleged check upon the extravagant profits made possible by the protective system. These industrial combinations, led by the financial assistance they can give, now control the policy of the Republican party." That platform further declared: "We denounce protectionism as a robbery of the many to enrich the few, and we favor a tariff limited to the needs of the government, economically, effectively and constitutionally administered, and so levied as not to discriminate against any industry, class, or section to the end that the burdens of taxation shall be distributed as equally as possible. We favor a revision and a gradual reduction of the tariff by the friends of the masses and for the common weal, and not by the friends of its abuses, its extortions, and its discriminations, keeping in view the ultimate end of 'equality of burdens and equality of opportunities,' and the constitutional purpose of raising a revenue by taxation, to-wit, the support of the federal government in all its integrity and virility, but in simplicity."

These declarations of the Democracy show it favors tariff reform, because so-called protection has fostered the trusts which by high prices for their products have increased the cost of living over 50 per cent.

The Republican tariff policy has been to increase the tariff tax instead of reducing it and the leaders still refuse to revise even the most oppressive schedules. Speaker Cannon but a few days ago speaking to the Association of American Potters declared that the tariff tax on crockery should be increased.

The attempt of President Roosevelt to convict and punish the trusts for "restraining trade" has been a complete failure, and trust prices will remain exorbitant until the tariff is so revised as to produce competition from abroad, which will compel the trusts to reduce the price of their products or lose trade.

BOTHERED BY THE PANIC.

Official of Protective Tariff League in Hard Straits.

The treasurer and general secretary of the Protective Tariff league thinks "the changes in the Dingley tariff bill, for which the administration is responsible, have worked serious harm to the industries of this country and have cut down imports alarmingly." As the present tariff law was intended to prevent imports, and thus protect the trusts from competition from abroad, why this change of front on the part of its subsidized chieftain? He should be glad instead of regretting that imports are reduced The changes in the tariff law attributed to the administration are the Cuban treaty which reduced the tariff on sugar and other products 20 per cent. As sugar is the chief article of import from Cuba and still pays over 55 per cent ad valorem, to protect the sugar trust, which controls the home grown sugar, that reduction can hardly "work serious harm" to the sugar industry.

The German tariff trade agreement, which has been extended to France, Great Britain, Holland and Austria, and which prevents the over-valuation of the products of those countries, until such time as congress passes remedial legislation, can hardly "work serious harm to the industries of this country."

It is true the imports from Germany have largely increased under this agreement, but because our consumers can obtain cheaper German goods, upon which the tariff tax could be further reduced one-half to their great advantage, it is absurd to say this country is injured. The cheaper we can buy what we need the more it releases us from the thralldom of the trusts and combines. The Protective Tariff League is in a tight place on account of the panic and finds no way to creep out of it, except by laying the blame on those simple modifications of the tariff enumerated above. As the business depression, that will follow the panic, will reduce importations of foreign goods, as it will reduce the consumption of our home products from sheer inability of the people to purchase as much as they have been doing, the Protective Tariff league will soon see "serious harm to the industries of the country," although we have been assured by the Republican party that the tariff produces prosperity. Reduced consumption of luxuries has already set in and this will unfortunately be followed by reduced consumption of necessities by those who are thrown out of work by the closing of factories, for which the Republican policies of protection and financial legislation for the benefit of the few can be blamed.

If the Republican party could forego its campaign contributions from the trusts and protected interests, instead of standing pat, the American people would vastly benefit, but no such reform can be expected until the people see the way they are being plundered by the tariff and elect a Democratic congress pledged to reform its abuses.

The joy of the tars at the sailing of the battleships is going to be considerably subdued before the heads of Golden Gate catch the lookout's eyes.

WORSE THAN DEATH

SOLITARY CONFINEMENT A LINGERING AGONY.

Man Who Suffered for Eight Years Tells of the Tortures He Underwent in Italian Place of Punishment.

There has been much talk of late in France and elsewhere of the suppression of the death penalty. The guillotine is to go and solitary confinement is to take its place. There is a man in Paris who knows what the punishment of solitary confinement really means, and it will be of interest, says the London Evening Standard, to hear what Amicare Cipriani, who has undergone the punishment in Italy, has to say about it. Cipriani, the king-hater, is an old man now. He lives in Paris, where his gaunt face and long beard are as well known on the boulevards as the Theater des Variétés itself. He was at one time Zanardelli was minister of justice to 25 years' solitary confinement, and he recalls the phrase that Sig. Zanardelli uttered in the Italian parliament to reassure those members of it who thought that the guillotine should not be done away with. "We are abolishing the death penalty," he said, "but in its place we shall give criminals a punishment which will make them long for it."

"And he spoke the truth," says M. Cipriani, "for solitary confinement is a thousand times more cruel than a blow from an ax and a leap into eternity. Solitary confinement in a cell is a lingering agony, after two or three years of which the strongest man must die or must go mad. He is literally buried alive. His food is just enough to keep life in him. He may neither read nor write and gets no news from outside, even of his family. He may receive no visits and have no intercourse with anybody. He may not talk, and if he does ask a question of one of his jailers the jailer does not answer or answers by a sign. He never leaves his cell except for the madhouse or the cemetery. He sees nobody and hears no human voice. He does not even see a doctor if he is ill. If he breaks into open revolt his jailers may do what they like with him. They may kill him if they wish, and in Italy they often do so. No one has ever yet lived and remained sane for ten whole years of this terrific punishment.

"No one except myself has ever, as I did, remained sane after eight of them. I shall never forget it. I was in mental and physical anguish day and night for eight years, during which time I was chained by one leg to the wall. The worst of my torture was the feeling that brain, will, strength and health were disappearing. I felt death creeping on me and had no power to struggle. There was not a human being who would help me with a smile or with a friendly word, and death or madness seemed inevitable.

"I often wonder how I came to be spared death or madness. The happiest prisoners are certainly those who do go mad. Passanante, who attempted to murder King Humbert of Italy, has been in a madhouse for 27 years. I am the only man who has resisted solitary confinement, the only man who has not gone mad in it after a few years. My method was a constant mental struggle, a sort of intellectual gymnastics, by means of which I kept my thoughts off by abominable solitude. I lost all notion of time, of course, and I remember asking my jailer one day what the year was. He would not tell me, but next day as he was putting down my jug of water he muttered '1886.' I had been in prison five years and believed I had 20 more to serve."

Why He Did Not Stop.

With the opening of the new Union station in Washington the desire to have a similar building in Baltimore rises in the breasts of a number of the inhabitants of the Monumental City. One gentleman who feels very acutely upon the subject was discussing the matter at other days and told this story to illustrate his point:

"Last summer, while abroad, I met a very pleasant Englishman, and hearing that he was planning a visit to the United States I invited him to stop off at Baltimore and visit me if he should happen to be passing through at any time. The other day I met him in New York and he told me he had just arrived there, coming from Washington.

"'Why didn't you stop in Baltimore?' I asked.

"'Well, I did,' was the answer. 'I got off the train, but, judging by the surroundings, I was afraid I would have to take a stage into the city, and I did not feel that I had time for that.'"

How to Keep Warm in Winter.

The clothiers intend to keep women warm if one may judge from the many new "protectors" on the underwear counters.

Separate knit sleeves at the knit underwear departments are among them. Then, too, there are Shetland vests with or without sleeves that give a maximum of warmth with a minimum of bulk, and union suits of the same gauzy wool. Bloomers of satin, mohair or sateen, some lined with albatross, are in the same category, being snug extras for wet or bitter weather. These bloomers for wet weather for the woman who is out at all times and seasons are ideal, since they take the place of a skirt and a damp hem about the feet.

A RIGHTEOUS JUDGE

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

Scripture Authority — 1 Kings 3: 16-28.

SERMONETTE.

"And they feared the king; for they saw that the wisdom of God was in him, to do judgment."—The surest pathway to power over the hearts of men is that which runs parallel to the Divine will and purpose.

Power over men which finds its source in God is first pure, next unselfish, and lastly uplifting.

There is power of men over men and there is power from God over men.

The first finds its source in human ambition; the second comes from union with God.

There is no grander privilege or greater responsibility than that of power over one's fellows, if the source and inspiration of such power rests in God.

Solomon because of his natural gifts, the resources at his command and the station which he occupied had great power over men, a power which he might have used wholly for selfish ends.

But into the devout heart of the young king there came a realization of a higher power to which even a king must bow, and in a sublime spirit of modesty and genuine humility he puts a true estimate on the limitations of human attainments and abilities, and sees in the unlimited resources of God the complement of all human endeavor.

Men in power are feared by the people, either for the evil or the good which they may do. If evil, then a fear inspired by distrust and a sense of injustice. If good, then a fear born of an appreciation of that righteousness and justice which operates to the benefit and blessing of all alike.

As in the days of Solomon, so is it true to-day, that men are quick to recognize the qualities of genuine goodness in those who are an authority.

And notice, it is the simple, common incidents of life which reveal the true qualities of a man. Have you not often wondered why so ordinary an incident was chosen by the inspired writer of the book to prove the wisdom of Solomon? There must have been a multitude of incidents more striking and more profound, but out of all, this story of the two harlots and their offspring is chosen. And yet what did it reveal to the people as perhaps no other incident could have done? First of all, that wisdom born of God is not so high or so mighty as to be above the commonest things of life, nor so exclusive as to shut out the weakest and meanest and lowest of God's creatures from share in his righteousness and justice. And in the next place, that wisdom from God goes deeper than mere external evidence, touching the very mainsprings of life, and revealing what the deceitful heart is striving to cover up. Truly, the "foolishness of God is wiser than men; and the weakness of God is stronger than men."

THE STORY.

"BEGONE! Thinkest thou that the king hath time for such as ye?" and as he spoke the gate keeper thrust back the two women who sought entrance to the palace. With a look of pain and disappointment they slunk back into the shadow of the gateway, and watched with envious eyes the groups of people passing to and fro through the gate. Their garb proclaimed them as belonging to the poorer class, and the certain conditions of dress and bearing indicated plainly their character and the questionable manner of their life, and had not the gate keeper been busy with the constant stream of people passing in and out of the palace grounds he might have been curious to know what could have brought them thither. And while they made no further attempt to enter, they lingered near, offering striking contrast to the important-looking officials who found such ready entrance to the palace.

It was during the early part of King Solomon's reign that our story opens, and king and leaders from all over the land were busy effecting that organization which later became the marvel of nations far and near. With clever foresight he picked leaders from all over the realm and gave into their hands the administration of the kingdom, so that no place was so distant but that it felt the impress and stimulus of the energetic young king. Once a year these leaders and the other officers of the kingdom assembled at Jerusalem to report to the king, and it was at such a time as this that these two women had appeared at the palace pleading that they might see the king.

The rough words and treatment of the gatekeeper caught the notice of one of the officials as he was entering, and he paused after passing within the gateway to look back and observe the women who had thus been so harshly repulsed. Something in the expression on the face of one of the women aroused his curiosity and he retraced his steps to her side and inquired of her what she desired.

Scarcely had she begun to speak when the other broke in with her story and he soon saw that it was some sort of a controversy between the two over the little babe which one woman carried upon her bosom, and upon which the other woman ceased not for a moment to keep her eyes. The humorous side of the situation appealed to the official, and after lingering a few moments and failing to obtain anything save a superficial understanding of the matter, he turned, and with an amused expression on his face he again entered the palace courtyard and was soon mingling with the [illegible] of men who assembled in the king's audience hall.

The king had not yet ascended his throne, and the buzz of conversation filled the great hall as the officials talked of the various matters which were to be brought before the king.

As the last comer entered and joined himself to a group standing not far from the throne he was greeted with the inquiry:

"And what errand brings you thither?"

And then one of the group, noticing the half-amused expression which had not yet left his face, spoke up and said:

And thus challenged, the man addressed went on with great gusto to relate the incident which had just transpired at the outer gate.

"It was not quite clear to me whether or not the women purposed to present the king with the babe, and each was contending for the honor of so doing."

"And to think that they should suppose that the king had time or thought for such as they or for matters such as might come between them."

The words of the last speaker were spoken with a rising inflection, showing the contempt which he felt at so absurd a proposition, and during the momentary hush which had fallen they rang out clear and distinct, so that the king, entering at that moment, overheard what was said.

Instantly upon the appearance of the king there was a bush, and everything else was forgotten in the formalities of receiving and paying homage to their lord.

For some moments after the formal ceremonies were over the young king remained silent, thoughtfully contemplating the assembly of the chief men before him.

"What think you," he asked at length, "is the most important matter to come before us? Is the kingdom greater than the rights of the individual?"

Puzzled by the words of the king the officials before him remained silent. And again the king spoke.

"Should not the king have time for any who desire judgment rendered?"

Again there was silence. Then, turning his eyes upon the official who was speaking when he entered, he asked:

"And who is it that is beneath the thought of the king?"

In great confusion and trepidation the man mumbled something, and then Nahshon, grasping the trend of the king's mind and heart, boldly stepped forward and recounted with no spirit of ridicule, now, the story of the two women who had been waiting at the gate that morning.

"We shall do nothing this day until the case of these two women is heard," ejaculated the king.

Instantly one of the king's close advisers stepped to his side and whispered in his ear something at which the king impatiently shook his head and exclaimed, so that all in the room heard:

"What if they are? Have not even the harlots need of the righteous judgment of the king?"

And then turning to one of the messengers standing near he commanded the women to be sought out and brought in forthwith.

Had ever such a thing come to pass before in Israel, the chief men asked themselves that day as they left the audience chamber and departed for the different portions of the king dom? Surely the wisdom and justice of God rested on their king that even the lowest and most despised should be able to come to him and find help.

And everywhere throughout the kingdom the story spread of the two women and the disputed babe, and the judgment which the king had judged; and all Israel feared the king; for they saw that the wisdom of God was in him to do judgment.

His Rat Trap.

Omaha has a youngster who is an amateur electrician, and who has a very ingenious way of killing rats. The prying rodent is caught in an ordinary trap, the bottom of which is covered with tin. The Omaha boy has a small dynamo of his own manufacture and one wire connecting with the dynamo is fastened to the tin lining of the trap and another is thrust into the prisoner's cell. The well known propensity of a caged rat to do battle asserts itself, and he seizes the wire between his teeth, in so doing he makes the mistake of his life. The circuit is complete, his jaws close on the wire with a death grip, and without a squeak, and almost without a quiver, he passes into a state where he will bother mankind no more.

AVOID GROWING OLD

SOME VERY INTERESTING AND VALUABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Prof. Naunyn of the University of Strausburg Tells How Vigor May Be Retained Far Into the Autumn of Life.

Although the only way to avoid growing old is to die young, and, although most people are willing and anxious to live as long as possible, the approach or arrival of old age is generally regarded with a degree of apprehension which goes much beyond the need, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. Those who are still young or middle-aged are apt to think of the time when they shall be old with a feeling not far removed from dread. They recall the infirmities by which old age is attended and they look forward to the season by which the close of life is normally preceded as one of suffering and deprivation. It may be questioned whether the average experience confirms this anticipation. Each stake of our human existence has pleasures of its own and the condition of the aged, a category to which, by the way, very few are willing to admit belonging, is not without its compensations. Old age is not, as some seem to think, a disease. It is a state as natural as any other and if only its limitations and requirements are respected it can be made productive of much profit and enjoyment.

If this is to be done, however, the health must be maintained, and upon this point Prof. E. Naunyn of the University of Strasburg in a recently published article contributes some interesting and valuable suggestions. The first thing he says is what many others have said before him, that the old man not only does not need to eat, but positively must not eat, so much as the young one. He should consume at least one-fifth less in order that his organs may not be subjected to an unnecessary strain. Similarly with drinking. Fluids should be sparingly absorbed and they should be judiciously selected. Milk is not recommended, because it is apt to disturb the digestion.

Meat to the extent of about five ounces daily can be eaten to advantage, with the customary addition of vegetables, which are highly beneficial in their operation. The doctor believes in a substantial breakfast, but does not approve of a late dinner, thinks that the principal meal should be taken in the middle of the day, five or six hours after breakfast, and that it should be followed by an hour of rest, but not of sleep. The fat which most people tend to accumulate as they get along in life is pronounced undesirable, and the advice is given that it be abated by eating less and by exercise. For the latter purpose walking is recommended, but it must be brisk walking, involving some exertion, and not a mere saunter. As the beart is the weak point with the aged, care must be taken never to subject it to a needless strain.

One piece of advice is out of the common, but is certainly judicious. It is that old people should not allow themselves to get into much of a rut. They should allow themselves a change both in diet and in other directions and keep in touch with the course of events. To lose one's interest in "the passing show" is to hasten the end.

The Limit.

VIRGINIA MERCHANT RID OF A VERY BIG GRAVEL STONE.

Another Remarkable Cure of Serious Kidney Trouble.

C. L. Wood, a prominent merchant of Fentress, Norfolk Co., Va., was suffering some months ago with frequent attacks of hard pain in the back, kidneys and bladder and the kidney secretions were irregularly scanty or profuse. Medical treatment failed to cure him. "At last," says Mr. Wood, "I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, and before one box was gone, I went through four days of intense pain, finally passing a stone, one-half by five-sixteenths of an inch in diameter. I haven't had a sign of kidney trouble since."

DOCTOR SAID "USE CUTICURA"

In Bad Case of Eczema on Child—Disease Had Reached a Fearful State—His Order Resulted in Complete Cure.

"When I was small I was troubled with eczema for about three months. It was all over my face and covered nearly all of my head. It reached such a state that it was just a large scab all over, and the pain and itching were terrible. I doctored with an able physician for some time and was then advised by him to use the Cuticura Remedies which I did and I was entirely cured. I have not been bothered with it since. I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment but do not know exactly how much was used to complete the cure. I can safely say that Cuticura did a lot for me. Coal Dealer Understood When Told What Load Represented.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in one of the last addresses that he made to his Sunday school class before abandoning it, said of carefulness in business:

"Too many business men are careful on one side, their own side, only. Thus a coal dealer whom I used to know shouted one afternoon to an employe who was driving out of the yard:

"'Hold on there, Jim! That coal can't have been weighed. It looks a trifle large for a ton to me.'

"Jim shouted back:

"'This ain't a ton, boss. It's two ton.'

"'Oh, all right,' said the dealer, in a modified tone. 'Beg your pardon; go ahead.'"

Why Sloan's Liniment and Veterinary Remedies Are the Best to Use.

Let me tell you why Sloan's Liniment and Veterinary Remedies are the safest and most practical on the market to-day. In the first place, Dr. Earl S. Sloan is the son of a veterinary surgeon, and from his earliest infancy he was associated with horses.

He bought and sold horses while yet very young. He practiced as a veterinary for 20 years and has battled successfully with every disease to which that animal is subject.

All his remedies are the result of experiments made to save life or relieve suffering while he was practicing his profession.

Any reader, by writing to Dr. Earl S. Sloan, 615 Albany Street, Boston, Mass., will receive "Sloan's Treatise on the Horse," free. This book tells how to treat horses, cattle, hogs, and poultry.

ENDED THE BIBLE READING.

Beginner Resented Wife's Enjoyment of His Mistake.

A Kansas City man, who had followed stock quotations, football scores and race form sheets more closely than he had religious and literary matters, recently was persuaded by his wife to read aloud each evening from the Old Testament to improve the knowledge of both on Biblical matters. The man became interested in the story of the scriptures and read aloud several evenings with great gusto and pleasure. One night as he was swinging along he read: "And they horse-whipped the beasts."

"They horse-whipped the beasts," he repeated, and continued reading. His wife got up from her sewing, crossed the room, looked over his shoulder and read:

"'They worshiped the beasts.'

"'There,' she said, 'I knew the word horse-whipped was not in the Bible. He! He!'

The man closed the Bible with a snap, clasped the snap, and that concluded the readings for all time.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

For Sale—No. 1 cow and calf.—Apply to J. F. Blyth.

The law makes it the duty of the sheriff to kill all dogs on which the tax is not paid.

Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Carroll, of Walton, were Monday and Tuesday guests at B. B. Hume's.

C. C. Roberts is spending considerable time helping J. H. Rogers, near Walton, gather a crop of very fine corn.

It looks like the Kentucky "night rider" trouble will have to be referred to President Roosevelt for settlement.

Mr. and Mrs. Hayes Miller and sons, of Big Bone, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Hume, a few days last.

The Taft forces knocked the Forraker following into the soup in Ohio at the State committee meeting held last Thursday.

Congressman Dixon, of Indiana, has introduced a bill in Congress to remove the duty on wood-pulp. The stand patters will not allow it to become a law.

All the State offices at Frankfort are now presided over by Republicans, and a better pleased set of fellows can not be found in the old Commonwealth.

Senator Foraker is making slow time in his race for the presidential nomination, and his neighbor Taft has the laugh on him so far and the President is delighted.

Judge Lassing has sold his farm down on Woolper, known as the Elzie Bruce farm, to Bart Aylor, of Hebron. Mr. Aylor is a fine gentleman and he and his family will be welcome comers to that neighborhood.

Mr. and Mrs. William Hedges gave an old fashioned cotillion party in honor of their son Clifford, last Friday night, at their Gunpowder hill-top home. A large crowd of young people attended and had a delightful time.

The local K. of P. lodge conferred the soup degree last Saturday night. Among the brethren from a distance was T. W. Campbell, of Latonia, who, in that degree, is one of the best posted and most proficient members of the order.

The list of unpaid taxes for which tax warrants are issued in this county, is short, and is confined largely to nonresidents. People are becoming accustomed to paying their taxes and saving the penalties and costs, and they find considerable is saved by so doing.

Although 1907 will go down in history as a panic year, the close finds conditions better than they were at the opening, in spite of the great stress and strain to which the financial institutions were subjected. The outlook seems good for the new year.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Russellville, Logan county, received the attention of the "night riders," last Thursday night. A couple of independent tobacco concerns were reduced to ashes and two or three citizens shot but not fatally. It will take Kentucky a long time to recover from the reputation the "night riders" have given her.

So far this winter there has not been the usual rain fall notwithstanding the very great number of cloudy days The water courses are sluggish for this time of the year, and unless the precipitation from now on is very much increased this part of the country will not be in good condition to stand dry weather next summer.

The present school law in this State will be attacked all along the line by the legislature which convened yesterday. Every legislature since the war has tinkered with the school law, and it has been improved in some respects, but, in the main the law has not been bettered, the law making bodies of the last few years having been inadequate to cope with the question or failing to give it proper attention. Kentucky needs a better school system, but where is the Solon equal to the task?

About the time the people begin to understand the laws and become reconciled to them, the legislature, always a very uncertain body, meets and gives the statutes a general overhauling, and as a result the masses are, in total ignorance of the greater portion of the laws under which they live. Keep an eye on the present legislature and see what it will do for the acts of its predecessor. No doubt you concur with the RECORDER in its belief that for the good of the country there is too much legislation, both State and national.

Following is the law in regard to mad dogs in this State:

"A justice of the peace, on proof that any dog is mad, or has been bitten by a mad dog, or has killed or wounded any sheep, shall order such dog to be killed; and the officer who executes the order shall be paid one dollar by the owner of the dog and collected as costs. If any person shall conceal a dog so ordered to be killed, or prevent the execution of the order, he shall be fined $5 for every day he shall so offend. Any mad dog or dogs having the disease known as the "rabies" may be killed by any person."

Local News.

C. A. Fowler is visiting in Athens, Ohio.

Don't forget to keep a close watch on your dog.

Mrs. L. A. Conner was quite ill several days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Callie Baldon entertained one night last week.

The several bank statements consume considerable space this week.

Hunters are not so numerous in the fields as they were several days ago.

The North Kentucky Medical Association will meet at Walton tomorrow.

Johnnie Scothorn, the popular Sand Run mail carrier, was in town one day last week.

So far there has been no bad weather on the wheat; and it is looking tolerably well.

The madcog scare has not reduced the number of dogs to any appreceable degree.

Misses Jonette and Patilo Revill and Shirley Tolin returned to school at Georgetown, last Monday.

Bert Rouse is making elaborate arrangements for a leap year party at his castle out on the Florence pike.

B. F. Crisler, of Gunpowder, was over, last Thursday, and had his subscription pushed up another notch.

Mr. Oscar Gaines and daughters entertained quite a number of their friends with an elegant dinner on New Year's day.

The first days of the new year were all that could have been desired in the way of weather. The year made a very pretty start.

Plows will be put in motion at the earliest possible day, and from now on the farmers attention will be turned towards his 1908 crops.

Leslie Clark, of Point Pleasant neighborhood, made the RECORDER a a pleasant call, last Friday. He is now one of its numerous family.

That jolly little fellow, Chas. Garnett, of Limaburg neck o'woods was in town Friday and added another Garnett name to the subscription list.

Mrs. Anna Kirkpatrick and daughter, Miss Olga, had a few of their friends to partake of an elegant dinner with them on the first day of the year.

Johnnie Cloud, of Hebron, secretary of the Hebron Creamery Association, was in Burlington, last Friday, and left an order for a lot of printing for his association.

Orders for job work have been coming in pretty lively, this year. Don't wait until the last minute to place your order. Remember there are others whose work may be ordered first, which will, of course, delay yours.

G. M. Riley, many years ago the assessor of this county, and who moved to Dayton, Ohio, a few years ago, has been enjoying himself for several days visiting his old friends and neighbors in the north part of this county.

Big time at Limaburg, last Thursday night. The Gunpowder colored orchestra was there and made some delightful music for the large crowd that gathered. Will Garnett's graphiaphone contributed to the evening's entertainment.

The supervisors of tax, Geo. E. McGlason, of Bullittsville precinct; H. H. Grant, of Petersburg; James Hind, of Verona; J. L. Jones, of Big Bone; J. W. Conner, of Union, are in session at the court house, having commenced their work last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Cropper, of Louisville, had as their Christmas guests, Mrs. Cropper's brother, Edwin H. Gaines and wife, of Chicago, and her mother, and sister, Miss Elizabeth Gaines and Miss Allie Lee Gaines. They enjoyed themselves to the full measure of "a family reunion."

The turnpike fever was so prevaleut among the farmers along the East Bend road, last winter, has not made its appearance as yet this winter, and some predict that the people will not have another attack of the fever in many years. No persons use the East Bend road more than those through whose lands it passes, and if they are disposed to not improve it, people will seldom use the thoroughfare should not object.

A CARD.

To all who have relatives here in the Howlett cemetery, come forth and clean it up and put a mark at the graves if it is only a limestone rock, and, if not, come and move the graves some where else. It hasn't been cleaned off since Mr. Howlett's death, except what I have done myself. It is growing up in weeds and briars and myrtle.

Respectfully,
MRS. F. H. HOWLETT.

After having been annoyed several days by two tramps, one white and the other colored, the Constance people organized and went to the house in which they were quartered across Dry Creek above town, one night last week, and put them to flight, and then demolished the old house, which is said to have been the oldest building for many miles around, having been built considerably over a century ago. There is no locality in Boone county, the citizens of which are annoyed by tramps more than those of Constance.

C. S. Chambers, of Walton, this county, Supervisor of Penmanship in Covington public schools, and President of the National Penmanship's Association in session in Pittsburg, Penn., last week, was presented a gold mounted cane by the members of the Association in appreciation of the high esteem which they bear for him and his faithful work in bringing about the largest meeting ever held since the organization of the Association 30 years ago. Mr. B. G. Healey, editor of Penman's Art Journal, New York City, made the presentation speech. Mr. Chambers made a short speech accepting the token of esteem.

DENTIST

Will be at Burlington on Monday of each week; Union on Saturday, balance of time at my office over Farmers and Mechanics Bank.

Phone, S. 2365. LUDLOW, KY.

The Union correspondence came in too late to be handled this week, while each of the others were necessarily cut down more or less.

Dr. Jesse Talbott, grandson of the late Cave Clore, of this county, died of heart disease at his home in Crawfordsville, Indiana, last Sunday.

W. W. Mills, of Covington; Dr. O. E. Senior, of Union; Dr. n. A. Williamson, of Bellevue, and Dr. A. A. Murat, of Constance, were among the visitors to Burlington, yesterday.

This office has been badly balled up for the last two weeks. The first of January always brings a flood of matter for publication, but this year it was unusually large. The best possible is being done.

Elbert L. Riley, of Dayton, Ohio, came down, last Friday, to spend a few days with his and his wife's relatives in this county. He is looking extremely well, but his wife has been a great sufferer of rheumatism for several months. She is some better now, being able to go about her room on crutches.

Mrs. Nellie Markland and son, Graham, have just returned from a delightful visit of five days in Brownstown, Ind., where they were most graciously entertained by Mrs. Sallie Hayes and daughter, Miss Annie, formerly of Francesville, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cribb and family. Truly kind hospitality manifests itself wherever Kentuckians reside, and the warm reception with which the visitors were received by the good people of Brownstown, shows the high esteem in which the Hayes family is held in their adopted city.

Respectfully,
NELLIE M. MARKLAND.

Mr. George Craven, of Hebron, sends for publication the following receips which he cliped from a medical publication, and says it was never known to fail to cure:

CURE FOR HYDROPHOBIA.

First dose for a person—One and a half ounces of Elecampane root bruised, put in a pint of new milk, reduce to one-half by boiling. Strain and take one dose in morning, eating nothing until afternoon. Second dose—2 ounces of the root; third dose same as second—take every other day. This has never been known to fail to cure given before the paroxysm come on. The three doses are all that are necessary. Dose for horse or cow about four times that of a person.

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God in His wisdom to remove from our midst our brother, G. G. Hoover, by death, therefore be it

Resolved, That by his death the lodge has lost a faithful and consistent member of the order.

Resolved, That the community will miss him as a good citizen and a upright and honest man.

Resolved, That the Lodge extends its sympathy to his bereaved family in their bereavement.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and a copy to the Boone County RECORDER for publication.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread on the minutes of the Lodge in his memory.

Resolved, That the Lodge be draped in memory and that the members wear the usual badge for 30 days.

Committee—E. G. Rouse, C. F. Blankenbeker, L. E. Thompson.

It Does The Business.

Mr. E. E. Chamberlain, of Clinton, Maine, says of Bucklen's Arnica Salve. "It does the business; I have used it for piles and it cured them. Used it for chapped hands and it cured them. Applied it to an old sore and it healed it without leaving a scar behind." 25c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

The Forty-Six Stars.

Some question has been raised as to the proper rearrangement of the stars in the flag, in view of the fact of the admission of Oklahoma as the forty-sixth state. The new star does not take its place officially in the great constellation till the fourth of July next, but its place was fixed some time ago by a joint board of the army and navy, of which Admiral Dewey was chairman. Its report has been approved by the secretary of war and of the navy, and also by the president. The 45 stars now in the flag are arranged in six rows, the first, third and fifth having eight stars, and the second, fourth and sixth having seven each. Under the new arrangement, says the Buffalo Commercial, which was effected withoutmaterially altering the general scheme, the first, third, fourth and sixth rows will have eight stars, and the second and fifth rows seven stars each. Thus Old Glory will look more imposing and beautiful than ever. And there is still room for more stars, when the time comes.

Dr. Thomas fears that some villain just escaped from a melodrama will buy up all the dirigible balloons in the world and then with 15 cents' worth of dynamite will hover over the cities and extract tribute from them, compelling them to loosen up good and plenty. That would be fine and hair-raising reading to get out of a dime dream book, but the man who started out to do the deed might find a few obstacles in his way. The only purpose of getting money these days is to have some place to spend it unhampered. In the days of the pirates of old there were plenty of opportunities for a seafaring person to go pirating on other shores and come home with chests of gold which he could claim to have won in trade, but now it is different. The entire world is getting to be one vast village and the robber bold who combines light and ornamental blowing up of cities as a side line along with the sport of ballooning would find the whole world in conspiracy against him. Some time when he alighted for a drink of water some one would playfully stick a penknife into his balloon and then his dream of empire would be over.

It was not because her husband wanted soup three times a day that the woman applied for a divorce. That was the least of her troubles. Catering to a soup-loving man is about as easy as anything in married life. The woman who is a skillful mixer can keep the pot on all the time and when she sees her husband coming a block away she can light a fire and greet him with a warm plate of soup. A progressive woman might even have a pipe line from the kitchen to the table with a faucet over her husband's plate so there would be no irritating delays. No, furnishing soup was the least of the troubles of the woman who got the divorce. It was when her husband followed her into the kitchen, telling her how to make bread, and into the bedroom to criticise her bedmaking that she rebelled after 21 years. Who can blame her? asks the Chicago Daily News. If a man cannot be fed with soup into good nature in 21 years he is hopeless.

One of the best-known dining places in the world is about to be sold. The "Star and Garter" of Richmond Hill, near London, is familiar through picture, poetry, prose and experience. In 1738 the original house was erected on a lot of ground leased for two pounds sterling a year. Twenty years later the little inn had expanded into the chief hotel in the vicinity of London. Most of the famous characters of the world, and many of those of fiction, have dined at the Star and Garter. Kings and princes have been its patrons. Louis Philippe lived there for six months after his flight from Paris, and Napoleon III. had apartments there. Indeed, at one time or another, almost every distinguished man of the day has visited the great Richmond Hill hostelry.

Busts of Frederick the Great and Field Marshal Count von Moltke have been set up in the West Point Military academy. They were given to the academy by Emperor William as a token of his interest in the American army, and will take their place along with the busts of the great American soldiers that already adorn the buildings of the academy.

How Swindlers Dodge the Law

Schemes of Fleecing the Public Have Evolved from the Shell Game to Gigantic Frauds, Wearing the Cloak of Legitimate Business Enterprises.

By EDWIN W. SIMS,

United States District Attorney, Chicago, Formerly Solicitor of the Department of Commerce and Labor, Washington.

EDWIN W. SIMS.

For many years Chicago has been the headquarters for the swindlers and confidence men of the country. Chicago being the great railroad and distributing center of the west, strangers are drawn here in great numbers and for many years they have supported a large class of men who live by their wits. Because of the ease with which money is obtained by various kinds of swindles the swindler has flourished in Chicago despite the utmost vigilance and activity of the officers of the law both state and federal. In devising schemes, swindlers always have in view two objects: First, obtaining money for nothing; second, evading the law. The ingenuity displayed by these men is often remarkable. As the attorney for one of them remarked after his client had been convicted:

"If that man had used the same ingenuity and persistence in legitimate business that he has in inventing swindles, he would now be a millionaire."

The evolution of the swindling game during the last 25 years is very interesting. Twenty-five years ago the swindler eked out a precarious existence. His operations were confined to the shell game, short-change, fake-bet, green goods, gold brick and other similar schemes. Usually these schemes were worked upon country people and only small sums could be obtained. They also lacked another important feature of the modern swindle in that there was no provision for a defense in court. Swindlers who worked these schemes depended upon avoiding detection, but they could make no defense to the scheme itself. This was a dangerous and cumbersome method of procedure and during the last decade has been superceded by the confidence game or scheme to defraud in its modern form.

In the '90s these schemes began to exhibit some of the elements of their modern perfection. The method adopted was to conduct the swindle by an elaborate imitation of business methods. An example will show the great advance that was made over the old method. The man would open an office and insert advertisements in the papers stating that a business firm with a large capital wished men to represent it in various states at substantial salaries. This would attract scores of men who would come to the office. Each victim would be told that he had all the qualifications necessary to conduct the business and would be offered a salary of two or three thousand dollars a year and commissions, and would have some state assigned to him. He would then be told it was necessary for him to make a deposit of two, three or five hundred dollars, as the case might be and a contract, shrewdly drawn would be presented to him to sign. He would pay his way to Cleveland or Milwaukee—as Ohio and Wisconsin were the states they usually gave—where his employer would pay no more attention to him. When he would return and demand his deposit he would be shown the contract, various provisions of which he had not kept, and the money would not be returned to him.

Another scheme was to advertise for sale a partnership in an old and established business. A set of fake books, showing profits, would be produced for the inspection of the victim and he would pay $500 or $1,000 for a new partnership. Some pretense to conduct the business would be made, but soon the business would fail and the victim would be out of his money. Schemes of this kind were conducted in great numbers in Chicago during the latter '90s and up into the first few years of the present century, and millions of dollars thus obtained from the credulous.

There was a weak point, however, in schemes of this nature. When the swindler was haled into court he could show no effort to conduct a real business. The defense was always that this was not a crime but only a failure to carry out a contract; but the courts held that a contract otherwise legal, if used in connection with a scheme to defraud, could not avail as a defense.

Then the next step in the evolution of modern swindling was taken to meet this difficulty. The swindler would actually make a pretense of carrying on a real business, and then simply wear out his victim by various conditions and annoyances. The scheme in its present form is a clever advance over all those previously used. A swindler to-day is connected in some way with a corporation of some kind, and, whatever part he may take, his profits are derived ultimately from people who purchase the securities of these corporations. In order to avoid danger, the corporation will have something. If it is a mining corporation, it will actually have some place that it calls a mine and it will be making some show of operating it; if it is an oil company or any other kind of a fake corporation, there will be some show of activity. Under this scheme, the victim has his share of stock, and the mine, or the oil well or the plantation, or whatever it is, is there; and, according to the swindler, all the stockholder has to do is to wait until the property is "developed." This tends to keep the victim from prosecuting, for, of course, a prosecution would destroy the value of the business, and it affords a defense in court.

Another scheme allied to this was one in which a number of clever swindlers cleaned up a large amount of money. A man would advertise that he had ample capital to invest in the securities of corporations provided a competent examiner, after thorough investigation, makes a favorable report upon the proposition. The victim is led to choose as the examiner a confederate of the man with capital. The examiner will receive $500 to $2,500 for making the examination, according to the size of the business whose securities are to be marketed; then, after getting the money, he will make the examination and return an unfavorable report, which releases the first swindler of his obligation to take the bonds under the contract. Then, of course, the two divide the fee for the examination between them. This scheme and one or two others very closely allied in principle were flourishing until they fell into the hands of the federal authorities here in Chicago.

This latter scheme, it will be observed, is more dangerous than the selling of worthless stocks and bonds to the public, for the reason that it can be proved that the swindler was not in the position to purchase these bonds even if a market existed, had been made. In the case of these corporations which exist in large numbers and who are robbing the people of the country of millions every year, it is very difficult to secure conviction of their promoters in a majority of cases. When they are arrested and brought into court, they are ready to show that they were really carrying on some kind of a business, and that they have been simply unfortunate, that expectations had not been realized, and that a business failure is not a crime. The great difficulty is to prove criminal intent.

In the past both our state and federal courts have so interpreted the law against schemes to defraud that they have been able to suppress or curb these schemes, whatever form they took. Just what is to be the attitude of the courts towards the swindler who poses as a promoter, and whether they are to so interpret the law that it can deal adequately with this form of fraud, is at the present time uncertain, as the courts differ widely upon the subject. Some of our courts are now holding that even if a promoter does issue a false prospectus, and thereby induces people to invest in the securities of a corporation, that this does not constitute a scheme to defraud, and that it must appear beyond all reasonable doubt that the defendant intended to put the money thus obtained into his pocket, and not into the business.

The difficulty of making this proof has already been indicated. In England, this difficulty was met by a statute (24th and 25th Vict., c 96, s. 94), which is as follows:

"Whoever, being a director, manager, or public officer of any body corporate or public company, shall make, circulate or publish, or concur in making, circulating, or publishing any written statement or account which he shall know to be false in any material particular, with intent to deceive or defraud any member, shareholder or creditor of such body corporate or public company, or with intent to induce any person to become a shareholder or partner therein, or to entrust or advance any property to such body corporate or public company, or to enter into any security for the benefit thereof, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof, shall be liable at the discretion of the court to any of the punishments which the court may award, as hereinbefore last mentioned."

Under this statute, the difficulty is met by making it a crime to issue a false prospectus. Some of our courts have held that the issuing of a false prospectus is a scheme to defraud within section 5480 of the United States revised statutes. Other courts however, hold to the contrary; but whether by judicial interpretation or by legislation, it is absolutely essential that the issuing of a false prospectus be made a crime before it is possible to deal effectively with the largest class of swindlers that now prey upon the public.

While the United States government cannot directly prosecute schemes to defraud, yet, if the mails are used in the furtherance of the scheme, the government can act. As most of these schemes contemplate the use of mails, it is possible for the government to proceed against them under sections 5480 and 5440 of the United States revised statutes. Section 5480 provides that whoever devises a scheme to defraud and promotes it by opening correspondence through the mails, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor; section 5440 provides that if two or more conspire to commit the offense denounced in section 5480, they shall receive a still greater punishment.

Acting under the authority given by these two sections, the post office department and the United States district attorney's office for the northern district of Illinois have for years waged a vigorous and relentless war against all swindlers who make use of the mail service. The task presented the authorities is a difficult one. In the first place, where the mails have been used, the victims are widely scattered, and it is difficult to know who has been swindled, and the government must choose its witnesses from those who happen to make complaint. These witnesses are scattered from Maine to California. It is necessary to bring them here for the preliminary hearing, then for the grand jury session and once more for the trial of the case. Much labor and expense are necessary.

Then, too, it is necessary for the attorney who draws the indictment to go through correspondence and the various conversations with the greatest care in order that he may analyze the scheme and determine exactly in what the fraud consists, so that the indictment may be accurately drawn. Then at the trial of the case, the government is, perhaps, confronted with the fact that the scheme has been so cleverly devised that direct intent to defraud is impossible of proof, and resort must be had to circumstantial evidence.

The records show, however, that the government has very seldom lost a case of this kind, and that swindlers and confidence men stand in the greatest fear of the federal authorities because of the vigor of prosecution in the past. If the law could be amended as above suggested, undoubtedly the government would be able to reach and suppress a large majority of the schemes to defraud that are now operated from this city.

One of the surprising things in connection with this subject, is the credulity of the average person who has saved a little money, and hopes for large and immediate returns from it. It seems that there is nothing so extravagant, so improbable, that the people will not believe it. If the stock of any company had any chance of earning the dividends which these promoters represent that it will, of course it would be subscribed and over-subscribed for at once by the big moneyed men, and would not have to be peddled around at absurd prices—often as low as ten cents a share. When this is suggested to the promoter, he always states that the big moneyed men are trying to get hold of the stock, but that it is not desired that they should have it, because they would then come into control of the property; and the victim swallows the explanation.

The swindler usually has a confederate to whom he refers the victim who wishes to learn about his standing and integrity; and it seems the victim rushes right to this confederate instead of going to banks or business men and making inquiries from people upon whom he could rely. Every prospective purchaser should stop and ask himself the question: "Why is this stock being peddled around in this manner? Is it possible that a good safe investment would be so handled when so much money is lying idle ready for good investments in the hands of men who are competent to pass upon the safety of an investment? Who are the men back of this scheme and what are their antecedents? At what banks, or at what established business houses are they known as honest, conservative men of business?"

Of course, the swindler has his plausible answer to all these questions, and the victim takes his explanation without making a thorough additional investigation.

Rare Coin to Be Sold.

The sale of the rare "Mineru' bank" ten-dollar gold piece, struck in California in 1850, the feature of the auction of old coins at Elder's, says the New York Times. Collectors competed for this souvenir of the gold money of the pioneers. This gold piece was one of a series struck during the gold fever days in San Francisco as a substitute for regular United States gold coins, of which in the west at the time there was a great scarcity. It is not known how many of these coins are still in existence, but the number is extremely limited.

Cotton is raised all over India, but the length, coarseness and general quality of the fiber varies with each locality. Owing to primitive methods of cultivation the average yield is only about one-third that of the United States. MANY SEE PRESIDENT

IMMENSE THRONG ATTENDS NEW YEAR'S RECEPTION.

ALL OFFICIALDOM THERE

Brilliant Scene in the White House—Mr. Roosevelt Especially Greets Centenarian Resident of Washington.

Washington.—Theodore Roosevelt Wednesday officiated for the seventh time as president of the United States at the New Year's reception at the White House. Assisting him in exchanging the salutations of the season were Mrs. Roosevelt and the members and ladies of the cabinet.

The niceties of diplomatic etiquette were religiously observed in the conduct of that part of the reception which has grown during the past hundred years and more to partake largely of the nature of an official function. In this way, but without appearance of prearrangement, the president greeted first the vice president and the members of his cabinet, then each foreign nation represented in the person of ambassador or minister; the judiciary, through the personnel of the supreme court bench and the judges of the local federal and district courts; senators and representatives in congress; officers of the army, navy, marine corps and militia of the District of Columbia; heads of government bureaus, and members of government commissions; organizations of veterans, and Oldest Inhabitants' association of the District of Columbia.

Public Then in a Throng.

Then came the public gathering in a constantly lengthening line at the west gate of the White House grounds, the people had stood since nine o'clock in the morning. It was one o'clock when the gates were opened to admit them. The line, kept intact by a special detail of police, now extended in double column for two blocks up Pennsylvania avenue and for two blocks down Seventeenth street past the state, war and navy building. It was a joyous holiday throng and left its impress of good feeling on the president, who, after more than four hours of handshaking, expressed exhilaration rather than exhaustion.

Three members of the recent Central American peace conference, who still remain in the city, were specially invited guests, including Senor Don Policarpo Bonilla, ex-president of Honduras; Senor Don E. Constantino Fiallos, minister of foreign affairs of Honduras, and senor Don Jose Madriz of Nicaragua, secretary to the conference. W. W. Rockhill, United States minister to China, also was in attendance. Assistant Secretaries Bacon, Adee and Wilson occupied themselves actively in entertaining the diplomats. Admiral Dewey, who has just passed his seventieth birthday, headed the naval contingent, and was heartily greeted by the president.

Admiral Brownson Calls.

Rear Admiral Brownson was one of the first officers of the navy to greet President Roosevelt. To do this he left his place in the line as soon as he entered the White House and made his way through the crowd and into the red parlor, passing Rear Admiral Rixey and taking his place immediately after the army officers who preceded the navy. Admiral Brownson's hand was grasped by several of his brother officers as he was making his way ahead of them. After his greeting to the president, which was cordial, he remained in the east room for some time chatting and receiving greetings.

President Roosevelt took occasion in his New Year's greeting to Dr. Starr, who has just celebrated his one hundredth birthday anniversary, to congratulate the veteran member of the Oldest Inhabitants' association and wish him many returns of the day.

"You, sir, have seen the growth of this republic," said the president as he recognized Dr. Starr, and recalled his previous New Year's visits.

Dr. Starr made an earnest reply, whereupon the president remarked: "Any word from you, sir, will receive instant consideration."

Secretary Cortelyou, who has been confined to his home for some time past with an attack of the grip, had so far recovered as to be able to attend the reception. He was warmly greeted by the president and his fellow cabinet members.

Shakes Hands 5,645 Times.

The last person in the line, a newspaper man, asked the president if he was tired. "Not a bit," he replied, laughing. Just then Chief Usher Stone informed the president that he had shaken hands 5,645 times. Beyond another laugh the president made no answer.

Throughout the long reception Mrs. Roosevelt and the ladies of the cabinet stood with the president in the blue room. They appeared to be not fatigued by the ordeal. The reception terminated at 1:57 p. m.

CATARRH MADE LIFE A BURDEN TO ME.

MISS ANNIE CATRON, 927 Main St., Cincinnati, Ohio, writes:

"As I have found Peruna a blessing for a severe case of catarrh of the head and throat which I suffered from for a number of years, I am only too pleased to give it my personal endorsement.

"Catarrh, such as I suffered from, made life a burden to me, my breath was offensive, stomach bad, and my head stopped up so that I was usually troubled with a headache, and although I tried many so-called remedies, nothing gave me permanent relief. I was rather discouraged with all medicines when Peruna was suggested to me.

"However, I did buy a bottle, and before that was finished there was a marked change in my condition. Much encouraged I kept on until I was completely cured in a month's time, and I find that my general health is also excellent."

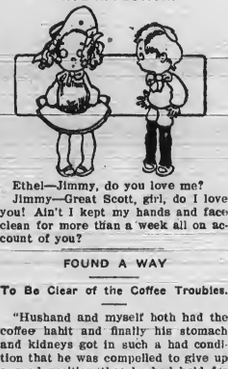
Seeking Experience.

Up to the age of 16 Dick had retained the proper scorn of things feminine. Then he went to dancing school and fell smitten by the charms of several youthful Eves. Accordingly, Dick approached his father and requested theater tickets for two.



Father compiled and merely asked as he turned over the seats, "Which girl is it?"

"I'm going to take Mabel," responded Dick.

"Then she's the one you like best?" father continued.

Dick turned a superior and pitying eye upon his parent. "Oh, no! I don't like her best. You don't understand the situation, father. It isn't the girl I care about. It's the experience I want."

FOUND A WAY

To Be Clear of the Coffee Troubles.

"Husband and myself both had the coffee habit and finally his stomach and kidneys got in such a bad condition that he was compelled to give up a good position that he had held for years. He was too sick to work. His skin was yellow, and I hardly think there was an organ in his body that was not affected.

"I told him I felt sure his sickness was due to coffee and after some discussion he decided to give it up.

"It was a struggle because of the powerful habit. One day we heard about Postum and concluded to try it, and then it was easy to leave off coffee.

"His fearful headaches grew less frequent, his complexion began to clear, kidneys grew better until at last he was a new man altogether, as a result of leaving off coffee and taking up Postum. Then I began to drink it, too.

"Although I was never as bad off as my husband, I was always very nervous and never at any time very strong, only weighing 95 lbs. before I began to use Postum. Now I weigh 115 lbs. and can do as much work as anyone my size, I think.

"Many do not use Postum because they have not taken the trouble to make it right. I have successfully fooled a great many persons who have drunk it at my table. They would remark, 'You must buy a high grade of coffee.' One young man who clerked in a grocery store was very enthusiastic about my 'coffee.' When I told him what it was, he said, 'why I've sold Postum for four years but I had no idea it was like this. Think I'll drink Postum hereafter.'"

LICENSE LEAGUE BEGINS CRUSADE

WITH THE OBJECT IN VIEW OF BRINGING ABOUT LIQUOR REFORMS.

WILL ELEVATE SALOON KEEPING

The Movement Has Not Received Much Support in the East as Yet, but in the West Many Manufacturers Have Enrolled Themselves.

New York, Jan. 6—That 33,000,000 persons in the United States can't get whisky or beer when they want it has caused distress among some big dealers, and the Model License League of Louisville, Ky., is organizing liquor dealers all over the country in a movement to offset the prohibition propoganda by reforming and restricting the saloons.

On January 10 President T. M. Gilmore, of the league, will hold a meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria, at which he will try to enlist the local brewers and dealers in support of the reform movement. The aim of the league is to make a saloon license such valuable property and so easily forfeitable for a breach of the law that saloon keeping will become the business of respectable men only, who will for their own interests make their resorts orderly. The league's first proposition is to make licenses transferable, like any other property. As such they would be of great value to their owners. It is also proposed that licenses in a community should be restricted in number, so as not to exceed the proportion of one for every 500 population. The selling of liquor to minors should be prohibited, the league asserts, and for any violation of law a license should be immediately canceled and the owner should thereafter be debarred from ever holding a license in the same state.

The movement has not received much support in the east as yet, but in the middle west a large number of dealers and manufacturers have enrolled themselves as members. All the large breweries of Milwaukee and St. Louis have joined the league, and throughout Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and Wisconsin the liquor dealers are reported to have come out in support of the new idea.

One of the prime movers in the league in this city, T. S. Looser, of No. 78 Broad street, who is connected with a trade journal which is supporting the league, said that it was "a case of the decent liquor dealers against the Anti-Saloon league."

"We believe that the liquor dealers should do their own housecleaning," he said. "There are a great number of saloons which are a menace to the public health and morals, and we believe that such saloons should be put out of the business. But we oppose prohibition both because it is impracticable and unjust."

The propaganda sent out by the league to the dealers whom it wished to convert showed this plainly, he said. Prohibition threatened to exterminate legitimate dealing in liquor, he declared, and the league sought to offset the trend toward prohibition by purifying the liquor business and removing its objectionable features.

SHOT WIFE AND HER FRIEND

Then Tried, But Unsuccessfully, To Take His Own Life.

Ludington, Mich., Jan. 6.—Crazed by jealousy, Leonard Brown, of Grand Rapids, came here, drove to the farm of Robert Johnson, where his wife was staying, and shot the woman, wounding her so that she died in a few hours. Brown then fired two bullets into Johnson's body and tried to commit suicide, firing three shots into his own head. None of his wounds will prove fatal, however, and Johnson will also recover. Brown, who has not lived with his wife for two years, accused Johnson of breaking up his home.

Robbed His "Bank."

Springfield, Mo., Jan. 6.—Becoming alarmed over the financial panic, George Ellmore, a stockholder in the Bank of Niangua, drew out $720 in gold and buried it in the rear of his barn two months ago, only to find, when he went to secure the coin, that some one had located it and made off with all but $40 that had evidently been overlooked in the haste of the thief.

Danced All Night—Dead.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 6—A special from Eulsa, Okla., says Ke-Wah-Ho-Tsa-Ah-Lo, the largest man in the Osage tribe, died of dancing all one night at an Osage festival. He was full blooded and advanced in years, and was one of the few surviving warriors who participated in the bloody war between the Osage and Kansas indians about 50 years ago.

Four Persons Hurt.

St. Louis, Jan. 6.—Fire started by an electric wire in the stables of the Banner Lumber Co. practically devastated a block of business and dwelling houses in the suburb of Maplewood, injuring four persons, rendering two score homeless. Estimated loss $75,000.

Passed Sunken Ship.

New Orleans, Jan. 6.—Capt. Henry Daniel, who brought the steamer Alexandria, of Liverpool, into port, reported having passed close to a small vessel floating bottom upward on January 3 in the Gulf of Mexico.

TOBACCO MEN ARE UNEASY

QUIET AT RUSSELLVILLE, BUT THE WAR IS NOT ENDED.

Burley Growers and Trust Fail to Agree—Friday's Raid Will Be Investigated.

Louisville, Ky. — Although all is apparently quiet in the war between the tobacco growers of Kentucky and Tennessee against the American Tobacco company, the developments of Friday have given great uneasiness. The town of Russellville, which was raided by nightriders early in the morning, was quiet at night, but the sheriff and his deputies, the police and the citizens were on the alert to prevent any repetition of the outrages.

It was decided by the peace officers and the leading citizens in view of the improbability of another raid that the governor would not be asked for troops. State Fire Marshal Mott Ayres, however, is on his way to Russellville and will begin an immediate investigation of Thursday night's raid which resulted in the shooting of three men by the riders, the burning of two tobacco warehouses and a planing mill and the partial destruction of three smaller buildings. The county judge and court officials notified Gov. Willson that a special term of court will be called to consider the evidence brought out by the investigation and that extraordinary efforts will be made to apprehend and punish the guilty parties.

The most disturbing news of the day, following, as it did, on the heels of the Russellville raid, was the failure of the Burley Tobacco society and the chief buyers for the American Tobacco company to agree regarding the marketing of the 1907 crop held by the society. The parties met at Winchester in accordance with the terms of a compromise agreement recently brought about by Gov. Willson. The Burley men wanted the company to buy 60,000 hogsheads of tobacco from them, while the buyers would agree to take but 10,000 hogsheads. The Burley men consented to sell the smaller amount. The tobacco had already been inspected and graded. The Burley men fixed a minimum price of 15 cents a pound. The company buyers refused to give more than 12 cents.

RECEIVERS FOR SEABOARD LINE.

Federal Judge Places Road in Hands of Bankers.

Richmond, Va. — The Seaboard Air Line Railroad system was put into the hands of receivers here Thursday through the action of Judge Pritchard, of the United States circuit court, who was hurriedly summoned from Asheville, N. C.

Judge Pritchard appointed as receivers R. Lancaster Williams of Richmond and S. Davies Warfield of Baltimore. Both men are identified with banking houses in Baltimore, Williams being of the firm of Middendorf, Williams & Co., and Warfield being president of the Continental Trust company. Mr. Williams is also a partner in the firm of John L. Williams & Sons of this city. The bond of each was fixed at $50,000.

Judge Pritchard's decree gives the receivers immediate possession of the property, which embraces the main stem from Portsmouth, Va., to Tampa, Fla., with numerous branches to coast points on the east and Atlanta, Montgomery and Birmingham on the west, a total of 2,382 miles.

DR. NICHOLAS SENN DIES.

Famous "Fighting Surgeon" of Chicago Passes Away.

Chicago.—Dr. Nicholas Senn, Chicago's "fighting doctor" and one of the foremost surgeons of the central west, died at his residence here Thursday.

It was at the time of the Spanish war that Dr. Senn rose to national prominence. He was appointed surgeon general of the Sixth Army Corps, with the rank of lieutenant colonel and chief of the operating staff of the army in the field. He saw active service in Cuba from May until September, and after his return wrote several books.

Dr. Senn was American delegate to the international medical congress held in Berlin in 1900, and a delegate for the United States to the International Red Cross congress held in St. Petersburg the following year. He also was connected with many medical and surgical associations in this country and abroad. He was a Swiss by birth, having been born at St. Gall on October 31, 1844.

LEAP YEAR.

SOLDIERS SENT TO MUNCIE

ADJUTANT GENERAL ASKS FOR THEM AFTER CONFERENCE.

Gov. Hanly Orders Battery and Twelve Companies of Infantry to Help Suppress Riots.

Muncie, Ind. — At a conference Friday night between Adjt. Gen. Perry, Mayor Guthrie, the sheriff, city officials and several prominent citizens, it was decided to ask Gov. Hanly to send state troops here at once.

When the day's work was ended many of the policemen who had been on constant duty for 48 hours lay down on the station floor and fell asleep. The majority of the special men who had been sworn in refused to serve longer.

As a result Gen. Perry telephoned Gov. Hanly details of the situation and he promptly ordered out battery A and four companies of Indianapolis infantry and eight companies from other cities in the state. The understanding was that martial law is not to be proclaimed unless necessary, the duty of the troops being to work in conjunction with the police in maintaining order. The troops will be brought by special cars.

Rioting was resumed Friday. Cars started to run on regular schedule without interruption and were not molested for several hours. A crowd attacked two cars in the outskirts of the city, hurling stones and other missiles, and after driving off the crews completely wrecked the cars. Squads of police were hurried to the place and over 50 arrests were made. The jail is nearly filled with rioters, and orders were repeated to arrest every member of a street gathering that contained more than three persons. There was no attempt at violence in the downtown sections of the city. Two of the rioters were badly hurt, one of them being cut in the throat with a knife, but not fatally hurt.

CHILDREN BURN TO DEATH.

Three Perish in Flames and Mother is Badly Injured.

Collinsville, Ill.—The explosion of a lamp in the home of George Steger set fire to the house and three children perished in the flames. The victims, aged respectively eight years, four years and 18 days, were in bed when the explosion took place and scattered coal oil all over the room and saturated the bed clothing which at once burst into a roaring blaze. The mother, Mrs. Mary Steger, was seriously burned in attempting to rescue her children.

Paris Suburbanites in Riot.

Paris.—Three thousand suburbanites residing along the line of the Western railroad, exasperated by continuous delays in transit through which they allege they lose hours in pay daily and sometimes even are dismissed by their employers, Friday wrecked the offices at the St. Lazare terminus of the railroad and for an hour held the police at bay, finally being dislodged by the fire department, which played streams from two lines of hose upon them. The company says cold weather caused the delays.

Steamer Sinks; Only Three Saved.

Mexico City.—Roman Portas, second officer of the steamer Ibero, has arrived at Vera Cruz. He says the vessel sank in a storm on the night of December 2, and all on board were lost except three.

Society Leader Is Poisoned.

New York.—Mrs. John Van Ness Roberts, well known in New York society, died Friday night in her home near here Friday by shooting. Ill-health and consequent melancholia are said to have caused the act.

IS TIRED OF YARMOUTH.

Harry Thaw's Sister Asks for Annulment of Marriage.

London.—The failure of another alliance of the English nobility with an American woman of wealth became public Friday afternoon, when the countess of Yarmouth, who was Alice Thaw of Pittsburg, a daughter of Mrs. William Thaw and a sister of Harry K. Thaw, whose second trial for the murder of Stanford White will begin next Monday in New York city, applied to the divorce court for an annulment of her marriage to the earl of Yarmouth.

The court has ordered that the proceedings be held in camera and the papers are being kept secret. The only inkling obtainable of the charges preferred is a statement to the effect that the nature of the medical evidence to be given makes a public hearing inadvisable.

It has been well known for two years that the domestic affairs of the Yarmouths were most unhappy. The earl's companions and his manner of living were such that he could not give his wife the position in society she had a right to expect. She supplied immense sums to defray her husband's extravagances, and her friends say she has conducted herself with dignity throughout the troubles resulting from the unhappy marriage and her brother's difficulties.

MEDAL FOR MILWAUKEE MAN.

Bravery of Edward McGrath Recognized by President Roosevelt.

Washington.—The president has awarded a railroad life saving medal to Edward McGrath, station agent for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway at Stowell station, Milwaukee. He is a cripple.

In August last year while Mr. McGrath was on the station platform, the crossing gates being closed, Emma Hummich, six years old, attempted to cross the tracks in front of an approaching train. McGrath shouted to her, but she failed to heed his warning and was in imminent danger of being run down. McGrath ran to her aid and with great risk to himself, succeeded in lifting her from in front of the train.

EXPLOSION KILLS WOMEN.

Two Perish in Accident in a Fireworks Factory.

Rochester, N. Y.—In an explosion that wrecked a building of the Rochester Fireworks company Thursday one young woman, Sadie Ernst, was instantly killed, a second, Mrs. Lil O'Connor, recently married, was so badly injured that she died at a hospital a short time after being taken there. May Calligan was seriously burned, but is expected to recover.

The explosion occurred in the finishing room of a building of the company's plant in Main street east, and the force of it blew out one side of the building and caused the roof to fall in.

Rockefeller Gives U. of C. $2,191,000.

Chicago. — John D. Rockefeller made another princely gift to the University of Chicago Thursday. It amounted to $2,191,000. The sum of $2,000,000 is to be used for endowment purposes and is in the form of securities from which the university will realize $80,000 annually, according to the donor. This brings the benefactions of Mr. Rockefeller to the University of Chicago to a total of over $23,000,000.

What Is Going on in Different Sections of Kentucky.

CLARENCE STURGEON HANGED.

Nineteen-Year-Old Boy Pays the Penalty For Killing Three Persons.

Louisville, Ky.—The smallest crowd in the history of executions in Louisville witnessed the hanging of Clarence Sturgeon, aged 19, the triple murderer. Sheriff Scholl, following the precedent of former Sheriff Scott Bullitt, limited the passes to the statutory number of 50.

Several hitches occurred during the execution. The trap at first refused to spring because of a projecting screw, and the noose had to be readjusted. Deputy Sheriff Joseph Ludwig, who has hanged 14 men, arranged the cap and rope. Sturgeon had nothing to say on the gallows, but was calm and apparently unmoved during the trying preliminaries. Even the last interview with the aged father and mother, and farewells to his several brothers and two sisters failed to affect him.

Sturgeon was so light that the drop did not break his neck, and he was not pronounced dead for 17 minutes.

The youth was executed for killing Ira Bruner, James Blackerby and Wilfred McMichael, on June 13, 1906, because of jealousy. He resented their attentions to Daisy Jackson, with whom he was in love.

KENTUCKY JUSTICE

Frankfort, Ky.—State Inspector Henry B. Hines submitted to Gov. Willson a report of his investigations of the office of Frank J. Hoffman, justice of the peace of Jefferson county. It indicated that Magistrate Hoffman has failed to make any reports in his term of office to the Jefferson circuit court in regard to money collected by him and due the commonwealth. The report further specifies that the records of Hoffman's office disclose that there is due the commonwealth $101.50 as tax on 203 civil suits filed in his court from January, 1906, to December, 1907. The record shows the collection of the tax in a large number of the cases.

Inspector Hines also says that Hoffman has entered upon his docket 275 commonwealth cases. It is also disclosed that in a great number of the cases the defendants were pardoned. In 73 cases fines are entered against the defendants, and in 68 of this number the fines are marked suspended; in 38 cases there are no orders further than the issuance of the warrants. In all cases fines are entered, but there is no record further than the entering of the judgments.

Only Store Burned.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—The store of Johnson Hendrix, at Rockcastle, Trigg county, was destroyed by fire. Hendrix's entire stock of general merchandise was burned, the loss amounting to several thousand dollars, on which there is no insurance. In a fire, which almost wiped the town off the map a few weeks ago, Hendrix's place was burned. He then opened a new store, and it was the only one in the town.

Poolroom Case Is Up.

Newport, Ky.—The docket of the court of appeals for January contains a number of cases that are of interest. One of these is the commonwealth of Kentucky, on the relation of the attorney general vs. Huber and others. This is the case wherein an attempt was made to close up the poolroom by injunction proceedings.

Provides For Poor Girls.

Lexington, Ky.—J. H. Hamilton, a prominent farmer of Bourbon county, living near Millersburg, died leaving an estate valued at $50,000. It is reported that Mr. Hamilton's will, which has not yet been probated, provides that the bulk of his estate be used for the education of poor white girls of Bourbon county.

Operators Defy Union.

Madisonville, Ky.—All indications point to a strike of the coal miners in the Twenty-third district. Organizers are now in the field, and it is said the miners' organization has sent a big relief fund to the district. The operators say under no circumstances will they deal with the union.

Harry Patterson Stabbed.

Lexington, Ky.—Harry Patterson, who is widely known in sporting circles, was stabbed in the neck by Otto Clark, in the Leonard hotel. Clark was arrested, but was later released on bail. Patterson's condition is serious.

Lost His Hand.

Lexington, Ky.—Calvin Roszell, senior member of the firm of Roszell Bros., long feed dealers and widely known among turfmen, lost his right hand by catching it in an oats feeding machine. Amputation was necessary.

Child Fatally Burned.

Paducah, Ky.—Three-year-old Gertie Garrett carried an armful of shavings from a mill to her home, and when she was passing an open grate flames fired the combustible material. In an instant she was enveloped in flames, and the burns she sustained are fatal.

Two Fall in Battle.

Owensville, Ky.—A. J. Ballard engaged in a shotgun battle with Allie and Boone Henry, brothers, at Yale, a mining town in this county, and Ballard and Boone Henry were fatally wounded. More trouble is feared.

REFUSED TO POOL HIS CROPS

And Rigdon's Warehouse and Tobacco Were Destroyed By Fire.

Germantown, Ky.—Following the refusal of R. D. Rigdon to pool his tobacco with the interests of the "peaceful army" of the American Society of Equity, and to refrain from raising a crop this year, T. M. Dora's warehouse, containing 12,000 pounds, belonging to Rigdon, and valued at $1,300, was set on fire. Despite the efforts of citizens the property was entirely destroyed, at a loss of about $5,000.

When the "peaceful army" of 500 mounted men ostensibly disbanded to reassemble January 6, a company of the riders proceeded to this city. It was this detachment that received Rigdon's refusal to affiliate himself with the American Society of Equity.

The burning of Rigdon's property has stirred the town, and owners of tobacco placed armed men on guard at their warehouses. It is said that the county authorities are afraid to proceed against the marauders.

Many farmers were visited by representatives of the "army." While no threats of violence were made the horsemen declared that certain authorities had assured them protection against arrest, no matter what methods they used in combating the American Tobacco Co.

TWO KILLED IN DUEL.

Chief of Police and Merchant Shoot Each Other To Death.

Beattyville, Ky.—One of the most tragic events in the annals of Lee county was enacted here when Chief of Police Joseph Davidson and Robert Evans, a merchant, shot each other to death. The double killing is the result of an old grudge recalled by Davidson, although the parties were on speaking terms. Davidson, under the influence of liquor, went into Evans' store and entered into a wrangling discussion as to whether or not Evans was his friend. Evans assured him, and requested Davidson to get out as he wished to close the store. The merchant's movement of his hand to his hip pocket to get the store key was misunderstood by Davidson, who shot him in the head. In an instant Evans fired twice, one shot entering Davidson's head, the other taking effect below the heart. Both men fell dead about the same time.

Will Not Remit Fine.

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Willson will not remit the state's part of the $5,000 fine imposed on B. Fulton French by Judge Benton for contempt of court at the trial of the $50,000 damage suit of Mrs. A. B. Marcum against Judge James Hargis and others at Winchester. The state's part of the fine was $1,100.

Judge Barr At Rest.

Louisville, Ky.—The funeral of Judge John W. Barr was held from the 4th Avenue Presbyterian church. Telegrams and messages from all over the United States, expressing condolence and sympathy, reached the family of the distinguished jurist. Among the messages were expressions from War Secretary Taft and Justice Harlan.

Decrease in Clearings.

Lexington, Ky.—The clearings of the Lexington banks for the year 1907 aggregated $33,622,680.32, a decrease of only $132,993.07 as compared with the previous year. During the panic not a bank closed its doors, and there was no clearing house scrip or certificates in circulation here at any time.

Liquor Men to Meet.

Louisville, Ky.—The executive committee of the Model License League, advised by leading brewers, distillers and liquor dealers in various parts of the country, called a national convention of the wine, beer, whisky and collateral trades, to be held in this city January 21 and 22.

Named as Special Judge.

London, Ky.—Judge W. L. Brown received a letter from Gov. Willson advising him that he had been appointed special judge to hold the regular three-week term of court at Albany, Clinton county, and a two-week term at Monticello, Wayne county.

Fought With Shotguns.

Lexington, Ky.—Samuel and Buren Vaughn on one side and Ben Howard on the other engaged in a shotgun battle at Cliff Post Office, in which Howard was shot five times, probably fatally. The Vaughns escaped to the woods.

Battle With Roman Candles.

Maysville, Ky.—During a show battle with Roman candles at Springdale, near here, T. J. Hughes was struck in the eye and will lose the sight, while a man named Mifford was struck in the face and severely burned. Several others received severe burns.

Three Mines Are Tied Up.

Madisonville, Ky.—Three mines, two at Nortonville and one at Oakhill, this county, are completely tied up as a result of the miners' strike. Three hundred men are employed at these places.

DEATH

Claims Judge Albert S. Berry

After Short Illness Contracted at a Banquet.

Famous Congressman, Jurist and Politician Passes Away.

ALBERT S. BERRY.

Circuit Judge Albert S. Berry, of Newport, died of pneumonia at 12:15 Tuesday morning after a short illness.

Judge Berry contracted a cold at a banquet of the Circuit Judges of Kentucky held last week at Louisville. He returned last Thursday evening, and last Friday morning took a short ride. When he returned home he complained of feeling ill and went to bed. Saturday morning he became worse, and Sunday Dr. Holt diagnosed his ailment as pneumonia. The disease developed rapidly and despite the most heroic efforts of his physicians, he continued to sink until the end.

Judge A. S. Berry, known as "the Tall Poplar of the Licking" in the halls of Congress, is one of the best known men in public life in Kentucky. Of commanding presence, he was easily the tallest man in Congress during the years that he represented the Sixth District there. He was nearly 6 feet 3 inches in height, and of magnificent physique. He was born in Jamestown, now Dayton, Ky., in 1835. He graduated from Miami University, at Oxford, Ohio, in 1856, and read law in the Cincinnati Law School, graduating from there in 1857. He served as County Superintendent of Schools in 1859, and was elected City Attorney of Newport in 1861. When the Civil War broke out, he cast his fortunes with the "forlorn hope," and served during the war as a Lieutenant of marines. At the close of the war he returned to Newport and commenced an active political career that has ever since continued. During the years between the close of the war and 1885, he served his constituency successively as member of Council and in the Legislature.

He was three times elected Mayor of Newport, and twice elected a member of the State Senate. But his political ambitions were not to be thus easily satisfied, and in 1892 he became a candidate for Congress, defeating Weaden O'Neal by 7,835 votes. In 1894 he was victorious over T. B. Mathews, and in 1896, Richard P. Ernest, the regular Republican candidate, went down in defeat before the "Tall Poplar." Again in 1898 the banner of Democracy was carried to victory by Judge Berry, and then the tide turned, for, in 1900 D. Linn Gooch defeated both Colonel Berry and J. L. Rhinock, the present Congressman, for the Democratic nomination in a hotly-contested primary. In 1902 Judge Berry dropped out of the race. While in Congress Judge Berry was a commanding figure on the floor of the House, and made some famous speeches.

There is hardly a day in the week but what some one is here looking for a location.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Powers entertained at dinner, last Sunday, L. J. Hume and wife and A. C. Roberts and wife.

Rank Foolishness.

"When attacked by a cough or a cold, or when your throat is sore, it is rank foolishness to take any other medicine than Dr. King's New Discovery," says C O. Eldridge, of Empire, Ga. "I have used New Discovery seven years and I know it is the best remedy on earth for coughs and colds, sore throat and all throat and lung troubles. My children are subject to croup, but New Discovery quickly cures every attack." Known the world over as the King of throat and lung remedies. Sold under guarantee at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger. 50c and $1.00 Trial bottle free.

Small-Pox at Big Bone.

Considerable excitement has prevailed in the southern end of the county ever since last Friday, when Dr. Menefee, of Walton, a member of the county board of health, visited a patient in Big Bone neighborhood, and pronounced the disease smallpox. Two other physicians were in consultation with Dr. Menefee and agreed with him in his diagnosis. Several cases are reported just across the line in Gallatin county, and it is from that neighborhood the disease was brought into this county. Upon its appearance the disease was thought to be chickenpox, and, as a result, a great many were exposed to it who would not have been had they known its character. The schools in the lower end of this county and in the upper end of Gallatin county have been dismissed. All the patients are closely quarantined and every effort will be made to stamp the disease out at the earliest possible moment. Dr. Menefee, the health officer, will see that the law in regard to smallpox is closely observed by all in the stricken community.

There have been two other cases of smallpox in the county in the last two weeks—one in Petersburg and one up on Garrison. No report of either of these cases reached the RECORDER until Monday, or the fact would have been published.

None knew him but to love him, none named him but to praise, and all the bright and glowing tints of success seemed painted, as it were, on his future, as he stepped forth from college to take his place in his chosen profession. "Dentistry," but God had willed otherwise, and called him, "Son, come up higher."

He faced death with unflinching courage; and the calm assurance that there was a brighter and better beyond. He had no fear of death, but said he was not ready to die. He did not murmur against fate, but said if it was God's will for him to go, and in that way, it was alright. He was ready to go. A few hours before his death he said, "There is a Heaven and there is a Hell. I am going to Heaven." When asked how he knew, he replied, "I am further along than you are and I know." There was no doubt in his mind; no fear. He had placed his trust in a higher power. One who would not fail him, even in the dark hour of death, but robbed death of its sting, and gave him the perfect assurance of safety and peace with his God. He was always kind and thoughtful of others, and remembered his friends even to the last. He was tenderly devoted to his parents, and knowing how their hearts were twined about him, he realized how hard it would be for them to give him up, and said, "I do not mind it for myself, but it will be hard for mamma and papa." His last message to them was sweet and comforting: Give my love to mamma and papa and tell them to meet me in heaven." While it is hard, so hard to give him up, yet we know our loss is his infinite gain

May all those who have known him,
And loved him here below;
Be prepared to meet him,
For in time, we all must go.

A FRIEND.

CUT OUT 1908 CROP.

BRETHREN:—We set out to make a market for 15c tobacco. The American Tobacco Company said at the Winchester meeting that we have not done so yet. If this is true we must cut out the 1908 crop, and then our tobacco will be worth 15 cents. We may have to wait, but we made up our minds in the beginning to wait, and there is no need to change now. Let us stick to the firing line. It is a poor soldier who runs when the battle begins.

The plant bed season is nearly on us, and it will tell the tale. The American Tobacco Company has an opinion that we cannot cut out the crop, and that is what is hardening it's heart. It took ten plagues to soften Pharoah. The American Tobacco Company could not be expected to relent with less (and remember what happened to Pharoah.) Let us neither show fear nor ask favor of those who are fighting us, but let us be sure to keep well within the law; we do not wish, and are not strong enough to make an enemy of the law. We already have enough troubles and need no more.

We have elected peace officers in every county, and peace officers in the State, and have made them take oath that they will uphold the law. Let no misguided member stultify himself and antagonize such powerful influences by defying the law. Law and order are bound to prevail, and in the long run those who defy them will lose. We have nothing to expect from violence. The law will overcome it; make no mistake about that. Even if it did not, violence would destroy confidence upon which all human society is based, and upon which our Burley Tobacco Society is peculiarly dependent. If we destroy confidence in ourselves, the bigger fools are we and the more we lose the confidence of the outsider whom we are anxious to have confide his crop to our management; besides we lose the confidence of good men who are now with us. Those opposed to us are waiting for us to or butt ou brains out against the bulwarks of the law. If, by putting us in the wrong, our opponents can get the strong arm of the law to help them whip us how much have we gained? Let us by strict adherence to law, order and decency win the confidence of the authorities, of those who have financed us, of the insurance companies, and particularly of those who have kept out of our pool in fear some of us would act lawlessly, and we may be sure that every friend of right and justice will be on our side, and our battle will be won before we know it. Instead of defying the law, let us ally ourselves with the law and apply it to those who have oppressed us.

The recent meeting at Winchester shows that the trust can, and does make the price; for they denied that tobacco for which they received 15 to 20 cents from foreign governments is worth more than 12 cents. This is preposterous and makes it all the easier to prove that they are a combination in restraint of trade, and therefore, acting illegally. Put the law to them, but do not put the law to ourselves.

Our Governor has shown his intention to uphold the laws and our Chief Justice has pointed out the manner of proceeding under the law against trusts. Bring pressure to bear on the authorities to enforce the law, and if the Trust will not pay us fair prices for our tobacco we will make them pay fines enough our prices look insignificant. Yours fraternally,

LUCIEN BECKNER.

A Cure For Misery.

I have found a cure for the misery malaria poisons produces," says R. M. James, of Louellen, S. C. "It's called Electric Bitters, and comes in 50 cent bottles. It breaks up a case of chills or a bilious attack in almost no time; and it puts yellow jaundice clean out of commission." This great tonic medicine and blood purifier gives quick relief in all stomach, liver and kidney complaints and the misery of lame back. Sold under guarantee at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

Why the Bridge Fell.

There will be a sigh of relief all over the country by reason of the substantial proof that the Quebec bridge disaster was the result of carelessness which might have been avoided, which ought to have been prevented. This seeming paradox lies in the fact that at first it appeared as if the fault lay in something outside the ken of engineers, which made every large bridge in the country seem potentially unsafe. That the engineering plans as originally drawn were correct and that they were changed by an aged and infirm supervising engineer apparently are accepted as the fundamental facts in the case. It was a man who was at fault and not engineering principles. Of course, says Philadelphia Inquirer, this does not lessen the terrible aspects of the tragedy, but it does show that the bridge can be rebuilt and be as safe as any other structure. It was the ghost of some unknown principle in mechanics or physico-chemistry that frightened engineers and made every traveler tremble as he crossed one of the mighty structures which are deservedly the pride of engineering. Now that the ghost is laid there will be at least the satisfaction of knowing that it is not likely we shall have another such accident.

Agricultural Prosperity.

The ten years of prosperity this country has enjoyed since 1897, and the revolution which has been wrought in the agricultural industry, has placed the American farmer in a position of financial and economic independence such as the rural population of this or no other country has ever known before, writes H. C. Nicholas in Van Norden Magazine. The fixed capital represented in the agricultural industry to-day is approximately $25,000,000,000, or more than four times the capital invested in all of the manufacturing industries in the country. From the position the American farmer now occupies, no financial disturbances, no business failures in the outside world, no failure of any one or several crops, no hysteria or political agitation, can hope to dislodge him.

High school fraternities are treated with scant courtesy when they make an appeal to the courts. The latest instance of judicial condemnation occurred in Chicago, when the appellate court, last month, declined to issue an injunction restraining the school board from enforcing a rule excluding all members of secret fraternities from participation in literary or athletic contests, and from using the names of the high schools in connection with the fraternities. The injunction was sought through the father of a member of one of the fraternities on the ground that the rule interfered with the natural rights of the pupils. The court decides that the rule against the fraternities does not interfere with the rights of the young people to join any fraternities they choose, and that it does not trespass upon parental authority. The school contests from which members of the fraternities are barred do not form part of the regular curriculum, and are subject to such regulations as the school authorities choose to make in the exercise of their legal discretion.

Prof. Edward S. Morse, talking to the Technology students about Japan, spoke of the simple dress of the students there as being one of the first things that he noticed. When he asked the reason of it, he was told that it was a custom to prevent a feeling against the well-to-do class by the scholars who could not afford to dress more expensively. Dartmouth did the same thing for the same reason two years ago, and the boys took so kindly to rough-and-ready costumes that before long the college authorities had to suggest to them that they were getting altogether too careless about their personal appearance.

Almost simultaneously with the resurvey of the Alaskan boundary, which deprives Canada of a strip of land, news comes from Ottawa that as a result of the explorations of Capt. Bernier in the arctic a total area of at least 500,000 square miles is claimed for Canada. It would be rash to say that a narrow strip of the Alaskan gold fields is worth hundreds of square miles of arctic islands when one recalls the flippant remarks made, not many years ago, about the worthlessness of Alaska.

New York city promises to spend more money to run the municipal government next year than the entire budget of the empire of Japan, aside from interest on the war debt. The public schools of New York cost more than the Japanese army and navy combined. The comparison does not necessarily imply extravagance in New York or poverty in Japan. It is simply an interesting fact.

WILLSON'S MESSAGE TO LEGISLATURE.

ALTERATIONS IN STATUTES GOVERNING CHANGE OF VENUE SUGGESTED

AS A RESULT OF NIGHT RIDERS' RAID.

Faithful Enforcement of Law Pledged —Uniform Local Option and County Unit Measures Among Recommendations.

Frankfort, Ky.—In his first message to the General Assembly of Kentucky Gov. A. B. Willson briefly states the situation in this state as he finds it upon assuming his duties, and declares that the Commonwealth has enjoyed a season of prosperity, the disorders growing out of the tobacco war alone disturbing the peace of the state. In strong terms he asserts that the law will be upheld and that any court derelict in its duty must be made to answer. Because of the shortness of time in which to prepare his message the governor says he will send special messages to the legislature making recommendations in regard to important subjects. Following is the message:

To the Senate and House of Representatives—Gentlemen: To all of the members constituting the legislative branch of the government of Kentucky, greeting, and, personally, to each senator and representative, welcome.

With your meeting, the three departments of the government of the commonwealth are all working together, for the commonwealth and all of its people, at the same time, in the capital city. Under the constitution and the law, the government of the commonwealth and all of its branches is being carried on in the accustomed way, without clashing interests or any wish on the part of anybody to trespass upon the prerogatives of any other department than his own.

The constitution declares that the governor shall, from time to time, give to the general assembly information of the state of the commonwealth, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall deem expedient.

Prosperity in Kentucky.

The commonwealth, through the greater part of the past year, has enjoyed with the rest of the country a very great and never before equaled season of business activity and success. There have been abundant work and greater wages than ever known before, for every person who wished to work; rich crops, safely gathered, have rewarded the farmers more generously than in any former year of our history; new industries have been organized and old industries extended and enlarged and their products greatly increased. Our railroads and other means of transportation have been taxed beyond their power with the enormous offerings of business. Every branch of trade and business has been strained to fulfill the demand upon it. The volume of money, the amount of deposits, the record of the clearings and other instruments of commerce have reflected the general increase of business, reaching not only the limit of men's greatest hopes, but passing beyond to the border of overproduction, up to the time of the recent panic. The sound and safe conditions and the more than usually conservative management of the business of the people of Kentucky shows forth in the fact that our banks and people have been almost free from the certificates used in other states and great commercial centers, and have responded to the demand for their depositors, as a rule, without unreasonable restrictions, while the people who had the deposits in our banks have shown their courage, their faith and their public spirit by trusting their banks and quieting apprehensions of depositors, and restricting their demands to what was absolutely necessary, and the newspapers of the commonwealth are entitled to great credit for the prudence and wisdom which they have shown in refraining from sensational publications, and presenting only the plain truth, full and just, but without any sensational addition.

The Tobacco War.

Throughout most of the year, law and order, peace and good will have prevailed throughout the commonwealth. There has been relief from the local disorders, feuds and strife, and, as a general rule, during the past year our people have been, even under the strain of the election, free from violence; counties which have previously been of ill-note for crime, disorder and intimidation of the law-abiding people, have seen the orderly majority unite to put down disorder and punish crime, and have made some counties which were formerly least desirable among the most law-abiding, law-loving and orderly in the whole borders of the commonwealth.

Market Almost Destroyed.

In the meantime, not a benefit has resulted to the oppressed farmers from these acts of violence and intimidation. Even those who were members of the association have had their property tied up, and liberty, in places, threatened by these bands. Factories and warehouses, which the farmers warmly welcomed, have been burned and many others closed forever.

Our tobacco market is nearly destroyed. Large customers are being taught that it is safer and better to buy elsewhere; large crops remain unsold; managers, who have promised large prices for pooled crops above the market price, have seen the buyers driven from the fields, and no one can tell when the end will come, but everyone can see that the result, up to this time, is that our markets, not only for tobacco, but for other products, are paralyzed, and, in many cases, ruined; that in large districts the law has been wholly overthrown, and the poor people, who have no one to take care of them, are deprived of the protection of the people's laws and have lost their liberties and are helpless; that the price of nearly every acre of good land in Kentucky has gone down; that thousands of people wish to move out of Kentucky to states where they hope it is safer to live, and the very flower of our working population wishes to leave the state as thousands have done before; that it has been necessary, in order to allay the fears of frightened people, even in a large city like Hopkinsville, to keep a company of the militia on duty, at great expense, and with great hardships on the young men who are taken from their ordinary business and work; that lawless and unprincipled men have been constantly ready to break out in several counties, unrestrained by law or public sentiment, and that the people of Kentucky are brought suddenly and squarely to face the question whether the laws of more than two millions or the violence of a few hundred shall prevail.

The Tobacco Trust.

We are all familiar with the history of the alternating profits and losses, successes and failures of the great tobacco growers of Kentucky; the great prices of ready money in good years and the great losses and hardships of bad years. The growth of the great tobacco trust and its buying out its various competitors until it, in a great measure, controlled the prices of tobacco, on the one side, and the union of the farmers and others who would sell to the manufacturers, on the other, the cut-throat competition in hard years, the overproduction which left a large part of the crop of 1906 on hand unsold, and the resulting suffering to thousands of poor people interested in this crop as their sole reliance for their regular supplies of necessities, and it it plain that the great cause of the trouble now which has resulted in disorderly outbreaks in several counties, is the fear of the owners of the majority of the tobacco now controlled by their pools that those not members of the pool will sell their tobacco to the trust and other buyers, while those in the pool remain with their hands tied until it is too late to sell, and will be exposed to another year's poverty and deprivation. The owners in the pool have voluntarily parted with their liberty, right or power to sell their own as they choose. Those not in the pool under the law have the right to sell when, where and to whom they please, and for any price they choose to take. In Bracken county there has been a state of terror, oppression and intimidation for weeks. Under the guise of "peaceful armies," large bands of men have compelled others to obey the mobs instead of the law, and have deprived them of their liberties, and threatened their lives and property, and have even crossed into Mason county, and, while they have had splendid and brave resistance from individuals, the law has seemed paralyzed there.

Will Uphold the Law.

There can be no doubt of the final result. Anglo-Saxon common sense and Anglo-Saxon law always win in time. Our people desire the full protection of the law and love their liberty, and feel that they had better lose not only part of the value of their tobacco, but even their farms rather than lose their liberties.

The only question left is whether this shall be soon or long delayed: whether it shall be at once, to prevent further injury, or whether, continuing for months, it shall practically destroy the business and the property values of the whole people and decimate our population by removals to other states.

The executive will faithfully uphold the law, but it is the people's law, and its strength is in the support of the people for their own laws.

Change of Venue Necessary.

In order to secure the early and prompt detection, apprehension and punishment of the leaders in these conspiracies, there is urgent need of some further legislation, so that when commonwealth's attorneys or judges or grand juries of the least—fail or refuse to perform their duties under the law, or are deterred by threats or intimidation, the investigation of the offense can be transferred to some county where there is no intimidation and there fully investigated and tried, for many offenders feel secure now because of their power to intimidate witnesses, grand juries and local authorities in their own counties. I submit that the recommendation that a statute shall be adopted which shall provide, in substance, that whenever any circuit judge of this state, or attorney general, shall be satisfied from his own knowledge or the written statement of the commonwealth's attorney, that such a state of lawlessness exists in any county of his district, that the officers of such county will be prevented from, or danger of failure in discharging their duties, or that the grand juries will be deterred or prevented from fearlessly and fairly investigating the commission of any offense against the laws of the state in any county, the circuit judge may, upon his own motion, and shall, upon the request of the attorney general of Kentucky, order and direct the investigation of the commission of such offenses to be removed to some other county, in which a fearless and fair investigation of the commission of such offense may be had.

The Election Law.

I submit to the general assembly a draft of a new election law prepared under the auspices of a committee of the Louisville Bar Association for their information. I have not been able to examine it with the painstaking care which the general assembly will give to it, but it is the work of honorable and unselfish men, who have given a great deal of care to making what they believe is an absolutely fair law. This will not, however, exclude the probability that the experience of members of the general assembly with elections may find provisions which may need change.

The Temperance Question.

I have pledged the people to favor, and I do favor, the enactment and enforcement of a uniform local option law, with the county as the governing unit. An overwhelming majority of the people of Kentucky have shown their determination that the saloons shall be taken out of politics; that the abuses and injuries of intemperance shall be taken out of their lives; that the laws closing the saloons on Sunday shall be rigidly enforced, and that every thing that will conduce to real temperance shall be done and required. and it is for the general assembly to act upon those recommendations as in their wisdom they shall deem best, and to extend the local option law and make it apply to all counties with the county as the governing unit.

The Dog Tax.

I do ask you to repeal the dog tax law. The necessary work of the governor's office has increased so much that an addition to the force is absolutely necessary in order to do the work of the office properly. The law provides a private secretary to the governor, and it was expected when this office was created that he would act as secretary and stenographer but the great number of visitors to the governor, constantly increasing every year, the many packages of letters received every day from the people and their representatives and officers all over the state, all of which ought to be answered promptly, are entirely beyond the power of the private secretary to attend to.

Reform in Taxation.

I have been urged to recommend to the general assembly the appointment of a commission to take the place of the present state board of equalization, and to give their whole time to the supervision of the assessment and collection of taxes, and to the study of the most advanced ideas in taxation, and to recommendations for the improvement of our own tax laws.

Experience has shown that our system of taxation was based upon the theory that equality of taxation required a flat or level rate on all kinds of property, real and personal alike, but it has turned out that this rule for equality has resulted practically in gross inequality and unfairness, serious injury to our business interests and in driving out of the state great sums of moneys and values of personal property, which were needed to build up the state, without contributing in taxes anything like the amount of revenue that should be received from such property.

"United We Stand—Divided We Fall."

We are all of us as members of the legislative, the judicial and executive departments assembled here in the capital city to fulfil our duty to the people and to work and study and strive for the general welfare. We can well afford to meet and work together as cordial and sincere friends and to agree that party discussions and divisions shall not divide us when once chosen, according to law, to do the people's work.

We are all neighbors, fellow-citizens and friends. We all love Kentucky. Differences of opinion as to party questions give no ground for personal unkindness. Every one of us alike wishes to protect the liberties of all our people; to make the state government useful, honorable, respectable and beloved; to do whatever is necessary and pay whatever ought to be paid to make the public service useful, and to exercise sincere and rigid economy in public expenses without being niggardly.

All Americans.

We may differ about political questions, but apart from such differences, when Kentuckians meet whether in their own country or in foreign lands, they warm toward each other because they are fellow-Kentuckians. We are, however, something far more than Kentuckians. We are Americans. Trite as that phrase may sound, the older I grow, the more priceless to me is the fact it expresses. We may well be proud of the state that gave birth to Abraham Lincoln; that sent Henry Clay and John J. Crittenden to the senate, and nurtured such men as Zachary Taylor, Isaac Shelby, George Nicholas, the Breckinridges, the Marshalls, John Boyle, George Robertson, Samuel F. Miller, Joseph R. Underwood, Charles S. Moorehead, James Guthrie, John L. Helm, Madison C. Johnson, Lazarus W. Powell, Archibald Dixon, Joshua F. Bell, Richard H. Menefee and many others, distinguished in every walk of life and too numerous to be mentioned on this occasion.

And he closed in this splendid passage: In closing, Mr. President, I must again express my deep satisfaction in the thought that upon all questions affecting the existence of the union, the Kentuckians of 1907 are thoroughly united, as were their fathers when, in 1792, our Commonwealth became, to use the words of congress, "a new and entire member of the United States of America." Her people, we are all glad to know, have outgrown the feelings of distrust and animosity that divided them in the perilous time of 1861, and their faces are now turned steadily and hopefully to the future, determined that Kentucky shall play her full part in the building up of our beloved country in all that makes for the true national greatness.

May I add good luck, good will and good cheer to every man chosen by Kentucky and her people to do the people's work, good faith and good feeling abiding between us, and may we lay down our work at the end of our terms with the just hope that the people will say to each in his time, "Well done, good and faithful servant." May we do our work so justly, so fairly, so unselfishly, that each shall feel that all the others have done their best, and that each shall treat the other with a feeling of pride and pleasure in his acquaintance, and with feelings of mutual respect and good will, Let us give no room for the feeling that anything but a square deal can gain or hold the respect of an honor-loving people like the people of Kentucky. Let us all so think and act that each should be willing that in matters affecting the whole people, every man, woman and child should know not only what shows on the record, but also what beats in the heart.

AUGUSTUS E. WILLSON,
Governor of Kentucky.

A Future for the Red Race.

The American Indian's acquirements in esthetic lines are showing themselves in a curious fashion. In certain Sioux settlements in South Dakota, families have purchased cabinet organs and get the greatest enjoyment from playing them. Moreover, if we may trust reports, the pleasure is not mere whimsical curiosity over a new element introduced from the inner circle of civilization; it is genuine appreciation of the beauties to be drawn from a musical instrument. The Indians have so far progressed that an organ appeals to them in a different, a higher way than an ingenious agricultural implement or a handy firearm. Is this not increasing cause for confidence in an intellectual future for the race?—Chicago Standard.

Fly Exterminator.

When flies become troublesome they can always be got rid of by a very simple mixture. Half a teaspoonful of black pepper, finely ground, should be mixed with double the quantity of brown sugar, the compound to be moistened with condensed milk. The flies will generally eat greedily of the mixture if placed where they can easily reach it; but it will be their last meal, for the least taste of it will poison a fly. If watched, they will often be seen to drop dead within a short distance of the plate which they have just left, and some of the greediest eaters do not live to leave the plate.—N. Y. Ledger.

MAY FREE SCHMITZ

APPELATE COURT FINDS HIS INDICTMENT INVALID.

HIS ACT WAS NO CRIME

Abe Ruef, Former Boss of Frisco, Also Benefited by Decision—Both Entitled to Release on Bail.

San Francisco —The district court of appeals handed down a decision Thursday setting aside the judgment in the case of former Mayor Eugene E. Schmitz, convicted of extortion in the French restaurant case. Abe Ruef also benefits by the ruling of the upper court, for, according to [illegible] sion, he pleaded guilty to an act that was no offense against the laws of the state.

According to the appellate judges the compelling of French restaurants to pay "fees" to Abe Ruef was not a crime, even though Ruef divided the "fees" with the mayor.

After discussing the point the court reversed the judgment against Schmitz on the ground that no acts constituting a crime had been proved against him. Abe Ruef, who pleaded guilty to extorting money from the French restaurants, is therefore equally guiltless.

In passing upon the legality of the indictment the appellate court said:

"The indictment is claimed to be invalid for two reasons: First, that it does not allege any threat to injure property, and, second, it does not allege that the threat was to do an unlawful injury."

The gist of that portion of the decision relating to the allegation that there was no threat to injure property is contained in the following sentence:

"There is no allegation as to any threat to injure any business in direct terms, but only the threat to prevent the parties from obtaining a license to sell liquor." A license to sell liquor is not property in the ordinary sense of the word, says the court.

Commenting on the second contention of Schmitz's attorneys that there was no threat to do unlawful injury the court declares:

"We are clearly of the opinion that the indictment is insufficient, because it does not allege nor show that the specific injury threatened was an unlawful injury." It is not an unlawful act, reasons the court, to threaten to hold up the licenses of the restaurant keepers or actually to do so.

Entitled to Release on Bail.

The decision will stop the French restaurant cases, and pending charges of extortion against Schmitz and Ruef must be dismissed. Both are now entitled to release on bail. If they obtain the necessary bondsmen they can remain at liberty until such time as a jury finds them guilty on one of the indictments charging them with receiving bribes from corporations. Owing to the number of cases against them the bail, figured at $10,000 a case, would reach an enormous figure.

Can't Get Out for 60 Days.

Schmitz and Ruef cannot take advantage of the decision for 60 days. The prosecution has 20 days in which to ask for a rehearing. Then the appellate court will have ten days to consider the application. When that is done the prosecution will go through the same procedure in the supreme court, which will take the same length of time. Consequently Schmitz and Ruef will still be kept in the county jail for two months at least.

The news of the decision of the appellate court spread rapidly over the city, causing consternation in some quarters and delight in others.

BROWNSON CASE DISCUSSED.

Comes Up When Senator Hale Introduces Navy Personnel Bill.

Washington. — The Brownson affair was the chief topic of discussion in the senate Thursday. It was brought up when Senator Hale explained the navy personnel bill which was introduced by him. The presentation of the bill led Senator Tillman to ask whether members of the committee would have an opportunity to get facts in relation to the controversy over the Brownson affair. Mr Tillman intimated that he wished to call before the committee witnesses to testify concerning this matter. Mr. Hale replied that he thought there would be no obstacle to allowing the senator to do that.

The members of the house participated in a lottery for rooms in the new office building, and great confusion resulted.

Jones' Big Verdict Set Aside.

REASON FOR WOMEN'S "NERVES"

In Very Many Cases it is Weakened Kidneys.

Mrs. Frank Roseboom, 512 S. Washington St., Moscow, Idaho, says: "Inherited kidney trouble grew steadily worse with me until so nervous I could not sleep at night. I was dizzy and spots floated before my eyes. My back and hips ached and every cold settled on my kidneys and made me worse. I have used many different medicines and was discouraged when I began with Doan's Kidney Pills, but now the symptoms that alarmed me are gone."

BLAMED ON THE RAILROAD.

First Thought in Irishman's Mind After the Accident.

Railroad claim-agents have little faith in their fellow creatures. One said recently: "Every time I settle a claim with one of these hard-headed rural residents who wants the railroad to pay twice what he would charge the butcher if he gets a sheep killed, I think of this story, illustrative of the way some people want to hold the railroad responsible for every accident, of whatever kind, that happens. Two Irishmen were driving home from town one night when their buggy ran into a ditch, overturned, and they were both stunned. When a rescuer came along and revived them, the first thing one of them said was: 'Where's the train?' 'Why, there's no train around,' he was told. 'Then where's the railroad?' 'The nearest railroad is three miles away,' he learned. 'Well, well,' he commented. 'I knew it hit us pretty hard, but I didn't suppose it knocked us three miles from the track.'"

THE SOFT ANSWER.

Stern Parent—I hadn't any of the advantages you have had. How do you suppose I have got on as I have?

Young Hopeless (intending to make a soothing reply)—Er—I expect the grass wouldn't grow under your feet sir!

All Lost.

David Belasco, the playwright and manager, was talking about matinee idols. "Strange," he said, "the fascination that they exert upon young girls. I overheard the other day a literary conversation that is apropos. Two men were conversing. "Did you ever read Shakespeare's 'Love's Labor Lost'?" said the first. 'No,' growled the second bald head, 'but I've taken my best girl to the theater, and heard her rave all through the show about the leading man's heavenly hair.'"

Plants That Are Poisonous.

Many harmless plants contain poison. Daffodil and narcissus pickers are troubled with a skin disease known as "daffodil poisoning." Gatherings form under the fingernails. They are caused by minute crystals in the juice of the stems. The bulbs of the white Roman hyacinth have similar unpleasant properties.

RAILROAD MAN

Didn't Like Being Starved.

A man running on a railroad has to be in good condition all the time or he is liable to do harm to himself and others.

A clear head is necessary to run a locomotive or conduct a train. Even a railroad man's appetite and digestion are matters of importance, as the clear brain and steady hand result from the healthy appetite followed by the prope. digestion of food.

"For the past five years," writes a railroader, "I have been constantly troubled with indigestion. Every doctor I consulted seemed to want to starve me to death. First I was dieted on warm water and toast until I was almost starved; then, when they would let me eat, the indigestion would be right back again.

"Only temporary relief came from remedies, and I tried about all of them I saw advertised. About three months ago a friend advised me to try Grape-Nuts food. The very first day I noticed that my appetite was satisfied, which had not been the case before, that I can remember.

"In a week, I believe, I had more energy than ever before in my life. I have gained seven pounds and have not had a touch of indigestion since I have been eating Grape-Nuts. When my wife saw how much good this food was doing me she thought she would try it awhile. We believe the discoverer of Grape-Nuts found the 'Perfect Food.'"

MURDERED BY CRAZED MULATTO

WAS THE RICH PLANTER WHO WAS RIDING ALONG ON HIS HORSE.

CLAIMS SHOT WAS FIRED ACCIDENTALLY

Bloodthirsty Crimes Laid On the Hands of an Alabama Negro By His Own Confession—Denies Charge of Cremating His Victims.

Mobile, Ala., Jan. 13.—The incarceration in the local jail of Arthello Dubox, a supposedly crazed mulatto, brings to light the story of the blackest crime that ever darkened the pages of the history of Choctaw county, Alabama. Indeed, there have been few, if any, crimes in the annals of the state that can approach it.

Dubox was removed to the local bastile because of the feeling aroused in Choctaw county over the deliberate assassination, a week ago Saturday, of J. H. Hodges, a wealthy planter, and the murder and incineration on the same day of an aged mulatto, Sally Thompson, and her daughter.

It was Dubox's own statement that led to his arrest, and, when the feeling against him grew so violent that threats of lynching were made the Choctaw county officials removed him from the Mt. Sterling jail to this city. The true story of Mr. Hodge's assassination may never be known, since, up to the present time, no eye-witnesses to the crime have been found. Neither is there aught save the story related by Dubox to connect him with the slaying of Sally Thompson and her daughter, and their subsequent cremation.

The prisoner says he saw Mr. Hodges riding along on his horse and that he shot at and missed him. Mr. Hodges called out, asking Dubox if he were shooting at him. The mulatto made answer that the gun had been accidentally discharged and urged Mr. Hodges to come on, as he was not going to hurt him. Mr. Hodges, so Dubox says, rode to within a few yards of where he was standing. Dubox says he again fired on Mr. Hodges. This shot, he says, took effect and Mr. Hodges was instantly killed.

Dubox also told that he had slain the mulatto woman and the little girl, saying he shot the woman and cut the child's throat. He denied having anything to do with the burning of the house and the cremation of his victims.

Whether Mr. Hodges was killed before the other two were slain is not known.

According to the statement made by a citizen, who claims to have passed the home of the old woman some time after midnight, the house was standing and intact. It is the belief, however, that the woman and child were the last to whom death was meted out.

The cold and deliberate manner in which the assassination seems to have been planned and carried out would indicate, the Choctaw county authorities believe, that it is the work, not of an insane person, but of one with some cancied wrong to avenge.

SAVE FORTUNE TO WOMEN

SENSATIONAL CHARGES IN SNELL SUIT AT CLINTON, ILL.

Son Trying to Break Will—Late Millionaire Spent Large Sums on Grand-Niece.

Clinton, Ill.—Testimony was begun Thursday in the suit instituted by Richard Snell, son of Col. Thomas Snell, the late millionaire railroad builder, in the Dewitt county circuit court to break the will which cuts young Snell off with an annuity of but $50.

Sensational statements were made by counsel for the plaintiff to the effect that Col. Snell had expended no less than $300,000 upon women during the last ten years of his life, of which $75,000 had gone to his alleged grandniece, Maybelle Snell, of Kansas City, Mo., now Mrs. McNamara.

The plaintiff stated that letters will be read to the jury that were found among Col. Snell's possessions indicating that society women had cajoled nearly a quarter of a million dollars from the late millionaire.

Richard Snell, who is president of the Dewitt County National bank, alleges that the terms of his father's will were the result of an "evil and wrongful influence" exerted over his father by Mabelle Snell, now Mrs. McNamara.

Col. Snell made his fortune building railroads, including 800 miles of the Illinois Central. During the civil war he commanded the One Hundred and Seventh regiment of Illinois volunteers. He died over a year ago at 90 years of age.

Kansas City, Mo.—Mr. James V. McNamara, formerly Miss Maybelle Snell, was married last November. Her husband is chief deputy sheriff of Jackson county, and the couple live in this city. Mrs. McNamara and her mother, Mrs. Priscilla Snell, declined to discuss the Snell will case.

Miss Snell was left $1,200 a year by the Illinois millionaire. Besides this her relatives gave her securities and deeded lands within the last four or five years amounting to not less than $25,000.

FOUR FIREMEN ARE KILLED.

Many Others Injured In Great Blaze In New York.

New York.—Four firemen went to their deaths Friday night when they responded to a fire that ruined the Parker building, a 12-story business structure occupying the block between East Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets on Fourth avenue.

Fought by half the firemen of Manhattan and apparatus that filled the streets for blocks, the flames were never controlled and only with difficulty were they confined to the building in which they originated. Floor after floor gave way and dropped to the basement and beneath these and crumbling walls no less than 30 firemen were caught and either killed outright or seriously injured. When the fire had burned itself out and the firemen's roll was called, three men of engine company No. 72 and one from fire patrol No. 3 failed to respond.

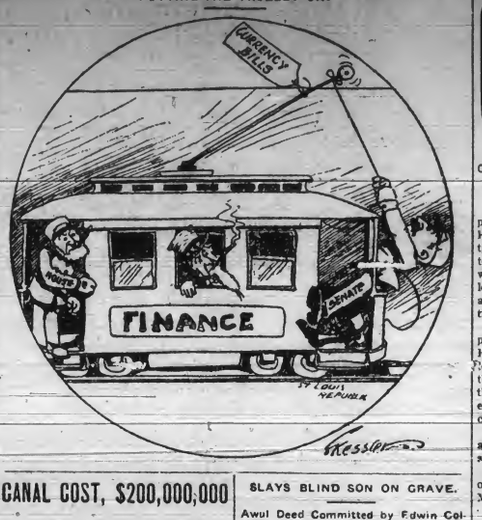
When the casualties began the Florence hotel, which adjoins the burned building on Eighteenth street, was made a temporary hospital, where fire department physicians gave immediate aid to the injured. The monetary loss was estimated at $5,000,000.

RECEIVERS FOR A RAILWAY.

Stickney and C. H. F. Smith Named for Chicago Great Western.

St. Paul, Minn.—Judge Walter H. Sanborn, of the United States circuit court, Wednesday afternoon appointed A. B. Stickney and Charles H. F. Smith, both residents of St. Paul, receivers for the Chicago Great Western railroad. A. B. Stickney is now president of the road. The firm of Kellogg & Severance of St. Paul was appointed attorneys for the receiver.

The appointment of receivers followed the inability of the company to meet obligations falling due in 1908, and the failure to secure an extension of the obligations. Loss as a result of the boilermakers' strike of last fall is given as a partial cause for the financial straits of the road. It was also pointed out in the proceedings that during the last ten years the road has spent $19,000,000 in reconstruction.



Anxiety for Jack London.

It is supposed that the Snark, which is equipped with a gasoline engine, is drifting about as the result of injury to her machinery. Besides London, Mrs. London, two friends and a small crew are in the vessel.

The inspectors place the responsibility for the disaster upon Pilot John L. Anson, now dead, and absolve the crew.

PUTTING THE TROLLEY ON!

CANAL COST, $200,000,000

CHANGED CONDITIONS CAUSE IN CREASE OF ESTIMATE.

Part Will Be Repaid by Panama Government—Reasons for Raising of the Figures.

Washington.—Because of changed conditions from those existing in 1905, when the minority of the board of consulting engineers of the Panama canal submitted its report, it is now admitted in responsible quarters that the estimate made by that report for building the canal was far too low and that the cost may approximate $200,000,000.

This includes various incidental items, such as administration, sanitation and improvements aggregating several millions of dollars in Panama and Colon, which, however, will be refunded by the Panama government; the expenses of the zone government, and various expenses incidental to the relocation and acquisition of the Panama railroad. The estimate of the board in 1905 was that the cost of the canal would be $139,765,200, but this estimate did not include expenses on account of interest during construction, sanitation and zone government.

Last spring the present commission made some general estimates of the probable cost of the work which resulted in placing it anywhere between $210,000,000 and $250,000,000, but the more conservative members believed the lower figure would prove ultimately correct. Since that time some of the commissioners have found that a considerable saving can be made from the lower estimate which warrants them in placing the estimated cost at nearer $200,000,000 than a higher figure. Various reasons are assigned for the increased cost, including wider and longer locks than those proposed by the board of engineers, a greater quantity of excavation than that estimated by the board, an increase in unit prices and higher prices for labor than those thought adequate by the board. That board estimated the locks would cost less than $10,000,000, while the present commission thinks it will be between $52,000,000 and $60,000,000 with a still greater increase of ten per cent. if the locks are further widened as proposed by the navy department.

HEINZE LOSES CONTROL OF BANK

Couldn't Pay for Stock in the Mercantile National.

New York.—Being unable to meet payments due on his stock in the institution Wednesday Augustus Heinze lost control of the Mercantile National, the conduct of which as its president brought about his arraignment in the United States circuit court earlier in the day on charges of over-certification.

One year ago Heinze bought a controlling interest from the Goulds, with whom he pledged his holdings as security for his promise to pay them in full within one year. This loan of $1,200,000 was due Wednesday to Edwin Gould and William Nelson Cromwell, who was a member of the Gould party in the bank before the Mercantile was added to the Heinze-Morse-Thomas chain of financial houses.

SLAYS BLIND SON ON GRAVE.

Awful Deed Committed by Edwin Collier of Ravenna, O.

Ravenna, O.—Edwin Collier, Sr., took his eight-year-old blind son, Edwin, to his wife's grave in Ravenna cemetery some time Thursday night, shot him dead and then put a bullet through his own body, near the heart. He will die.

The bodies were found late Friday afternoon. The little boy's corpse was frozen stiff. Both of the father's feet are frozen and he was unconscious from cold and loss of blood.

A letter found near the scene of the tragedy and declared to be in Collier's handwriting reads: "January 9. —Dear Friends: This is a terrible thing to do but I am tired of life and I know God will forgive me. It seems as though there has been nothing but trouble for me ever since the day I was born. I can't stand it to see my poor little Edwin go through this hard, cold world without his sight, and the doctors have told me they can do nothing for him.

"Besides I am so lonesome for my wife—my poor little Flo. So good by all. What money is left from my insurance, it is my wish that Mrs. Ramsoy have, also my personal belonging. Bury me beside my darling wife and my darling mother. Eddie."

Neighbors declare Collier has been dazed since the death of his wife six months ago. He continually talked about her and brooded over the blind boy's condition, which he had spent much money to relieve.

Five jurors in all were accepted and sworn at the morning and afternoon sessions Friday. As a whole the jury is made up of a most intelligent body of business men, most of whom are of middle age or over. When the panel had finally been completed, after many vexatious delays, and after the exercise of 23 peremptory challenges by the defense and 20 by the people, Thaw announced that he was entirely satisfied and in fact well pleased with the 12 men chosen.

Young Mrs. Thaw, who has watched the selection of the jurors with the keenest interest, also declared that she was well satisfied.

Macomb, Ill.—The safe of the bank of Adair was blown open with nitroglycerin early Friday and $7,700, all the currency in bank, was taken. Two men were seen to leave the car with a valise and a satchel.

INQUIRY URGED

By Newman Into the Tobacco Trouble By the Legislature.

Frankfort, Ky.—Senator J. W. Newman, of Woodford county, offered a resolution in the senate providing for a legislative commission which shall make a thorough investigation of the causes leading up to the tobacco troubles in Kentucky.

As a tentative plan of solution of the troubles the committee is directed to make an investigation into the matter of whether it is possible under the present laws of Kentucky to employ the convicts in the penitentiary in the manufacture of twist and plug tobacco.

It is stated that when several years ago the state of Kansas faced a crisis in its hemp industry similar to that which Kentucky now has in the tobacco situation the inmates of the penitentiary were put to manufacturing products of hemp to so relieve the situation that the hemp growers obtained the relief they were looking for.

Cartridges Proved Worthless.

The unreliability of the rural news as published by the daily papers has been thoroughly established by the exagerated accounts of happenings in this county in the last few months. As an illustration take the account of the jail delivery at this place which appeared in a Cincinnati afternoon paper last Thursday. It contained two accounts of the affair, one of about five lines, in which the only truth was that the two men had escaped. The other account went more into details, but was largely incorrect. The statement that blood hounds and a posse of citizens were in pursuit was wholly false. No one ever thought about calling for blood hounds nor was there any effort made to pursue the fugitives. A local paper that colored its accounts of local events as the daily papers do those from the rural districts would not exist twelve months. If you want the straight, unvarnished truth in regard to the occurrences in a county, take its local paper.

By a recent ruling of the Postoffice Department subscribers to a newspaper are not regarded as legitimate if they are in arrears for the paper for a certain length of time, and the publisher of the paper will be required to pay additional postage on such subscribers. The Department does not deny or question the right of a publisher to extend credit for subscriptions, but if he does he will be expected to pay the penalty by losing the privilege of paying second-class postage rates, as they are accorded a fixed mailing rate. Nearly all country papers carry a great many subscribers who permit themselves to fall in arrears for subscription. The publisher believing that such subscribers will pay, do not discontinue the paper at the expiration of the time paid for, but this recent order of the Department will make it necessary for subscribers to pay up or be cut from the mailing list. The RECORDER has been very lenient with its subscribers, extending to them every favor possible, and it hopes all those who are in arrears will pay up to at least the 1st of January, 1908, at once, and prevent the dropping of their names from the roll. Look at the label on your paper and see to what time your subscription is paid.

SAWED THEIR WAY OUT.

L. C. Applegate and Chas. Hoffman, of Petersburg, who were indicted by the grand jury at the last term of the Boone circuit court, charged with grand larceny, stealing rope, &c., from the distillery at Petersburg, and were in the county jail at Burlington in default of $400 bail each, escaped some time last Wednesday night.

That there had been a jail delivery was not discovered until between 7 and 8 o'clock on Thursday morning when deputy jailer Luther Adams went to the jail to feed his prisoners, and he was startled by the discovery that they had taken French leave some time during the night before. When he opened the jail door the first thing he saw was the large door to the cell corridor standing wide open, while the heavy staple into which the bolt on the cell door worked was broken and lying on the floor. Another glance about him discovered that the grating in the northeast jail window in the lower story had been cut loose and let drop between the iron lining of the jail and the brick wall until the men could pass out over the top of it.

Some one had furnished the prisoners with a saw which they had put to good use. Two of the three-eighths inch rivets that held the staple on the door had been sawed in two above the bolt while the two rivets below were not attacked. When the time came a pressure was applied from the inside of the corridor sufficient to break the large staple off below the bolt. This staple is about two inches wide by one-fourth of an inch thick, and must have made considerable noise when it fell to the iron floor. So soon as the corridor door had been passed the apperture in the window, which some think had been made by a confederate on the outside, was easily reached by mounting the stove, grabbing the iron T joist and then swinging the feet out over the lowered window grating, when the rest was easy.

In effecting the escape it was necessary to remove six bolts, four of which held it in its place the window grating which is composed of one inch horizontal, and perpendicular bars, about an inch apart. The sawing had evidently been done in day light, as the prisoners were put in the cage at night, and the work done on the door could have been done only when that door was open, which was all of every day. That the sawing had been in progress for some time is very evident as a mixture of soap and some other substance had been used to conceal effects of some of the work about the window. One of the men played the mandolin considerable, and it is supposed while he was thus engaged the other was using the saw. The mandolin was left in the jail and to it was attached a note which read, "this mandolin belongs to Mr. Clutterbuck, the storekeeper."

Since the delivery several persons remember of having heard at various times noises about the jail which they now believe had something to do with the escape. Only last Wednesday night about 8:30 o'clock, after the prisoners were locked in the cage, Willie Hughes and Garnett Tolin were going home, and when across the street opposite the jail they heard a noise there that caused the former to remark, "what are those fellows in jail doing? Trying to tear it down?" It is believed that shortly after that hour the men were out and gone, as Luther Adams was near the jail about 9 o'clock and Herbert Kirkpatrick a little later, and they each say not a sound of any kind did they hear about the building. So it looks very much like the men were out at an early hour, and that the noise that brought from William Hughes the above quoted remark was the result of the prisoner's last efforts for liberty, and it may have been caused by the falling of the large iron staple or the adjustment of the grating in the window so they could pass out over it.

The only effort made to intercept the fugitives was the sending of a few telephone messages by Deputy Sheriff Cropper, who thought it might be possible to cut off their escape by that means.

When Elmer Conley, carrier on rural route No. 2, came in Thursday evening, he reported that two strangers, who answered the description of Applegate and Hoffman, were seen in the Grange Hall neighborhood very early Thursday morning, walking at a rapid clip, going towards Big Bone, while Homer Grant, a member of the board of supervisors of tax, who lives about two miles this side of Petersburg on the pike, said that his work hand saw two men pass his house about ten o'clock Wednesday night, walking and going at a good gait in the direction of Petersburg, and it is claimed that the tracks of these two men were seen along the pike as far back towards Burlington as Legrand Gaines.

Applegate and Hoffman each had $25 which they had placed in the hands of the jailer and allowed him to keep until about ten days ago when they called for and received it.

A handle for a small saw, such as is used for cutting iron or steel was found in the jail by Herbert Kirkpatrick. The saw blade had been broken out. This was the only suspicious specimen of any kind that could be found, while of all the bolts that had to be removed the head of only one was discovered. It was a clean cut escape, and pulled off in a style that makes some think one or more confederates were present and assisted, although no strangers had been seen about the town that evening.

There was no difficulty getting a saw into the prisoners as the sash which contains the window lights and closes over the grate in the window is hung on hinges and is easily opened, there being no lock or other fastening. On public days prisoners push these windows open to converse with their friends and can receive from them any article that will pass through an inch square space, and, no doubt the saw used by Applegate and Hoffman was passed into them through the window grating.

It having been understood ever since the cells were put in the jail that they were made of a metal that could be neither sawed nor drilled, the large staple that was broken off of the corridor door was taken to R. S. Crisler for a test of its ability to resist a saw or a drill. It took Mr. Crisler only a few minutes to demonstrate that the metal yields readily to a saw or a drill, such as he uses in his shop. No doubt it would take quite a while for a prisoner to cut out of the cell with a saw made of a case knife, but with a good saw the job would be light.

From the view point of some the absence of Applegate and Hoffman from the jail is the result of a rescue rather than a delivery, and their theory may be correct.

Applegate and Hoffman reached Petersburg, it is said, about one o'clock Wednesday night, when the latter called up his wife, after which a skiff was obtained and the two men crossed the river, and went to Aurora, where they were seen several times on Thursday.

Mrs. Evaline Rice, who resides with her nephew, J. R. Ryle at the mouth of Gunpowder creek, passed the 93d mile stone in her journey through life, yesterday, January 14th. She is a daughter of the late Joshua Rice, who was a pioneer citizen of this county and is the relict of the late Dr. Gill Rice. For a person of such an advanced age Mrs. Rice is well preserved physically, and her mental faculties are not in the least impaired. Her numerous friends wish for her many years more on earth.

The supervisors of tax closed a six days' session about noon, last Saturday, and adjourned to meet again tomorrow to hear from those whose assessments were increased. The board put in all the time last week, working often until after night. Twenty-three lists were increased, the largest increase, $25,000, being given the Boone County Distilling Co.

Mrs. Finn died at the county infirmary last Wednesday night. B. B. Allphin, undertaker at Walton came down and took her remains to Verona for interment. Her husband, Patrick Finn preceded her to the grave only a few months.

Kennedy E. Rea, assistant clerk of the House Committee on Appropriations, has been promoted to an assistant clerkship of the Senate Committee on Appropriations and with the promotion has been handed a salary that increases his annual pay $220.

Mr. Rea is a son-in-law of Mrs. Virginia Scoopmire, of Holton, Indiana. Mrs. Scoopmire is a daughter of Benjamin Aylor, who has a very large number of relatives in this county, and who are glad to hear of Mr. Rea's good luck. He is a self-made man, who grew up a barefooted boy on a farm near Versailles, Indiana. He was introduced to public life by the late W. S. Holman, known the world over as the "Watch dog of the treasury."

County Judge Cason handed the following to the RECORDER for publication. It is a law that is of considerable interest to the public:

"It shall be lawful for any person to kill, or caused to be killed, any dog which he may find roaming at large on his premises without the presence of the owner or keeper of such dog, and to kill or cause to be killed, any dog which may be or may have been found killing, worrying or injuring any cattle outside of the inclosure of the owner of the dog, or any dog having the disease known as the 'rabbies,' or that there are reasonable grounds to believe he has such disease," &c.

The Boone House will go out of business the first of next month unless a landlord is secured by that time. It is a good place for the right man.

The RECORDER is under obligations to Johnnie Cloud, the clever deputy assessor of Hebron, for especial favors granted last Saturday.

A MATRIMONIAL MISSTEP

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1902, by the Author, W. B. Elson.)

SERMONETTE.

"Solomon made affinity with Pharaoh, king of Egypt, and took Pharoah's daughter and brought her into the city of David." Here was the first step in a course which was to work the ruin of Solomon's life.

"Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers," is the Scriptural admonition. It was one of the laws of the Jewish dispensation on which great emphasis was laid, and it is one of the admonitions of the Christian dispensation which is clearly and positively set forth by the Apostle Paul.

Why should this be so? Why cannot we have happy, successful union between the Christian and the non-Christian? The apostle answers the question when he goes on to ask: "for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness?"

There is no relationship in life so intimate and close as that of husband and wife, and hence if such relationship is to be enduring there must be fellowship and communion between the lives thus linked together.

It is then a question as to what direction such fellowship and communion shall take. Will the righteousness dominate the unrighteousness, the light, the darkness? Or will the heart of the worlding lead away from God the one who has pledged himself to God? Will the worldliness stifle and quench the light of God's truth which has shined in the heart?

Almost invariably the marriage of the Christian with the non-Christian works disaster to the faith of the former.

Solomon's union with Pharaoh's daughter was a brilliant political marriage, with every reason from a human and worldly point of view to commend it. It gave him a powerful ally to the south, assuring not only protection from attack from that quarter, but strengthening his hands with the nations to the north and east. It gave a brilliant aspect to the reign of King Solomon and was the beginning of that splendor and magnificence which marked his entire reign. And further, it brought into the national life of Israel a liberal, progressive element which was broadening in its influence, commercially and socially.

And yet in spite of all the temporary advantages which were to accrue, it was an unwise, unsafe, and unholy alliance.

Unwise, because counter to the explicit command of God, and certain it is that violation of God's command ultimately brings ruin.

Unsafe, because it was not only weakening the national ideals of a people wholly set apart to God, but a weakening also of the individual ideals which were going to make the second step away from God easier.

Unholy, because a violation of a righteous principle absolutely essential to the moral and spiritual uplift of the human race. Not even a king could transgress the sacred obligations to God and escape the consequences.

"Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers," is a command as binding upon those who occupy the exalted places of life as it is upon those of more humble station.

THE STORY.

THE choosing of a wife is one of the most important steps of life. It is a matter which must not be considered hastily. Sentiment must not be allowed to run away with judgment or expediency cover up the obligation which one owes to God and God's law. Where love is based on something deeper than mere physical beauty, and on something higher than mere human attainment; in other words, where love includes in its inspiration and its expression the thought of loyalty and devotion to God, then and then only is love a safe guide. Sentiment and passion are not love, and expediency and convenience are sign posts which point to the matrimonial whirlpool of disappointment and ruin. Man was intended for woman and woman for man, but God intended that they should be mated and not mismated. What God joins together is never put asunder.

It was no secret in Israel that a wife was being sought for the young and handsome King Solomon. Since his coming to the throne it had been recognized as one of the important matters requiring solution. With the chief men of the nation and those close to the king in the administration of the affairs of the nation it was a question as to where they should look for a consort for their king.

More than one of the chief men of the nation secretly wished that his own fair daughter might be the one selected to be queen, but each with becoming modesty refrained from openly advancing the claims of their respective daughters, so that apparently no progress was made in the quest for a wife for Solomon.

And perhaps the one least concerned over the matter was Solomon himself. His had been a busy life since coming to the throne. The earnest, devout spirit in which he had entered upon the great obligations of ruling a kingdom had kept him steadfast and faithful to his task. He felt his youth, his inexperience, his limitations, and with the benediction and blessing of the Godly David resting upon him and his example pointing him to God as the source of all wisdom and strength, he had sought the Lord with a great yearning to know and do the divine will. This had become known to all the nation, and after his return to Jerusalem from Gibeon after his remarkable vision in which God had promised him wisdom and riches and honor, he found the chief men and leaders of the people and the people themselves moved by one spirit of love and devotion to the upbuilding of the kingdom. So it had come to pass that the nation was solidified and strengthened and immediately began to feel the stimulus of that aggressive spirit which was to ultimately make of Solomon's kingdom the richest and most prosperous and most enlightened of any of the nations about.

Such remarkable development and progress could not but arouse the interest, if not apprehension, of the neighboring kingdoms, and eagerly steps were taken to show friendly spirit towards the nation of Israel and to invite exchange of treaties whereby both the commercial and the political interests of the two would be served. Thus rapidly did there develop a system of trade relationships, so that there was a constant stream of merchantmen passing to and from Jerusalem. And in this way the matter of choosing a wife for King Solomon became known to the nations about, and it was not long ere brilliant embassies were arriving at Jerusalem with proposals of marriage with the princesses of the neighboring nations, even Egypt sending an offer of the hand of the daughter of Pharaoh.

Good old Nathan, the prophet, was not a little perturbed by this latest development of the situation, and lost no time in reminding King Solomon of the restrictions which the Mosaic law placed upon marriage with the nations about. He would have been glad if the king would have summarily bundled the whole company of ambassadors back to the kingdoms from which they had come, but Solomon was too keen a diplomat for that, and while he did not ignore the admonitions of Nathan, he felt attracted by the brilliant prospects which a foreign alliance offered. And where the soul comes face to face with the question of religious duty or expediency which promises rich and glorious present reward, there is apt to be the struggle which only too often is decided finally in favor of expediency, with the hope and purpose that the religious obligations shall not be forgotten or neglected. So it was with Solomon, and when the messengers came from the king of Egypt they found him more than willing to listen to their proposals.

And again the good and faithful Nathan came to the king and urged upon his heart the absolute claims of God, and with a last parting appeal he left him just as the evening shadows were gathering.

Long the young king sat while the struggle went on in his heart. He was too devout and loyal to God to willfully and absolutely violate the command of God, but he let questionings arise in his heart as to whether the word of God meant just what Nathan urged it did. Was the law of God intended to narrow the life and limit the possibilities? Was serving God a hindrance to success and power? And so as he let the questions and doubts arise it obscured his vision of right until the heart became less sensitive to God's claims and more alive to the advantages to be gained by following the course which desire and reason indicated.

"Why cannot I make this alliance and still maintain my loyalty to God? And what a splendid opportunity it will be of bringing the knowledge of the true God to the Egyptians. See how such alliance will not only advance the material prosperity of the kingdom of Israel, but how it will advance the cause of the God of Israel."

Thus there grew upon his vision the picture of what Israel was yet to become and again he asked himself the question whether he would be doing right not to take advantage of every opportunity of advancing the material prosperity of his kingdom? And as the matter became settled in his own mind, gradually the voice of God ceased to struggle with him on that point, and so a peace came and a settled conviction that the policy of expediency was the right policy.

And so to Nathan the next day the king sent, saying:

"This thing seemeth good to me. See what glory and honor it will bring to the nation of Israel."

TOO MANY STORES

CONDITIONS SOMETIMES FOUND IN NEWER SECTIONS.

IS A POOR BUSINESS POLICY

Good Judgment in Amount of Trade Storekeeper Can Control Is Great Essential to Success.

There is such a thing as overdoing business. There are numerous illustrations of this condition in the newer sections of the west. Towns are built up before the country is fairly settled, and there is little besides the town trade to support the business concerns. There will be several general stores to supply what one good store should look after.

This is poor policy. There are certain conditions that indicate whether there is room in a town or a community for a business concern. It is a well-known fact that the people require just so much food, so much clothing, so much this and that essential to living, and while one family or person may consume more than another certain person, when the average is made it will be found that each spends so much during the year. This being the case, it is an easy matter for the man contemplating establishing a store to estimate about the amount of trade that he can safely hope to control. If he oversteps the limit, he is sure to meet with disaster. Where there are more stores than is justified some dealer must conduct an unprofitable business. It is generally the one who has poor business ability. The experienced and the capable always win, but it is seldom that the astute and careful merchant seeks a location in an overworked field.

Where there are too many business men in a town, there is always heard complaints of dull business. The field is generally made an overdone one by the classes which may be rightly called "pikers" or small-caliber merchants, who see one storekeeper in a place doing fairly well, and conclude that there is a chance for themselves to make a little easy money. The result is poor business for all, and eventually failure. It is poor judgment in matters of this kind that runs up the list of general store failures above the average in other lines.

It is important that the one looking for a good location for a store of any kind, pick out a field where there is need of the class of business establishment that he contemplates starting, and where there shall be patronage enough to make the undertaking a success. Unless this matter he carefully investigated, one runs a risk.

In a new country the towns are generally built up first, and the agricultural section settled up in a gradual way. Settlers are not always a wealthy class, and are not the most liberal buyers. Still they must have necessities supplied, and here is where the new town storekeeper gets his principal business. A store is always successful in a thickly populated community, if the management is such as to draw trade. In the large city all that is essential for success is capital and brains to rightly conduct the business undertaken, for there is always a large mass of people to do the buying, and they will turn their trade to the merchant that throws out the proper inducements to them, and satisfies them the best. In the country, or small town, things are different and business must be conducted on a different basis. Where there is not population enough to consume any great amount of goods, it would be foolhardy to try to build up a great business, for trade is regulated entirely by the wants of the people, and their wants are according to their customs, their success and tastes.

Pointer for the Merchant.

A thing that is more or less a constant source of annoyance to the general storekeeper, as well as his patrons, is the matter of arranging goods so that there is the right kind of display, protection for the goods from dust and dirt, and all arranged with a view of ready access. It is necessary that there be places for hundreds of different articles. Go into some stores, ask for a certain thing, a clerk may take several minutes in looking it up. Not long ago a man called at a general store and asked the proprietor for some small wax candles to be used for ornamentation purposes. The storekeeper said that he had them. Then commenced a search of the premises. Corners were looked into, boxes examined, and no candles found. The storekeeper was positive that he had them in stock, and finally after an hour's search found the candles stored away in a small box under the counter. It required an hour of valuable (?) time to find ten cents' worth of candles.

The up-to-date merchant will have a place for everything and everything in its place, well displayed and easy of access. In the grocery store there should be bins and drawers, shelves and cases for all the stock. Store furniture manufacturers are continually devising improved means of caring for stocks and displaying the same. But it matters not how perfect the store arrangement is the way of furniture and fixtures, there must be system employed. Sales are lost every day by not having goods arranged rightly. The buyer of groceries dislikes to go into a store where there is a barrel of sugar uncovered affording a feast for the flies and a stopping place for the dust; neither does the man have his appetite for cheese or other like things whetted by seeing the arrangement suggestive of filth.

GENERALLY OF POOR GRADE.

Sales of Cheap Jewelry by Mail Amount to Millions Annually.

The report of the sales of one large mail order house showed nearly a half millions of dollars' worth of jewelry and silverware sold annually. Take the total of all the jewelry sold by the mail order system of business and it is likely to amount to fully $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 annually.

If the people could be made to understands what kind of stuff in the watch and jewelry lines is generally sent out by the mail order houses they would be more careful in buying. The guarantee of these houses amounts to little, regardless of the millions of dollars of capital they may have employed in the business. All the guarantee binds them to do is to supply a new case if the one does not wear for "the 20-year period." Not one case in one thousand, even though they do not last five years, are returned to the concern for exchange. The cases are generally lowest grade, and made to order for the concerns. Not long since the manager of one of the catalogue houses called upon a large watch manufacturing concern. By the way this company would not sell the company its own trade-marked watches unless there was an agreement not to cut prices. However, before the manager left he had agreed for several thousand watches to be supplied them. Those watches were of a certain grade, were sold at prices lower than good watches could be assembled and tested. These watches have the special marks of the concern, but not the name.

In rings, emblems, all classes of jewelry, the mail order kind is the cheapest. Should something of a superior character be listed, it will be noted that prices are as high as the local dealer asks. In silverware is where the catalogue house gets in its fine work on patrons. Plated ware is generally sold according to the amount of silver, the weight to the piece or the dozen pieces, used in the plating and the amount of carved work, etc. Like other goods, the mail order house handles a class of ware that is lightly plated and inferior to that which is handled in the regular stores.

THE LAWS OF COMMERCE.

Consumption of Products in Accordance with Fixed Principles.

It is useless to fight for innovations and reforms that are not based upon logic and sustained by sound principles. There is too much of the superficial in evidence in the work of many who undertake to better commercial conditions. The scientist knows better than to ignore the laws of gravity in his calculations. The reformer is foolish to set about his work with an idea of disobeying any known natural law. He is sure to meet with failure. There are conditions in the commercial world that must be observed. Trade is in accordance with requirements of the people, and these requirements are according to other relative circumstances. As our civilization advances new demands manifest themselves. While a hundred years ago the people were satisfied with certain commodities, it was because other things known to us did not exist. The expenses of living keep relatively the same. We have statistics that show the average requirements of a certain class of people. We know to a certainty how the average runs. We cannot tell how much a single man will spend for living during a year, but we do know the average that each in a thousand or two thousand men will spend, classifying them as to occupation and earning capacity. Therefore it stands to reason that in every community the amount of trade is in accordance with the population and the classes of people composing the community. It is useless to argue that trade can be increased by certain methods. A certain merchant by advanced methods may increase his trade, but as he does so some one else loses proportionately. Reformers and business-builders should bear these facts in mind, and not get their "wires crossed."

Right Kind of Advertising.

Not long since in a western town of some 7,000 population the merchants had an illustration of what can be done by judicious advertising. The proprietor of a clothing and dry goods store decided that he would add a grocery department. This was met with the disapproval of other merchants in the town, particularly the grocers. They combined and commenced an advertising campaign directed chiefly against him. Small space was used. They were greatly surprised one morning to find that the object of their attention had in the daily paper a four-page advertisement. They were further suprised when the weeklies of the surrounding towns came out with one and two-page advertisements, offering wonderful bargains and to pay the railroad fare of those who would purchase a certain amount of goods. For miles around the town large posters announced the great sale. Other merchants of the town looked upon the venture as foolish, and predicted that there was something wrong, a failure or a fire in sight. Neither happened, but in two weeks' time the enterprising storekeeper, who advertised to sell 25 pounds of granulated sugar for a dollar, when the jobbing price was more than five dollars a hundred, provided the purchaser ordered other goods, did a business amounting to more than $16,000, or as much business as the average small storekeeper does in a year. Not alone that, but he is still doing the biggest business in the town. He advertised rightly.

FEATHER BED IS INSANITARY.

Doctor Explains Why It Should Not Be Used.

"Everybody tells me," said a Washington business man to a doctor friend on the car, according to a Star reporter, "that you medical men condemn feather beds. I want to know the answer."

"Well," said the physician, "it's because the feather beds are highly hygroscopic."

"And who is he?"

"That means," laughed the doctor, "that feathers readily absorb and condense moisture. The body is constantly throwing off waste matter through the skin and lungs. The feathers in the bed will absorb this waste matter as readily as they will simple atmospheric moisture. The feathers retain the waste matter during the day when the bed is cold—even when it is aired, unless also warmed by sunshine during the time it is exposed to the air.

"At night, when the body of the sleeper warms the bed the feathers renew their hygroscopic action and throw off the wast[illegible] absorbed the night before. The susceptible body of the sleeper is soon surrounded by a dense and highly poisonous atmosphere, the accumulative effect of which cannot help but be very injurious.

"The skin, like the lungs, is continually breathing, and is very sensitive to external influences. Hence arises the need for air baths as well as for water baths. The entire body should be exposed to fresh air every day for as long a time as you can make possible, and all beds should be thoroughly ventilated."

Costly Government.

The government of New York city will spend more than twice as much in the coming year as the government of the United States spent in the year before the civil war. As late as 1877, only 30 years ago, the expenditures of the national government, aside from interest on public debt, were less than those of New York city now. That included the whole cost of the army and navy, pensions, public buildings, river and harbor improvements, the diplomatic service, the care of the Indians, the support of the president, congress and the entire civil service, and all the incidental expenses of a nation of nearly fifty million people. At the present time the whole empire of Japan runs its government, aside from interest on its war debt, for a little over two-thirds the cost of running the municipal government of the city of New York. That navy which some European observers think is going to swallow our own costs less than $15,000,000 a year for ordinary expenses, with an extra allowance last year of a little over $5,000,000 more. That army which won the greatest three battles of modern times costs about $25,000,000. New York pays more for public schools alone than Japan for her army and navy combined. Perhaps that comparison may be a credit to New York.—Collier's.

Oh! Yes; He Knew Them.

Not long ago Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wilcox took a trip to Jamaica. Mrs. Wilcox is better known to the reading world as "Ella Wheeler Wilcox."

As the ship sailed out of New York harbor, Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox were joined on the deck by one of those self-sufficient beings who are on every passenger list.

Without invitation this passenger plumped himself down by them and opened a conversation. He claimed the acquaintance of almost every literary person of prominence in New York and after a time he spoke of Ella Wheeler Wilcox—evidently not having examined the passenger list.

"Do you know her?" asked Mrs. Wilcox, calmly.

"Do I know her!" exclaimed the stranger, "I should say I do. Know her husband, too—Robert Wilcox—Bob Wilcox' we call him. Oh, yes; Bob Wilcox is a fine fellow!"

"I'm glad you think so," said Mr. Wilcox, cordially, "for I am Robert Wilcox and this is my wife."

A Stunning Surprise.

Congressman George W. Taylor was talking in Demopolis, Ala., about the hard times.

"Hard times are bound to be full of unpleasant shocks and stunning surprises," he said. "I remember the last panic and a sermon that a Mobile pastor preached.

"The pastor, in a powerful discourse, urged economy and retrenchment on his congregation. In view of the hard times there should be no extravagance, no useless expenditure, he said, but every outgo ought to be pared down.

"His strong sermon had a swift and unexpected effect. The congregation, before dispersing, held a church meeting and unanimously reduced the man's salary from $2,000 to $1,500."

Advice to Theorist.

"What kind of views would you advise me to set forth in my next lecture tour?" inquired the habitual orator.

"Well," answered the coldly practical theorist, "if I were you I'd get some stereopticon views."—Washington Star.

Naturally.

"Now," said the teacher, "suppose you had a dime and lost three cents, how much would you have—"

"Pardon me," interupted the precise Boston boy, "but if it was a dime I should have had to get it changed first."

NATURE AND A WOMAN'S WORK

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

Nature and a woman's work combined have produced the greatest remedy for woman's ills that the world has ever known.

In the good old-fashioned days of our grandmothers they relied upon the roots and herbs of the field to cure disease and mitigate suffering.

The Indians on our Western Plains to-day can produce roots and herbs for every ailment, and cure diseases that baffle the most skilled physicians who have spent years in the study of drugs.

From the roots and herbs of the field Lydia E. Pinkham more than thirty years ago gave to the women of the world a remedy for their peculiar ills, more potent and efficacious than any combination of drugs.

Mrs. Bertha Muff, of 515 N. G. St., Louisiana, Mo., writes:

"Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my troubles public.

"For twelve years I had been suffering with the worst forms of female ills. During that time I had eleven different physicians without help. No tongue can tell what I suffered, and at times I could hardly walk. About two years ago I wrote Mrs. Pinkham for advice. I followed it, and can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice restored health and strength. It is worth mountains of gold to suffering women."

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Muff, it will do for other suffering women.

AND SHE BELIEVED HIM.

After This Who Can Doubt the Power of Love?

George had been away on business for a whole long week, and during that time he had sent Clara ten letters, six letter-cards and 42 picture postcards.

Why, then, was there a touch of coldness in her greeting when he flew to her arms on his return?

"Dearest," he whispered, "what is the matter?"

"Oh, George," she said, "you didn't send a kiss in your ninth letter."

"My precious," he replied, "that night I had steak and onions for dinner, and you wouldn't have liked a kiss after onions, would you?"

And, such is the unfathomable power of love, she was satisfied, and nestled to him.

TIME TO GO SLOW

GRAVE DANGER STILL IN FINANCIAL SITUATION.

Unsound Republican Policies Have Brought the Country to the Verge of a Serious Crisis—Will the Voters Awake?

Horace Greeley, with his homely wisdom, advised the financiers and politicians who feared to resume specie payments that "the way to resume is to resume." Are the finances of today in worse case than when Greeley gave that advice about 30 years ago? Have unsound Republican financial policies and economic heresies so atrophied the financiers that they fear to trust the public with their own money? The constant declaration that "the protective platform is panic proof" and the boast of the Republican national platform that a Republican tariff always produces prosperity is saved to be but idle talk to catch the votes of those who knew no better but also now enlightened by financial panic and business depression.

How much longer must the people wait before congress acts to stop the leaks and patch up the old Republican hulk that is rolling without rudder in the financial sea of distress? The boast that the Republican party "does things" may be of advantage on a campaign banner, but is useless in times like these, when confidence in the G. O. P. is departed and banks and individuals are afraid to trust each other, and, least of all, to trust their political servants.

If you have a good large bank deposit in New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Pittsburg or lesser towns, or in the country banks, when you present your check all that is offered you is a clearing house certificate, good only as between the banks in the place where issued. This virtual bankruptcy of the banks—the Republican national banks, mind you, with nearly $250,000,000 of the money from the United States treasury on deposit, drawing no interest—is the result of financial sins of commission and omission of long standing. The majority of the people of the United States have brought themselves to this pass by their blind allegiance to the party of boasters, but imbeciles, that have failed to make good. All the national banks in New York had on December 3 but $182,000,000 of cash to pay their $1,320,000,000 of gross deposits, and their total liabilities are $450,000,000 greater than that, or $1,570,000,000 in all. Yet the banks must soon resume cash payments, although the New York banks have less by over $40,000,000 on hand than the legal requirement of 25 per cent. of their deposits.

To tide over the resumption of cash payments will require the assistance of the public and the greatest conservatism of depositors in withdrawing their deposits. If 25 per cent. of the money in the banks is called for there will be trouble to the banks, and that means loss to the depositors. Everyone should, therefore, be prudent until normal conditions prevail. The business depression that will now follow the panic will make money more plentiful in a month or two, because the business of the country will not require so much money to take care of it and speculation in Wall street securities and real estate will be at the minimum for a time. While the financial adjustment is taking place there may be trouble in spots, but this can be overcome by economy in spending and economy in borrowing, and helping the banks to recover their equilibrium. Don't expect any aid from congress; nothing congress is likely to do will give present relief, and the country will be lucky if the panic-stricken Republican majority does anything that will be of aid for the future.

The Powers That Be.

Under our present extraordinary administration the process of centralization goes on apace. As every one knows, the executive departments have nothing to do with congress, except to draw the money appropriated with regularity and after spending it report what has been done with it. The president alone has power under the constitution to recommend such measures as he may deem necessary for the public business. But President Roosevelt's young men whom he has made members of his cabinet seem to imagine that they are the whole shooting match, and that it is not only necessary for them to run their departments but to force on the attention of congress such measures as they desire enacted into law. Thus on December 10, Mr. Garfield, secretary of the interior, introduced into congress no less than 13 bills, through communications to the senate. Possibly these measures may be of the utmost necessity or advantage, but the interior department was created for carrying out the laws that congress may see fit to pass, as far as they relate to matters over which that department has supervision and no further. When congressmen want information from the executive departments upon which to base a bill to reform some abuses, they often find it impossible to get the necessary information, because forsooth the matter does not meet the approbation of the young man in charge of affairs. Such is one form of centralization.

A Gotham minister says that neither Washington nor Lincoln could fill President Roosevelt's place. Without disparagement to the present incumbent of the presidency, it might be remarked that both gentlemen lived to exceedingly strenuous times, and proved quite equal to all emergencies.

LITTLE HARMONY IN PARTY.

The anti-third term declaration of President Roosevelt appears to have muddied the Republican waters instead of clearing them. More candidates have been brought forward by their friends since the announcement, and the race for the nomination is so open that the political forecasters are all at sea. When the situation clarifies, as it will later, it will be found that a great struggle is impending for control of the Republican party between Roosevelt and the reactionaries. At present there would seem to be but one candidate representing the Roosevelt policies, for Senator La Follette is for some reason not acceptable to the president, and only Secretary Taft can be looked upon as being backed by the president. Fairbanks, Cannon, Knox, Foraker and Cortelyou are all reactionaries branded with "the mark of the beast"—Wall street. It is true Gov. Hughes is regarded as a reformer, but for some reason he is not acceptable to Mr. Roosevelt, perhaps because he is too independent to lie down and receive the Roosevelt brand.

In the past it has always been possible for the administration to control the national convention for a second term, but when it comes to handing the mantle to some one else there has often been failure. Political parties are compelled to indorse their leaders and their administration of affairs. To do otherwise would be to admit failure. So whatever the next Republican convention does, as to platform and candidates, it will, even if controlled against President Roosevelt, be compelled to indorse him. The party leaders must do that in self-defense or place themselves on the defensive, and that politicians always seek to avoid.

It is probable that the fight in Ohio will settle the control of the convention. If Senator Foraker should succeed in securing the majority of the delegates to the state convention, and is indorsed for president, that will about settle the Taft boom, although the delegates from some of the congressional districts may have instructed for him. But President Roosevelt is a smart politician, and if he can hold the delegates from New York, and with those from the west, and such from the south as patronage will control, he may still be able to master the convention, if not for Taft, for some one not yet named. There is a possibility that the Republican convention may be deadlocked, and no candidate be able to secure a majority, for this fight for control is becoming so bitter between the rival factions that to be defeated may mean four years of leanness for the losers.

But when the time comes, the coesive power of public plunder will draw the factions closer together, and a compromise candidate will probably be nominated who perhaps has not been even mentioned to-day. The great art of politics is compromise. Half a loaf is better than no bread to the great and little politician, and years of experience has made our Republican friends the greatest adepts in the game of giving and taking.

Liberal Denver.

The criticism of Republican organs of the action of the Democratic national committee in accepting the offer of $100,000 in cash from Denver for holding the national convention there is based on nothing. There is no question of tainted money, as those critics would have us believe. There can be no attempt to coerce the convention or platform or candidate, for the Democratic committee will have the money in its war chest before the convention acts. It was purely a matter of business and the only people that have any cause for kicking are those delegates or Democratic visitors to the convention who are called upon to pay greater railroad fares than they would have had to pay had the convention been held in Chicago or Louisville. It virtually amounts to Denver making a subscription to the Democratic national committee of $75,000, for the actual expenses of the convention are but $25,000, and those delegates with visitors who have to pay the larger railroad fare and expenses are assessed this extra amount by the Denver entertainers when the time comes.

Tainted money is always secretly paid. The Denver bonus is paid openly and above board, and there is no possible way in which there can be anything improper in receiving it. It will be mighty handy for the committee and us "our friends the enemy" pay the most of the money, it may prevent them from making their usual donation to the Republican corruption fund, which is a double gain to the Democracy.

The Simple Life.

With simplified spelling, the simple life, the simple cocktail, the simple bear hunts at public expense, the simple deal—Mr. Hearst, the simple control of all the railroads and interstate industrial corporations, the simple blackmailing of the trusts, the simple deception of all gullible voters into the belief that malefactors of great wealth will be lodged in jail and bad trusts be made to bite the dust, Mr. Roosevelt is certainly a wonder.

Cannon and Labor.

There is said to be no chance for the success of the parcels post and postal savings bank projects so long as Mr. Cannon remains speaker of the house. He seems to have run them through his canceling machine. Possibly he thinks that they might benefit his old and virile enemies among the labor unior

BALKED BY A TRIFLE.

She Shattered His Magnificent Dreams of the Future.

She was a Manhattan miss of four and a half years, as dainty and demure a bit of the eternal feminine as ever coquetted with the lordly male. He had just passed his fifth birthday, strong and sturdy, with the self reliance and protecting spirit of the truly masculine. For eight weeks they had been playmates, romping and bubbling over with life, and surprising all by their freedom from childish strife. Now he was going away. His father was dead and his mother had made arrangements to place him in school.

"When I come back from school I'm goin' to bring you lots o' things," he said, as he kicked at the base of one of the big stone posts in front of the apartment house.

"What are you going to bring me?" she asked with a visible increase in interest.

"I'm goin' to bring you a horse."

"Oh, a horse!"

"An' a carriage—"

"Oh, won't that be nice!" Clapping of hands.

"An' a big house—"

"Oh—oo!"

"An' a motorbeel."

"Yes," she applauded faintly, "and won't you bring me some candy?"

He pondered heavily.

"No, I don't believe I can," he hesitated. "I'll have to ask mamma to get that. She's got all the pennies."

Thus did the insignificant concrete problem of the present shatter the magnificent dreams of the future.

"I'd lots rather have candy," said the little maid.

Seattle's War on Rats.

"We have begun arresting people in Seattle who fail to comply with a recently passed ordinance relating to rats," said Dr. S. J. Fowler of the state of Washington. "Just before I left home two butchers were haled into court for violating the law, in that they had failed to make their premises ratproof.

"After the law was passed the police went about informing all market men, grocers and dealers in food products that they must fortify their houses against the rodents or else be liable to arrest. The purpose fas to cut off the rats from their sources of sustenance, and thereby make easier their extermination. The butchers arrested did not try to make their places of business secure against the entrance of the pests, and they will no doubt have to suffer.

"We have slain tens of thousands of the rats since the campaign of destruction began and are beginning to breathe more freely, for at one time it was the fear of our medical men that they might spread the bubonic plague that had appeared in San Francisco and cause a frightful sacrifice of human lives.

Golden Rose of Virtue.

The pope has decided to bestow the Golden Rose of Virtue on the queen of Spain. This is the highest order which the pope can confer on a Catholic princess. The Golden Rose, which was first presented by Pope Urban VI. to Joanna of Sicily, is a mimic plant of pure gold standing in a golden pot. The leaves of the plant are set with small diamonds in imitation of dewdrops.

SINKS AND DRAINS A FREQUENT CAUSE OF TYPHOID

Purify These and You Will Be Safe From Contagion.

DISINFECTING THE ONLY PREVENTIVE

Borax, a Simple, Safe and Sure Method.

How to keep our homes clean, sweet and free from germ influences is a question.

While there is no occasion for alarm, it is always well to be forearmed on the theory that "An Ounce of Prevention Is Better Than a Pound of Cure," and no ounce of prevention has yet been discovered that is more simple, more direct and more effective, yet harmless to the human system, than Borax.

Borax has been known and used for generations as a purifier and preventive against epidemic influences originating from unclean conditions resulting from unsanitary sinks and drains, and when used as a hot solution in the proportion of two tablespoonfuls to a gallon of hot water flushed through the offending locations, removes every trace of disease germs and renders the pipes clean and wholesome.

Borax in addition to its hygienic qualities, is a household necessity, and can be used for numberless domestic purposes. It softens the water, makes linen dazzling white, will cleanse every article in the kitchen or dining room and make it bright, will prevent moths, soften and whiten the skin, remove dandruff and cleanse the scalp, and for cleansing and sterilizing baby's milk bottle and nipple has no equal.

Borax, unlike every other cleanser and disinfectant, is absolutely harmless to the system, and is safe, simple, economical, and can be purchased at any druggist or grocery. A dainty book in colors, called the "Jingle Book," will be sent free to any Mother sending name and address of her baby and tops from two one-pound cartons of "20-Mule-Team" Borax, with 5c in stamps. Address Pacific Coast Borax Co., Chicago, Ill.

A Busy Locality.

Jack is the eight-year-old son of a Philadelphia suburban merchant, and not long ago made his first visit to New York with his father. The strenuosity of the big town got on the boy's nerves, and by bedtime he was about run down. He tumbled into bed quite regardless of certain duties, but his father was more observant.

"Don't forget to say your prayers, my boy," he said.

"O, what's the use, pop?" responded the boy. "God's too busy over here to bother with a little thing like that."

The father was shocked, but under the circumstances he thought it best not to urge his son.—Lippincott's Magazine.

OF SUCH STUFF ARE DREAMS.

Little Virginia Imagined She Had "Eated Herself."

Little Virginia, three years old, brought her mother to her nursery a few nights ago with heartbroken wails.

"What is the matter, dearie? Why are you screaming so?"

"Mamma, am I all here?"

"Certainly you are all here, right in your bed."

"But, mamma, feel of me, see if I'm all here. Are my feet here and the top of my head, both?"

"Certainly, Virginia, every bit of you is here, tucked in your little trundle bed. Why do you think you are not?"

"I dreamed"—this with another great sob—"I dreamed I was a chocolate stick and I had eated myself."

TWO CURES OF ECZEMA

Baby Had Severe Attack—Grandfather Suffered Torments with It—Owe Recovery to Cuticura.

"In 1884 my grandson, a babe, had an attack of eczema, and after trying the doctors to the extent of heavy bills and an increase of the disease and suffering, I recommended Cuticura and in a few weeks the child was well. He is to-day a strong man and absolutely free from the disease. A few years ago I contracted eczema, and became an intense sufferer. A whole winter passed without once having on shoes, nearly from the knees to the toes being covered with virulent sores. I tried many doctors to no purpose. Then I procured the Cuticura Remedies and found immediate improvement and finalcure. M. W. LaRue, 845 Seventh St., Louisville, Ky., Apr. 23 and May 14, '07."

Shielded.

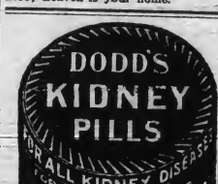
"I suppose you think you could run the government better than we do?" said the statesman.

"I do," answered the energetic citizen.

"And I do not doubt you are happy and hopeful in that belief?"

"I am."

"It is a beautiful state of mind. It would be a pity to destroy it by allowing you to be elected to office."



Where She Should Live.

"What under the sun," asked a father of his daughter who wanted her to make a match with a young man whose only qualification was the possession of a goodly fortune—"what earthly objection can you possibly find to Mr. Spriggins?"

"He has habits," replied the daughter, "which I detest! When I marry I want a husband who does not smoke, chew, drink, swear, belong to clubs, play cards, stay out late or go motoring by himself."

The father looked at his daughter for a moment or two in silence and then said:

"My child, you are but a stranger here; heaven is your home."

Considerable grippe in the country.

There has been a slump in the fur trade as well as in others, and the local fur dealers are not doing the usual amount of business this winter.

A Higher Health Level.

"I have reached a higher health level since I began using Dr. King's New Life Pills," writes Jacob Springer, of West Franklin, Maine. "They keep my stomach, liver and bowels working just right." If these pills disappoint you on trial, money will be refunded at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger, 25c.

It Does The Business.

Mr. E. E. Chamberlain, of Clinton, Maine, says of Bucklen's Arnica Salve. "It does the business; I have used it for piles and it cured them. Used it for chapped hands and it cured them. Applied it to an old sore and it healed it without leaving a scar behind." 25c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

THAT GRADED SCHOOL.

It is a pity, but nevertheless true, that only about two persons in Burlington are taking any interest in Edgar Riley's effort to establish a school here that would be a credit to the town and a benefit to every property owner in the town or within a reasonable distance thereof. The time has come when a locality or community that is without a good school has to take a back seat when its advantages as a desirable place to locate are being looked over. In the matter of education this part of the county lost interest many years ago in so far as an attempt to maintain a good local high school is concerned, and the spirit of disinterestedness has grown until it is hard to secure a good teacher for the public school even with the aid of the public money. This is not as it should be in any community that claims to be enlightened, and it is a pity that all can not see that it would be an advantage to everybody in or near Burlington to maintain such a school as Mr. Riley proposes to start here. There is only one thing about it and that is this: If the people of Burlington want such a school as Mr. Riley proposes they must come forward and help make it, and they must not be long about it, as at another point in the county his services are desired. It is useless to attempt to enumerate the advantages a graded school would be to this community as they are so apparent that a blind man can see them. Some argue that there are not pupils enough here for such a school. They are not familiar with the history of other good schools in the county—get the school and the pupils will come, and in a short time all these vacant houses in Burlington will be occupied and there will be a demand for more.

A GRAND GOOD TIME.

J. B. Rouse, the bachelor grocer, had a great time at his suburban home, one night last week, the occasion being a leap year party, the first of the season in this part of the county. The "standing room only" sign was displayed at an early hour, and the lusty host wished his domicile was a Havlin or Sinton, that all comers could be made comfortable. Popular parlor games were indulged in and everybody had a grand good time until after twelve, when the guests skidooed, hoping to have the pleasure again soon of enjoying Mr. Rouse's hospitality. As an entertainer the efforts of the host on this occasion have seldom been equaled and never surpassed, and some have been cruel enough to suggest that he was endeavoring to pave the way for acquiring the services of a hostess should be ever again be the chief entertainer on a like occasion. It is hoped by his many friends that some good woman will see her way clear to divide honors with him next time. Saying this is leap year is only a hint to the wise woman.

G. F. SCHRAM,
J. C. BROWN,
C. H. TANNER. } Committee:

In memory of Albert Clutterbuck, who died Dec. 15th, 1907, a member of Venus Lodge No. 154 I. O. O. F.

He was one of the noblest types of manhood. He was ever prompt and faithful in the discharge of duty, an untiring laborer in the cause of Odd-Fellowship.

He accepted the principles of our order and practiced them in his life without undue show. He believed fully in the great truth that God is the common father of all mankind, and as brothers we are bound to care for our fellowman, and if possible do him good.

What he did for Odd-Fellowship he did without ostentation, egotism or selfaudation, and without thought of reward for his acts.

He was a consistent and devoted Odd-Fellow from the time of his initiation to death.

Truthfully it can be said he died in harness, devoted to his duties to the last.

His death coming as it did, in the early afternoon of his matured manhood, is an irreparable loss to his family, as well as to the order he loved.

He has gone, we will miss his genial face, his cheery voice, his pleasant words, his cordial greeting, but we shall meet again, and associate with him when we, too, shall have passed to that great beyond.

Committee—D. W. Brown.

They started on a tour of investigation, and soon they came upon the two men, who, when asked what they were doing, said they were out coon hunting. The McMurrays returned to the house, but kept a watch on the two lights, which disappeared at the barn. They made a second investigation, and were startled by the discovery of a pile of shingles and other kindling material piled in the middle of the barn floor as though a fire was to be started. The discovery of the two men and this suspicious pile of rubbish accumulated in the barn by unknown hands caused the McMurrays to watch the barn that night.

We have in our community four prospective candidates for various county offices when the proper time comes. They will be for sheriff, clerk, assessor, and county judge, and any others expecting to offer for said offices would better lay that notion aside, for these men we have in mind will win in a walk, and it would only be political suicide for others to offer.

Having received several hundred letters of late requesting me to answer queries, and the writers not being willing to take no for an answer, I will do the best I can:

A certain old bacheior at Rabbit Hash told his best girl, recently, that if she refused to marry him he would get a rope and hang himself in the front yard, when she exclaimed, "oh, please don't! You know pa don't want you hanging around here." He does not know exactly how to take the answer.

C. G. R.—Tell the old maid if she objects to your bald head that you was bald headed when you was young, and your hair grew out, and maybe it will do so again. Perhaps that will pacify her.

Mollie—I don't think the boys mean any disrespect when they call you "Earthquake." I think because you have shaken so many of them is the reason they call you by that name.

Y Frank H.—I can hardly blame your wife for being angry at you if you persist in smoking cigars made of cabbage leaves.

Wife at R. H.—I think the reason your husband insists on smoking such a strong pipe, against your wishes, is because you slured him when he went to the barber to have his hair cut, by remarking, "It must be easy for a wooden headed man to have his hair shingled." Apologize and maybe he will quit smoking.

A strange dog, the actions of which were suspicious, appeared at the residence of John Hogan in Mt. Zion neighborhood, on the 12th inst. The animal soon left Mr. Hogan's, when he called his neighbors by telephone until the dog was located at B. F. Norman's on Gunpowder, where it was after a flock of ducks. The dog was killed, being suspected of having hydrophobia. The dog was a cross of a hound and rat terrior.

Inquiries the past week of persons from quite a number of neighborhoods in the county justify the conclusion that a very small acreage of tobacco will be planted this year. A large majority of the growers are members of the Society of Equity, and a very large per cent of those who do not belong to the organization are in sympathy with the movement and will not pitch a crop. These two classes constitute a very large proportion of the growers, which will influence many of those who are not in sympathy with the Equity movement. Unless there is a very great change in the next few weeks the 1908 crop of tobacco in Boone county will be too small to cut any figure whatever in the price.

The Money in It.

Joe Chapple, editor of the National Magazine, is moved to observe that if the human race could be all happy by habit, or even moderately rational, there would be little bitterness, and no more of the absolutely needless sacrifice of the nobler and uplifting emotions of mankind. "To-day," he says, "we offer human sacrifices just as truly as did the Aztecs, and our shafts of sarcasm and persecution cut as deep as any sacrificial knife of old, beneath which the human blood gushed out and stained the great stone slab on which the victim lay bound. True, those who suffered in the old days were not all helpless victims—some went to the stake cheerfully content to die for their convictions. They are now made victims for personal revenge and public honors, which could never be attained except by slaying those in power, over whose prostrate forms the ambitious grasp the chaplet of glory they covet, but which they, too, some day will find only a broken bauble. It has been said that the way to appeal to an Englishman is through his stomach; let it not be said with equal truth that the way to appeal to an American is through his purse. Too many great questions to-day are considered on the basis of whether or not there is money in it; but all manhood cannot be bought with gold, or the nation's sense of justice dulled by pecuniary gain. Ruskin was one who loved his fellow-man. This great man said: 'The sum of enjoyment depends not on the quantity of things tasted, but on the vivacity and patience of taste.'"

American Women Slow.

American women seem slow in utilizing one of the greatest labor saving devices ever invented for the householder. Several years ago fireless stoves or self-cookers came into use in Germany. They consist of boxes, constructed with doublewalls, containing material that prevents the escape of heat. The food is first thoroughly heated on an ordinary stove, then placed inside the box, sealed and left until wanted, when it is taken out, steaming hot, and with all the flavors retained that, by the ordinary process of cooking, are dissipated. American men promptly utilized this discovery; fireless stoves have been found invaluable by the army in the west. Why have the women remained apathetic? Is it because the self-cooker, as at first constructed, was available only for boiling or stewing food? If so, there is no further excuse for holding back, for, as Consul General John W. Dye writes from Berlin, there is now on the market an improved fireless stove that not only cooks, but fries and roasts, with the aid of a heated stone. Here is a help in solving the servant problem by reducing the hours of work.

There is at present only one route across the South American continent from east to west which the traveler can take without resorting to mule-back journeys for long distances. The road is the route from Valparaiso to Buenos Ayres, which can, except in winter time, be covered by railroad and stage, the railroads at the ends and the stage route, of course, over the mountain passes. Two days will suffice for the 900-mile trip, but at that it is not without its discomforts and even perils. Before many years have passed, however, it is predicted that there will be at least three railroads across the Andes, one of them being transcontinental, the other connecting with steamers on the Amazon or its tributaries.

According to the heraldic commission in Rome, which has revised all titles, a younger son of a count is a Nobile dei Conti—a noble of the counts. Therefore Count Senni can put on his visiting cards above his Christian and family name the crown of a count and, per courtesy, is called "Conte." His wife may call herself "Nobile Donna dei Conti;" others will call her "Contessa." Even on court invitations her name will figure in that attribute.

It seems a shame that after putting up one of the finest lines of sensational testimony ever heard of that American witness in the Druce case in London should have to flee merely because, it is alleged, his testimony was untrue. Thus does genius fall of appreciation.

TOO BAD FOR PUBLIC

JEROME WANTS EVELYN THAW'S STORY TOLD IN PRIVATE.

DEFENSE VERY WILLING

New York.—A series of surprises brought the Thaw trial near a crisis Friday. Both Evelyn Thaw, the wife, and Mrs. William Thaw, the mother of the defendant, were on the witness stand, and just as the former was about to relate anew the story of her life, as she told it to Thaw in Paris in 1903, District Attorney Jerome arose and suggested that in the interest of public morals all persons save those immediately interested in the case should be excluded from the courtroom during the recital of what he termed "a horrible tale." The defense agreed and Justice Dowling adjourned court until Monday morning, when, he said, he would decide the matter.

Suggestion Is a Surprise.

The district attorney's suggestion was a distinct surprise and called forth the remark from Justice Dowling that it would have come with greater force at the first hearing of the case. When Mr. Jerome arose it was generally believed that he was about to contend against the admissibility of young Mrs. Thaw's testimony on the ground that it could not have had a very serious effect upon the mind of the man who subsequently became her husband, inasmuch as the homicide did not occur until three years thereafter.

Mr. Jerome had previously objected to Mrs. Thaw detailing conversations she had with Thaw three years prior to the tragedy, but Justice Dowling ruled that the declarations of the defendant were admissible on general principles and without any reference to the Wood case, under which the evidence in dispute was admitted last year, and which Mr. Jerome had been expected to ask a construction of this year.

"I will not except to your honor's ruling," said the district attorney as he took his seat after his objection, "for the state has no power of appeal."

Tears Evelyn's Story to Pieces.

Then Mr. Jerome attacked the witness in another way and, by standing immediately in front of her and objecting to practically every question which Mr. Littleton asked in his preliminary examination as to her early history, cut the young woman's recital from the effective narrative form it assumed last year into a hundred fragments. Many of the objections, based upon irrelevancy and immateriality, were sustained by the court. When these failed the prosecutor was ever ready with others until the testimony fairly was torn into shreds and had lost entirely the many little touches of human interest which were a part of the narration last year when no objections were offered. Mr. Jerome said his objections were intended to cut out all stories about pet cats "and a lot of other stuff" which had no place in the trial.

Elder Mrs. Thaw Testifies.

The day, however, was one of good progress for the defense. The elder Mrs. Thaw, pale and weak from her recent illness, was assisted to the witness chair and repeated a large part of the testimony she gave a year ago. Her appearance and the sincerity of her evidence as she told of her son's strange conduct after meeting Evelyn Neshit and hearing her story had a marked effect upon all who listened. On account of her weak condition her examination was interrupted by consent, to be resumed some time next week, when she will tell of Thaw's infancy.

District Attorney Jerome's manner while the mother was on the stand was all deference, and it was his suggestion which led to the respite in her ordeal. But when the young wife took the stand the change was marked. Jerome glared at her from the very first and his objections were fairly shouted in her ears. Well accustomed to court usage from her former experience, the young woman waited patiently for a ruling as to each objection. When they were sustained she was silent; when overruled she was ever ready with her response.

BURY HOLOCAUST VICTIMS

BOYERTOWN, PA., HEARS LAST RITES OVER THEATER DEAD.

Fatalities from Awful Playhouse Disaster Likely to Reach 180, Say Officials.

Boyertown, Pa. — This little borough, which lost one-fifteenth of its population in the opera house horror, Thursday turned to the task of hurying its dead. Because of the condition of most of the bodies the borough authorities have asked the bereaved relatives to bury the dead within three days. All night long scores of men worked in the morgues preparing the identified bodies for removal to their late homes or to the cemetery. A long line of death wagons moved here and there about the town distributing the corpses and by nightfall most of the dead were ready for interment.

There was a slight hitch in the work of removing the remains from the morgues, through the action of Coroner Strasser forbidding the removal of any bodies during his absence. It rained slightly Thursday, and there was a little fall of snow, but this did not deter the work of digging graves. A force of men started to dig graves in Fairview and Union cemeteries and they were relieved at intervals. The borough has decided to buy eight lots for the burial of the unidentified dead. In the center of the plot sufficient space will be left for the erection of a monument.

The death list continues to grow, and it is now feared that the number of victims will reach 180, and possibly higher. Thursday Mrs. James Fryer, who was injured by leaping from the burning building, died, making the total number of known dead 172.

MOROCCAN REBELS ROUTED.

Great Victory Is Gained by French in Desperate Battle.

Tangier.—News has reached here of a terrific ten hours' engagement in a ravine near Settat Wednesday between a French column under the command of Gen. d'Amade, and a column commanded by Mulai Rachid, one of the chiefs of Mulai Hafid's forces.

The French gained a splendid victory in the face of heavy odds, succeeding in dispersing the enemy and occupying Settat. Twenty of the French soldiers were wounded, but many of the Arabs were killed. The latter not only offered a dogged and fearless defense, but returned repeatedly to the battle after they had been routed, and attacked the French from three sides.

In the later hours of the fighting Mulai Rachid's column was suddenly re-enforced by the powerful Chaouia tribe, which figured in the massacres at Casablanca and which had arrived from the mountains at the very moment when Mulai Rachid was about to retreat.

Under the combined charge of the now confident Moors, the French not only held their ground, but steadily threw back the enemy, driving them eventually in mad haste to the hills. The engagement between the French and the Moors followed immediately upon a 25 hours' march of Gen. d'Amade's column, and under these trying circumstances the French forces are considered to have shown more than ordinary stamina and bravery. The French wounded include three officers.

After destroying the camp of the enemy at Settat, Gen. d'Amade pushed forward and occupied Kasbah Ber Rohid.

GOTHAM BANKER INDICTED

PRESIDENT MONTGOMERY OF THE HAMILTON IS ACCUSED.

Is Released on Bail—Charged with Irregular Acts While Vice President of Institution.

New York.—The special grand jury which was sworn in to investigate the conduct of certain banks in New York county returned two indictments Wednesday against William R. Montgomery, president of the Hamilton bank.

The charges, involving over-drafts and over-certification, have to do with acts alleged to have been committed by Montgomery while he was vice president of the institution. When E. R. and O. F. Thomas retired from their banking interests Mr. Montgomery succeeded the former in the presidency.

The Hamilton bank suspended on October 23 last. Recently the courts decided that the receivership should not be made permanent. The decision was made the occasion of a joyful demonstration on the part of the depositors who, headed by a band of music, marched to the home of the president and cheered him until he responded with a speech in which he declared that his personal vindication as an officer would follow the investigation of the bank's affairs. At the time Montgomery had been accused of lax management by Receiver White.

Montgomery was present when wanted Wednesday and in the criminal branch of the supreme court pleaded guilty with the usual reservation of his right to change his plea or demur to the indictments. The $5,000 bail required was furnished by William H. Birkmire, a director of the bank.

One indictment charges that on August 29 last Montgomery drew a check for $12,950, payable to B. F. Strasshurger, a Maiden Lane jeweler, and caused it to be certified. This transaction, it is alleged, constituted an overdraft of $12,869.

The second indictment sets forth that on September 6, last, the defendant drew a check to the order of Dr. L. C. Warner for $21,000, at a time when the maker's balance in the bank was only $5,918. This balance, it is charged, had been further reduced to $154 when the check in question was presented three days later and was paid by the bank.

REAL LEAP YEAR WEDDING.

Minneapolis Romance Is to Culminate in the Jail.

Minneapolis, Minn. — Miss Emily Steger, 729 Fourth avenue south, Thursday took out a license to wed Charles Eakin, and Minneapolis' first real leap year wedding ceremony is to be performed in the county jail. Eakin, the groom, is serving a five months' term in the jail on a charge of grand larceny in the second degree. Miss Steger is 22 years old. Eakin's age is the same.

The wedding will come as the culmination of a friendship which has lasted since their childhood and which developed into love only after Eakin had been convicted. Unwilling to ask the woman of his choice to marry a man who had been convicted of crime, Eakin believed that he and Miss Steger would never be wedded. It was here that leap year entered the romance. Miss Steger visited Eakin in the jail, told him that she would marry him if he wished, and when he had consented she arranged the details of the jail wedding.

Hopeless Case.

Evangelist Torrey, who prides himself upon the number of his converts, met one hardened sinner in Chicago whom he failed to convert. The minister had been preaching to a tent full of people. He had described the vices of the rich, and had pointed Biblical analogies at their luxuries. One man in the back of the tent had seemed to be much interested. He leaned forward to catch every word. Torrey, taking the interest to mean approaching conversion, redoubled his efforts. "The road to hell is lined with vintage, wine, beautiful women and fine automobiles!" he exclaimed. With a sigh as of relief, the man in the back of the tent arose. "Oh, death, where is thy sting?" he said.

Rather Equivocal.

Uncle Morton, an aged negro, who had been a slave in the days before the civil war, was a retainer in the household of an Atlanta family. He was something of a philosopher, and a good deal of a diplomat. One day the waitresses, two young mulattos, were chaffing him.

"Uncle Mo'ton," one of them said, "who do you like best, Belle or me?"

The gray-headed negro looked first at one then at the other, and said with a tone of indecision:

"It am too tedious to say."

BANISHED

Coffee Finally Had to Go.

The way some persons cling to coffee even after they know it is doing them harm, is a puzzler. But it is an easy matter to give it up for good, when Postum Food Coffee is properly made and used instead.

A girl writes: "Mother had been suffering with nervous headaches for seven weary years, but kept drinking coffee.

"One day I asked her why she did not give up coffee as a cousin of mine had done who had taken to Postum. But Mother was such a slave to coffee she thought it would be terrible to give it up.

"Finally, one day, she made the change to Postum, and quickly her headaches disappeared. One morning while she was drinking Postum so freely and with such relish I asked for a taste.

"That started me on Postum and I now drink it more freely than I did coffee, which never comes into our house now.

"A girl friend of mine, one day, saw me drinking Postum and asked if it was coffee. I told her it was Postum and gave her some to take home, but forgot to tell her how to make it.

"The next day she said she did not see how I could drink Postum. I found she had made it like ordinary coffee. So I told her how to make it right and gave her a cupful I made, after boiling it fifteen minutes. She said she never drank any coffee that tasted as good, and now coffee is banished from both our homes." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Michigan.

DISCOVERED BY BRAZILIAN POLICE

WAS THE ANARCHISTIC PLOT TO DESTROY AMERICAN FLEET.

HARBOR OF RIO JANIERO SELECTED FOR THE DEED

Dasterdly Scheme Was Conceived in Europe—Individual Named Jane Fedher of Petropolis, Understood to Be the Leader.

Rio Janeiro, Jan. 20.—The Brazilian police have discovered an anarchistic plot here having as its object the destruction of part of the American fleet now lying in the harbor. The conspiracy, while centering in Rio Janeiro and Petropolis, has ramifications in Sao Paulo and Minas Geras.

An individual named Jane Fedher, who resided in Petropolis, was the chief conspirator here, although it is understood that foreign anarchists are deeply involved in the plot.

Fedher is believed to have fled to Sao Paulo, and the police, who know him, have been sent to that place for the purpose of apprehending him.

One of the detectives, who was well acquainted with Fedher, having served on the police force at Petropolis for some time, returned from that place after having made investigations there, and had a long conference with the chief of police of Rio Janiero.

The latter gave it out later that the Sao Paulo police are on the track of the archconspirator and expect to arrest him soon.

In an official note the chief of police says:

"Some time before the arrival of the American fleet at Rio Janeiro the Brazilian government received from Washington and Paris information that anarchists of different nationalities intended to damage one or several of the ships of the American fleet. The names and addresses of the conspirators were indicated by information which the police had received previously from France and Germany. The police of this district are working with the police of San Paulo and Minas Geras, and I am sure every precaution will be exercised and the most rigorous vigilance observed both on land and at sea to prevent any injury being done."

The chief of police after having made this official statement, said that he did not feel he should go into any further details with regard to the conspiracy, but he authorized the statement that the plot was organized by Fedher, and he added that the people of the United States could rest easy, as all of the conspirators had taken refuge in the interor.

As yet the people of Brazil are ignorant of the details of the plot to do injury to the visitors, although there has been some slight inkling of the matter.

The impression which the exposure of this plot will create here will be a profound one, because it is the first anarchistic conspiracy that has ever been known in Brazil. The police of San Paulo have sent word that they are on the track of the malefactors, who, they declare, will not be allowed to come to Rio Janiero.

Washington, Jan. 20.—Rr. Adm. Pillsbury said that no advices were received at the navy department from Rr. Adm. Evans regarding plot at Rio.

ARSENIC PUT IN FLOUR

Rockdale, Tex., Jan. 20.—Five members of the family of seven of C. Sauer, a German farmer living near this city, are dead and the other two are reported dying from poison. All became suddenly ill after eating supper Friday evening. Sauer and his 9-year-old child expired in agony that night, and the following day his wife and two more of their children died. Arsenic had been found in the house, and it is believed that the poison was placed in the flour from which the bread was made which the family ate at the fatal supper. The family cook has suddenly gone insane, it is rumored.

Slashed His Throat With a Razor.

St. Louis, Jan. 20.—"I killed a man with a bean shooter and I will pay the penalty," written with a pencil on blood-spattered paper was the note left by Charles Deskell, aged 18, a shoe cutter, who killed himself here by slashing his throat with a razor. His body and the note were found by his mother. It is thought from the note that he became suddenly insane.

HYMNS OF 200 TONGUES.

Origin of Many Sacred Songs Told by an English Authority.

There are no less than 400,000 Christian hymns, according to Dr. Julian, the celebrated English authority on sacred music, and they have been written in 200 or more languages and dialects, says the Philadelphia Press.

Most popular among these, he says, are: "Rock of Ages, Cleft for Me;" "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing;" "Awake, My Soul, and with the Sun," and "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross."

Some interesting stories are connected with the origin of a number of the famous hymns. For instance, it is told that the English prelate, Bishop Bickersteth, wrote "Peace, Perfect Peace" at the deathbed of a relative, Archdeacon Hill of Liverpool, and that the latter read the verses and complimented them before he passed away.

"Just As I Am," said Dr. Julian, was written by an invalid, Charlotte Elliott, while she was lying almost helpless upon a sofa. All her relatives had gone to an entertainment and as she suffered alone in her home she sighed that she might be taken away just as she was and the verses of the hymn which thousands now sing sprang into her mind.

John Byrom, the author of "Christians, Awake," write that beautiful hymn as a Christmas offering for his daughter. He inscribed upon the manuscript, "Christmas Day for Dolly."

"Rock of Ages," it is said, was written by Augustus Toplady while he lay sheltered from a storm under two gigantic limestone rocks, but there is no proof upon which this can be based.

Grateful Hen.

Chicken fanciers and agriculturists hereabouts are puzzled over a remarkable egg-laying hen living under the guardianship of Jacob Geier in Madison avenue. The hen strayed from her roost and wandered into Geier's back yard several weks ago. When Geier opened his kitchen door the hen flapped her wings, flew on the porch and in at the open door past Geier.

"That chick must be durn hungry; I'll feed her up good and strong, b'gum," said Geier to his wife.

He made good his word by preparing a ration of milk and bread, which the hen devoured ravenously. Cackling her thanks, she departed to the back yard. About an hour later the hen was discovered sitting comfortably on a settee on the porch. When the fire whistle tooted the noon hour the hen exuded a joyous series of cackles. When Geier arrived on the scene he bebeld a fresh-laid egg and the hen strutting proudly around the yard.

Since then the hen has laid an egg every day, with three exceptions. Geier says she has a sense of grattitude, which she displays in payment for the meal tendered in the time of her tribulation.—Boston Herald.

No Use for a Pessimist.

Freddie and his mother were having a thoroughly satisfactory romp when a visitor was announced. As one topic of conversation after another came up, it developed that the caller was in an extraordinarily pessimistic frame of mind, and expressed her disapproval, in no measured terms, of everything and everybody under discussion.

"This impartial "knocking" disturbed Freddie's amiable soul mightily, and he slowly drew nearer and nearer, until he finally stood before the lady, with his small face puckered and the corners of his mouth drawn down.

She stopped in the midst of an "Oh—a dreadful bore, my dear!" to say:

"Why, Freddie, please do unscrew your face. I don't like to see little boys look like that."

Freddie surveyed her for a moment and then said tronchantly, but with an obviously sincere wish for information:

"I guess you don't like most anything, do you?"

Getting it Precisely Right.

"I beg your pardon," said a tall, heavily built man, stopping in the throng at Forty-second street and Broadway, and addressing a smaller, irascible little man with side whiskers, whose shine he had just spoiled. "I your pardon, did I step on your toes?"

"If," snapped the little man, "you ask merely out of curiosity I can assure you that you did step on my toes. If you only intended to express an abstract form of apology I have but to say 'not at all.'"

"Humph!" said the offending person to a companion, "must a' been a college professor."

Ho was not. He was, however, a well-known painter, who was far from realizing that his retort had been heard by two good friends.—New York Post.

Fresh from Vaudeville.

The Foolish One—What's the difference between a man who admits that he wants to get rich quick and the man who says he has no such desire?

The Wise One—I have never considered the matter. What is the difference?

Uselessness.

"You never change your mind about anything, do you?"

"What's the use," rejoined the egotist. "I found years ago that I was just as liable to be wrong the second time as I was the first."

ANGER [illegible]

REPUBLICAN [illegible] IS HURT [illegible] COUNTRY.

No Measures in Prospect in Congress to Meet the Needs of the Financial Situation—Democrats Would Act.

The Republican doctors are all maxed up on what ails the financial patient, and are advising all kinds of treatment, hardly any two of which approach agreement. Under the rules of the house of representatives the Democrats have no power to prescribe for the disease the country is suffering from. It may be said that the Republican doctors have left the patient in such a run-down condition that it will require careful treatment and a long period for recuperation before it will be safe to put the patient under the influence of a radical cure. But something should be done forthwith or a second collapse will result in a more dangerous condition than the present one.

Congress met on December 2 and on the following day the president recommended "the need of immediate attention" to the necessity of an elastic currency. Over two weeks before congress met the president said in a letter to Secretary Cortelyou that assurances had been given him that leaders in congress are considering a currency bill which will permanently meet the needs of the situation. Did the Republican leaders deceive the president, or have they decided upon another course? Senator Culberson offered in the senate a resolution directing investigation as to the causes of the panic, but hy the unanimous vote of the Republican members the resolution was referred to the committee on finance instead of acting upon it. In speaking to that question, Senator Culberson said: "I want the American people to know that there are some men—the Democrats—in this chamber who believe immediate action is necessary." The Republican leaders, however, took no notice of the president's recommendations, or, apparently, of the panicky condition of the country, with the banks refusing to pay their depositors on demand, except that the speaker appointed the committee on currency and banking. On December 21 congress adjourned for 16 days, leaving the country to suffer without relief, and when it reassembled on January 6 it did not have a bill perfected to act upon. Such delay is cruel to those bankers and their depositors who are suffering, and shows the hardness of heart of the Republican leaders. Not that any legislation the congress is likely to accomplish will cure the disease. But if, for instance, a bill providing for a secured elastic currency, drawing seven per cent. interest, was enacted, it would relieve the tension in the larger monetary centers, such as New York and Chicago, and that would give relief to the country banks by allowing the withdrawal of their deposits at those centers. It would also help to force hoarded money from its hiding places, and thus give confidence where but little, if any, now exists. Such palliative measures will not cure the financial disease, for Republican policies have caused too deep-seated troubles to be cured off hand. There is great danger that when cash payments are resumed there will be a quiet run on the banks by many people, and when cash is paid for cotton and wheat it will be hoarded instead of finding its way into the country banks. It is impossible to calculate the amount of money that will thus be taken out of the usual avenues of business, but it will surely be enough to make trouble for the country banks unless their percentage of cash deposits far exceeds the usual limits. A further drain on the country banks will be caused by the storekeepers being compelled to pay for goods bought in the fall, for further extension of credit can hardly be expected from the jobbers and wholesale men when cash payments by the banks is resumed. These payments will relieve the tension in the east, but may increase the panic in the south and west.

It is not a pleasant future to face, but to delay much longer will be more dangerous, for every day the present conditions prevail will cause more depression at the manufacturing and wholesale centers.

Instead of taking a holiday for nearly three weeks, the Republican leaders in congress should have forced the work day and night until a remedial measure of relief had been passed.

State Rights.

The supreme court of North Carolina has decided all the issues between the state and the railroads, except the indictments and fines imposed on the Southern railroad, in favor of the state. The opinion affirms the right of the state courts to punish agents and officials of railroads for selling tickets at an excess above the lawful rate, which in North Carolina is 2½ cents a mile. The court holds that the federal court has no authority to issue an injunction against bringing suits, criminal or civil, against the railroad, as it would in thus enjoining a criminal action bring a suit against the state, which is forbidden by the constitution of the United States. The Southern railroad will now appeal to the United States supreme court, which, with the case of Attorney General Young of Minnesota, which is also appealed, will settle the matter of the right of the states to control railroads within their borders.

Mr. Bryan in the Commoner, [illegible] advises Democrats to organize and thinks the formation of campaign clubs will accomplish the purpose. There is a great need for thorough organization, for the political rulers of the party in the northern states has almost shattered the party organization. In some states there is nothing but a skeleton in place of an active body of voters working and acting together. Mr. Bryan is therefore right in the idea with his plan although it is doubtful if the formation of campaign clubs will fill the void or that enough responsible Democratic voters can be induced at this time to undertake the work and expense of keeping such clubs alive up to the time when the active campaign begins next September. The much surer and better plan would be to try to make the state committees and through them the county and township committees to weed out and fill in the membership of the committees with men in sympathy with the principles and purposes of the party. Political organizations, like an army, must have officers to lead the men, and to have much effect when the real campaign begins the county and town committees must know the precinct leaders they can rely upon to do the work that a real political campaign calls for. It costs money and a great deal of work to properly organize "to get the votes into the box," for that is the ultimate end to be attained. There is a vast difference between organizing to elect a ticket and organizing to nominate some particular candidate. If, for instance, many of the Democrats in the United States join a club organization, with the purpose of nominating Gov. Johnson of Minnesota as the Democratic candidate for president, and when the national convention meets Mr. Bryan is nominated, what help would such a club organization be to the party? In that case the Johnson clubs would die a natural political death. On the other hand party organization knows no candidate until the official nominations are made, and then undertakes to elect them. In theory all members of the Democratic party will work and vote for the party nominee and especially those who have been selected as officials of the party organization. Practically, however, there are often members of the committees who are lukewarm, because their particular choice is not nominated for some office. A minority party always suffers from such a cause, unless the party organization is strong enough to punish those who desert in the face of the enemy, or who are discovered giving aid and comfort to the opposition. Party organization has two ends: To perpetuate the principles of the party and to elect those to office who will enact those principles into law, or will carry out those principles through the executive powers to which they may be elected. Individual voters can do but little, but united with others they can do much. The Democratic state committees should at once complete their organization and not wait until the state conventions elect a new committee, but prepare the ground for their successors. The time is all too short, after nominations are made, to perfect a thorough organization. Now is the time for county chairmen to investigate the condition in the voting precincts, and if the precinct chairman is lacking in energy, to set some other to work. Mr. Bryan is right in his call for organization, but a beginning must be made with the regular party machinery and leave the organization of clubs until the nominations are made.

White House Silent.

The Washington Post reported a few days ago the "White House silent," but we don't believe it, and would be sorry to know it was true. With the White House silent the republic would be in peril, for who can save us but Teddy the Terrible with his fleet under way to scourge the Pacific of all enemies it may meet? The Post cannot fool us with any such canard. When the White House is silent it will be after March 4, 1909, and full high noon at that. Unless, horrible thought, that "my policies" have been repudiated by the Republican congress and Uncle Joe and Aldrich have succeeded in sitting on the lid that Taft, even in his stoutest days, could not keep down. But why dwell on such an absurdity as the White House being silent, and the Republican national convention months away? We all like to hear the Roosevelt roar and see the Republican peanut politicians tremble, however bold they may pretend to be in secret. It's all very well for Loeb to give out assurances of peace, but there can be no peace as long as Roosevelt rules the roost.

Republican Paper Sees Light.

Revision of the tariff is the one thing in which every citizen is interested at this time. In the public mind it outclasses railroad-rate regulation and even currency reform. The people are tired of being robbed through the tariff manufacturers who sell their goods abroad, after paying freight across the ocean and all expenses of rehandling, cheaper than the "pauper foreign labor" from which the tariff is supposed to protect them can make similar articles. They insist that the home market shall no longer heap riches upon such men, whose foreign business shows that much of their American prices is sheer robbery.—Chicago Journal (Rep.)

WOULD OUST POOLROOMS.

Newport Senator Offers Bill Providing Heavy Fines.

Frankfort, Ky.—In the senate, following the joint session, there was a flood of new bills and measures amending old acts. Senator Joseph Bosworth fathered a measure to amend the constitution of the state so as to permit the state to aid in the campaign of good roads. Under the amendment it will be possible for the various constituted authorities to appropriate money wherever it is needed for this purpose. Among other bills were the following:

By Senator Wright—A bill to make it a misdemeanor to import strikebreakers into this state.

By Senator Wyatt—A bill extending the law permitting farmers to pool their crops by permitting them to select the agent or agents to sell pooled crops.

Senator Wilhelmi, of Newport, introduced a bill to prohibit poolrooms by providing fines from $1,000 to $5,000 for each day one is operated and prohibiting information being furnished them by telegraph or telephone companies.

By Senator McNut, providing for electrocution of criminals instead of hanging, electrocution to take place in state penitentiary.

DIVIDING LINE

To Be Drawn Through Mansion Left to Warring Kentucky Sisters.

Frankfort, Ky.—Through the appointment of a committee to divide the estate of the late James Holt between his nieces, Mrs. Clara Clark and Mrs. Clementine Deshon, every provision of the will has been carried into effect, except the arrival of a child to inherit the 742 acres of blue grass land after the death of two women. Neither of them, however, has given up hope that the stork will appear. Mrs. Clark has been married 11 years and Mrs. Deshon three years. If these women die without children the Masonic Orphans' home, at Jeffersonville, Ind., to which Holt gave $500,000, will be $100,000 richer, as the farm left to his nieces reverts to the home if they die childless.

The estate, the most magnificent in Franklin county, was founded by Harry Todd, who erected the largest house in the county outside of Frankfort. The house contains 19 rooms, with only four people to occupy it, and, although the sisters are not on speaking terms, they will petition the committee to run a dividing line through the center of the house in order that they may occupy it, for, if they live away from the farm, they must forfeit their interest in it.

Model Farm Planned.

Frankfort, Ky.—Commissioner of Agriculture M. C. Rankin decided to establish a model farm of 300 acres at Hindman, Knott county, which will be purchased and maintained by the state and national government. The sum of $3,000 has been appropriated for the purchase of the land and it will be conducted under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. It will be a branch of the State university. The location of the school was secured by Senator H. R. Smith. C. H. Hanna, representing Rankin, will go to Hindman to locate the farm.

To Arrange Dates.

Lexington, Ky.—Jouett Shouse, secretary of the Blue Grass Fair association, as president of the organization of Secretaries of Fair Associations in Central and Eastern Kentucky, has called a meeting for the purpose of arranging dates for the circuit of fairs and agreeing upon a uniform classification.

Will Ask Council For Work.

Covington, Ky.—The committee of the unemployed who called upon Mayor Craig met and decided to go before the council committees and demand an appropriation for public improvements that will give employment to the men in the city who have lost their positions because of the business depression.

A Plucky Agent.

Somerset, Ky.—Thomas Dean, night agent for the L. & N. railroad at Barboursville, was assaulted by three men. As soon as he recovered Dean went in pursuit and, coming upon his assailants, held them until officers arrived. Charles and William Fletcher and Jas. Noe were arrested.

Newport As a Tobacco Market.

Newport, Ky.—Considerable tobacco is finding a market in Newport of late, as the result of the night-riders' raids. Much of it comes many miles by wagon, principally from Pendleton and the southern part of Kenton and Campbell counties.

Opponents Indorsed.

Louisville.—All the ward clubs in the city have been indorsing their representatives who stood out against former Gov. Beckham. The Third Ward club has made a hero of Chris. Mueller, while the 12th ward extolled Senators McNutt and Charlton to the skies.

New Tobacco Factory Proposed.

Lexington, Ky.—There is a rumor in circulation here to the effect that Cincinnati capitalists are discussing a proposition to form a $1,000,000 company for the purpose of erecting and operating a tobacco factory in this city.

BECKHAM SHOWS NO GAIN.

Result Remains Unbroken in the Senatorial Contest.

Frankfort, Ky.—The third ballot for United States Senator in joint session of the legislature resulted as follows: Beckham 66, Bradley 64, scattering 4, absent 3.

The only change was that of McKnight, of Mason, who voted for James B. McCreary, and Senator Charlton, of Louisville, who voted for R. W. Knott.

The vote for McCreary is not considered as announcing his candidacy.

Friends of ex-State Senator J. Campbell Cantrill are proposing him as a dark horse Democratic senatorial candidate should Democrats decide it impossible to elect Gov. Beckham.

Cantrill was elected Kentucky President of the American Society of Equity last week and is strong with the farmers.

Frankfort, Ky.—J. C. W. Beckham, for eight years governor of Kentucky, the leader of the democratic party in the state and once the idol of the rank and file, failed of election for United States senator, seven democrats in the general assembly refusing to vote for him.

It was the first ballot to elect a United States senator to succeed James B. McCreary, whose term of office will expire on March 4, 1909. The vote was taken in separate houses, Beckham receiving 66 votes while William O. Bradley, the nominee of the republicans, received 64 votes.

Both houses will convene in joint session and will continue to vote on joint ballot day after day until a senator is elected.

Deny the Deal.

Augusta, Ky.—T. S. Hamilton and Ben Bell, Directors of the Lovell and Buffington Tobacco Co., Covington, deny that they have purchased 200 hogsheads of tobacco from the Society of Equity, packed tobacco or any other amount. Reports from Germantown and Brooksville is that the tobacco recently bought in that section by the American Tobacco Co. from independents is now being delivered without molestation.

Burned in Effigy.

Elizabethtown, Ky.—State Senator W. W. Tabb was burned in effigy at Stithton, this county, on account of his political views as regards the United States senatorship. It is not known whether the supposed rebuke was administered because he voted for Beckham, or because he voted against him, as Senator Tabb voted against Beckham Tuesday and for him Wednesday.

Awarded $5,000.

Frankfort, Ky.—As a reward for sustaining fractures of his left arm, left leg, shoulder blade and shock, D. B. Highland, of Louisville, was awarded $5,000 in the Franklin Circuit Court against the Mason, Hose & Kier Construction Co. The accident occurred at Lafayette, Tenn., four years ago, when Highland was employed in a tunnel.

Democrats Assist Powers.

Paris, Ky.—Two of the petitions for clemency for Caleb Powers circulating in Bourbon county, have been returned, filed. Over 75 per cent. of the signers are democrats. It is estimated that fully 15,000 persons in this county will sign the petition.

Child Fatally Burned.

Covington, Ky.—The three-year-old grandson of Louis David was fatally burned. The child was playing in front of a grate in his night clothes, which ignited. Before assistance reached the child it was horribly burned about the body.

"Night Riders" Scare.

Paducah, Ky.—A telephone message to headquarters and the sudden arrival of many passengers on trains caused a "night rider" scare here, and special watchmen were stationed at every tobacco warehouse.

Former Police Judge Dead.

Hyden, Ky.—Ex-Police Judge John Steele is dead. Mr. Steele had been in poor health for some time with complicated diseases. He was once an active business man of the town and was well known.

Will Clear the Title.

Louisville, Ky.—M. C. Rankin and Caldwell Norton were appointed a committee to clear the title of the McDonald tract, which has been selected as the permanent site of the Kentucky state fair.

Begins Duties of Office.

Maysville, Ky.—Thomas A. Davis, state labor inspector, left on his first business trip. He goes to Louisville, where he will map out the work to be done by him and his assistants.

Kentucky Incorporations.

Frankfort, Ky.—Articles of incorporation were filed here as follows: Central Store Co., Jefferson county, capital stock, $100,000; incorporators, Jas. R. Durfee, Charles S. Dabney, Charles W. Chambers, J. Hunt Underbarker and John K. Kearney.

No Need For Paper.

Louisville, Ky.—When the Clearing House Association meets here on January 21 it will celebrate the occasion by retiring $200,000 worth of certificates, which were floated during the late stringency.

BOONE CO. RECORDER.
E. C. RIDDELL, Publisher.

The General Assembly can now be said to be ready for business. It generally takes about ten of the sixty days to get the body in running order.

Statistics show that one person in every 646 in Kentucky is insane, while recent events indicate that about 600 of the others are inclined to crime.

Three islands in the Thousands Islands have disappeared. It will be sort of awkward to have to call the place the Nine Hundred and Ninety-Seven Islands.

A New York woman, 60 years old, choked a burglar, while her daughter called a policeman. What a woman like that could do to a son-in-law can be imagined.

Quite a difference in the appearance of things along the Ohio river now and at this time last year, when that stream displayed a disposition to submerge all creation.

If Powers is pardoned there is no question but what he will be the next Republican nominee for Congress in the eleventh district, in which event Jim Hargis ought to be the Democratic candidate in his district.

The Taft presidential boom was badly punctured by a Republican meeting held in Louisville, one night last week. The Fairbanks people had things all their way, and refused the Taft men so much as a crumb of—comfort.

Hon. J. W. Berkshire is a member of the following House Committees in the legislature: Classification of Cities and Towns; Chairman of Committee on Federal Relations; Geological Survey; Internal Improvements; Public Morals, and Redistricting.

In the light of recent events, asking the question, "who is the Democratic I am in Kentucky about now?" should not be considered impertinent, as the old Democratic ship appears to be at sea without a pilot, compass or rudder.

There is not room enough in Ohio for two presidential booms like those of Taft and Foraker to prance about much without resulting in collisions that will be damaging to the party with which they affiliate. Ohio is too small to support two well developed political booms in the same party.

Two or three bills providing for amending the constitution have been introduced in the General Assembly. Proposed amendments to that instrument have not proven popular in the past and those that will be ground out during the present session will take about the same course as their predecessors.

Senator Hogan, of Grant county, has introduced a bill repealing the law requiring registration of voters in the small towns in the State. The Senator's time will be well and profitably spent if he has to work until late in the afternoon of the last day of the session to get his bill through the General Assembly.

If it be true that the American Tobacco Company is seeking land in Indiana for the purpose of growing of tobacco, it is proof that it expects to be put out of business in Kentucky either directly by the Society of Equity or indirectly through its influence with the General Assembly. If seeking new fields the trust considers its days numbered in Kentucky.

In his message to the legislature Governor Willson recommended the repeal of the dog law without giving cause therefor, and for this he has been criticized pretty severely by flock-masters in many sections of the State. He promised the voters in the mountains that he would have the law repealed, but he could not give that as a reason in his message. When a candidate is in a hot campaign often he makes promises that rise up as a rebuke later on.

Gov. Willson bucked at the picture of Governor Goebel on the checks and drafts used by the State, and has ordered it taken off and Henry Clay's picture substituted. Gov. Goebel's picture on the State paper displaced that of Gen. John C. Breckinridge, which was an uncalled for act on the part of the Democrats at a time when better judgment should have prevailed. Governor Willson has ordered the pictures of Lincoln and John C. Breckinridge to be used in place of Goebel's.

Messrs Bronston and Bailey may appear to be the owners and proprietors of the Republican party in Kentucky, have arranged matters for the State to be found in the Taft column at the National Convention. They are ignoring Gov. Willson and ex-Governor Bradley, with whom they will have to recon before their program is perfected, and they may discover that their ownership of the party is disputed by Willson and Bradley.

The fact that the Louisville Post is supporting ex-Governor Beckham for the United States Senatorship ought to dispel any doubt as to his having been nominated by an honest primary. Mr. Knott is such a lover of honest elections that he would not support for the high and honorable position of Senator any man about whose nomination there was any question as to its having been honestly bestowed. If there is any taint about a candidates nomination the Post has the reputation of pursuing him relentlessly even until his term of office expires or he has been unseated by a court. Beckham's nomination is the result of an honest primary, otherwise Richard W. Knott would be lined up against him in the battle he (Knott) has so long waged for good government and fair elections.

A Cure For Misery.

I have found a cure for the misery malaria poison produces," says R. M. James, of Lonellen, S. C. "It's called Electric Bitters, and comes in 50 cent bottles. It breaks up a case of chills or a bilious attack in almost no time; and it puts yellow jaundice clean out of commission." This great tonic medicine and blood purifier gives quick relief in all stomach, liver and kidney complaints and the misery of lame back. Sold under guarantee at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

Driving the Trust Across the Ohio.

W. H. Blodgett, staff correspondent of the Indianapolis News, writing from Guthrie, Ky., says: The American Tobacco Company, which is the tobacco trust, has obtained options on 45,000 acres of land and is negotiating for much more than that. Before it is done it will probably get 100,000 acres. It has employed practical tobacco farmers, and it is experimenting with the soil of Indiana to ascertain whether tobacco can be successfully raised in the Hoosier State, and if it can be, Indiana will be one of the greatest tobacco states in the Union. In Indiana about 8,000 acres of land is already used in the tobacco culture. While some tobacco is raised in most of the Indiana counties, the greater part is grown in the counties of Brown, Clark, Dearborn, Dubois, Fayette, Harrison, Green, Switzerland and Warwick. The American Tobacco Company is after land in Switzerland, Dearborn, Ohio, Warrick and Jefferson. It has now great warehouses in Spencer, Warrick and Ohio counties. Indiana at present raises about 7,000,000 pounds of tobacco a year. The biggest tobacco market in the world is Louisville, and it is possible that even if the plans of the tobacco trust are carried out Louisville will remain the great market, although the plan of the company contemplates making markets at Evansville, Lawrenceburg and Cincinnati.

And don't forget the ground bone and meat scraps once or twice a week.

The month of December was the most remarkable one in the history of the tow boat trade. There was a rise nearly every ten days, and more coal was sent out from Pittsburg in the month than ever before in any one month, but the dealers were never aware of the large increase of the supply sent out—at least their prices did not so indicate.

The first sale of pooled tobacco in the hands of the Burley Tobacco Society has been made. Three hundred and five thousand pounds have been sold to Lovell & Buffington, independent buyers of Covington. This was purchased from samples stored at Winchester. The sale was made at prices fixed by the Society for the grades taken. Most of it was sold at 18 cents a pound, though as high as 30 cents was paid for a part of it.

It is claimed that other independent firms are trying to make a purchase, and a large quantity will probably be sold in a short time. Lovell & Buffington are large independent manufacturers and consume about a million pounds of the raw product in a year. The above deal is the one pulled off by J. C. Hughes of this county.

The canneries at Belleview and Petersburg having proven such a success last year, they will, doubtless, be operated to their fullest capacity this year. These factories are operated on different plans. The one at Petersburg being somewhat on the mutual order, made, after paying the stockholders a very handsome prophet, 30 cents a bushel for tomato growers, which was highly pleasing to them. At Belleview the tomatoes were contracted for at so much a bushel of which the growers were certain, whether the stockholders made anything or not, but they made a very handsome per cent on their investment also. With the tobacco crop cut out next year a great many more will turn their attention to growing tomatoes for the canneries, which will doubtless be able to run night and day during the season.

When a fellow goes from here West it does not take the people out there long to size him up correctly as shown by the following, copied from a Grand Junction, Colo., paper:

"A short time ago Elmo Gaines, a member of one of the oldest families of Boone county, Kentucky, and a young man of high standing and excellent qualifications, came to Grand Junction, having determined to take advantage of the many opportunities offered a young man in the West.

"Mr. Gaines purchased the well established business of the Enterprise Feed Store, located at 250 Main street, one of the best locations in the business district, and is already extending the patronage of the business. Mr. Gaines is conducting a first class feed store, employing sound principles in his business, dealing fair and courteously with the trade and is making a record of which any young business man might be proud. The Enterprise Feed Store keeps in stock all classes of good feed stuff such as hay, grain, bran, etc. Mr. Gaines uses great care in purchasing his goods and sees that his patrons get good quality goods at all times. Prompt deliveries are made to any part of the city. Telephone orders are given immediate attention, Junction 449 being the phone number.

"The Enterprise, already enjoying a splendid patronage will continue to grow and prosper under Mr. Gaines' management. Mr. Gaines is assisted in the business by W. C. Brown."

The Society of Equity had a big meeting over at Independence, last Monday. About 1,000 growers from Boone, Grant and Kenton counties were addressed by Hon. R. H. Elliston, of Williamstown. At the conclusion of the speaking about 300 growers signed the agreement to raise no tobacco this year. The leaders of the Equity movement are much encouraged over the progress that is being made towards cutting out the 1908 crop, which will be a clean knock-out of the trust.

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS

This Distinguished American Journalist is Traveling Around the World for the Purpose of Investigating the American Foreign Missionary from a Purely Disinterested, Secular and Non-Sectarian Standpoint. Illustrated with Drawings and from Photographs.

Across India with Peeps at Missionaries at Work

Calcutta, India.—Beautiful, dirty; splendid, squalid; rich, miserable—such are the contrasting adjectives which one may apply to this third largest city in the British empire, seated on the banks of the Hoogli river, whose shifting currents are her best defense against an invading fleet. It is a city of color, from the fat, shiny, black babu, scantily clad only in a few yards of purple cheese cloth and dazzling yellow shoes, to the pale and immaculate Briton, in top hat and frock coat. It is a city of historic interest; everybody goes first to see the famous Black Hole.

But to all the world that is in any way interested in missiona this is remembered as the scene of the labors of William Carey, the father of modern Protestant missions, who did his lifework at Serampore, a few miles from here. In the cathedral alao one sees a fine statue of Reginald Heber, the famous missionary bishop of the Church of England, and author of the most widely-known missionary hymn, "From Greenland's Icy Mountains."

Dusky "Europeans."

My work deals with to-day, so I must introduce the reader instead to the most curious company of "Europeans" he has ever met, as they are gathered for worship, several hundreds of them, in the fine big church of the American Methodist mission. These dusky "Europeans" are mostly half-castes, Eurasians, but they dislike the latter name and are at all pains to claim identity only with their white ancestors. Thua a dark brown man, three-fourths native, will speak ostentatiously of going "home" to England, though he never saw England, and only one of his forbears for centuries past has ever been outside of India.

This very pride indicates that the Eurasian has certain qualities which go with white blood, and this self-supporting, aggressive church, with refinement written on the faces of many of its members, indicates the importance of this branch of the Methodist Episcopal mission. The Methodists have been very successful throughout India in this work for Eurasians, and for the whites who have married native women, thus losing social caste in addition, other white people who do not care for the established church services, attach themselves to these churches for Europeans.

The Really White Europeans.

If the blended brother is a problem in India needing the missionary's attention, no less is the simon-pure white man. And I must say that, so far as I could learn, the life of the Europeans (as all Caucasians are designated east of Suez) is more wholesome and normal in India than in the far east. This is doubtless due to the fact that British influence is altogether dominant, and British ideals have followed the flag. The white people generally attend the established churches, just as at home, as a matter of course.

For the young men—who are everywhere the crux of the social problem—I found the Y. M. C. A. doing a conspicuously successful work. In the farther east it bas been a failuro so far as the white men are concerned, although its work for the natives, as these articles have reported, has been of a high grade. Here, however, the association is "good form," and the larger Indian cities have fine buildings, veritable gentlemen's clubs, with chambers for any number of men from a score to a hundred, and in general doing a sort of Christian work which deserves great praise. It would cause an American secretary to lift his eyebrows were he to see the number of men in evening clothes (including, of course, the local secretary himself) to be found of an evening in the Calcutta or Bombay association. Therein, though, is a sign of success, for that is the very crowd that the association needs to reach here. The work for the native Indians, conducted in separate buildings, of course, is equally notable.

There are white women in the east, as well as native and half-caste women, needing the peculiar sort of help which the Y. W. C. A. affords. I was greatly struck by the hold that this organization has taken in India: there is a sanity, a careful, confident facing of actual conditions, and an effective aggressiveness about it which should place the association very high in the rank of missionary agencies.

One sort of work open to the Y. W. C. A is illustrated by the following incident. Every ship sailing to India from England carries young women going out to be married, and to live with fathers, brothers, or other relatives. Not always do the relatives turn up, or the bridegrooms prove available; in which case the young woman sadly needs womanly help and safe shelter. On the ship in which I went to Calcutta were three such young women; one of them discovered that her uncle had gone to Japan and she was penniless, half a world from home. At the first opportunity, after learning of the efficiency of the Calcutta Young Women's Christian association, I put the secretary into touch with the stranded girl, but almost too late, for a day later she attempted suicide.

"Behind the Curtain."

High-class Hindu and Mohammedan women are kept "purdah," that is "behind the curtain." The precautions that are used to keep them from the gaze of all men save their families seem ridiculous to a westerner. One such woman was put into a railway compartment next to mine, with the most elaborate precautions. But when we stopped at a small station I caught a glimpse of her face through the window and—well, she would never be kidnaped for her looks! This sequestration of the women leads to all manner of evils; and the lot of the poor creatures is narrow and pitiable, indeed.

Now the women missionaries are penetrating "behind the curtain," taking with them medical healing, the schoolbook and the Bible. The Woman's Missionary Union of America is especially diligent in this zenana work, having missiona in five cities, and their range of activities includes visitation to the homes, day schools for children, orphanages, rescue homes, a hospital and a high school and college. As I talked with two bright American girls at Allahabad, Miss Wishard and Miss Bertsch, about their work, and heard how they had rescued 23 ill-treated and widowed Brahmins during the first four months of the year (they teach 500 women a week) I could not but agree that this was a womanly work for women, affording a career such as should satisfy any college-bred girl.

A Tomb for a Home.

The woes of women, and especially of widows, in India are too well known to need rehearsal here. They afford endless scope for missionary service. Thus, at Lucknow the Methodist Episcopal mission has converted an old Mohammedan tomb into a home for homeless women. It was rather interesting to learn that a large part of the cares of the charming young woman in charge is the endeavor to find husbands for as many as possible of the 50 women who come under her oversight every year.

In this same city of Lucknow I found another flourishing institution for women, the Isabella Thoburn college, said to be the oldest college for girls in India, having been established in 1870. It is affiliated with the University of Allahabad, and has more requests than it can meet for graduates to fill governmental and private teaching positions. The college has won favor with high-caste natives, and its nearly 200 students represent all classes of society. I could not see that the life differed greatly from the life of American college girls.

As I watched a file of these lustrous-eyed, graceful, white-robed girls cross the campus of the Presbyterian girls' school at Allahabad, on their way to chapel, it seemed to me that the spectacle was rather more picturesque than anything an American college can boast. This building is the gift of Mr. John Wanamaker. A Christian Endeavor meeting by the girls was quite a model meeting of the American type. Christian Endeavor appears to be especially effective among the Indian churches. Even a slight association with the students here seemed to show in their character a reflection of the charm of Miss Forman, their principal. The caliber, culture and character of some of the American women to be met on the mission field are altogether beyond the imagining of the public at home.

New India in the Making.

Among the Indian reformers there is discernable a movement looking toward the nationalization of India's varying creeds, which is a step essential to political unity. The national creed is not intended to be Christianity. The one conspicuous agency offsetting this tendency is the mission school. Up and down the length of India are schools conducted by missionaries and attended by the children of Christian converts (for they are part of the machinery which must produce the next generation of native preachers), by the children of low castes, who are thus equipped to rise in the social scale and, to an increasing extent of late years, by the children of the higher castes. It is almost hopeless to attempt to enumerate these; I might specify the fine big Reid Christian college at Lucknow of the Methodist Episcopal church, situated on ground made historic by the mutiny, equipped with imposing buildings, attended by 500 students in dormitory, from a wide region of which Lucknow is the center, and administered to by men of ability and breadth of vision. Both collegiate and commercial courses are given here.

Early this year many Methodists from America journeyed to India to attend the jubilee of Methodist Episcopal missions at Bareilly, where 50 years ago Rev. William Butler established the work of the Methodist Episcopal church, which has now grown to a force of 5,000 workers and 200,000 native members. At this celebration, which was attended by 2,000 native Christians, 500 converts were baptized on a single day, a unique feature of the baptismal service being the cutting off of the tuft of hair, the loss of which means separation from Hinduism. The occasion focused the attention of the religious world upon the fact of Methodistism's aggressive, diversified, far-ramifying and successful work in India. Thirty-seven different languages are used by Methodist missionaries in this country.

Allahabad, the university center of India, boasts another great educational institution of the western type, the Allahabad Christian college, of the Presbyterian mission. Its buildings are in quadrangle form about an immense and symmetrical banyan tree. One of the buildings is Princeton hall, a gift of Princeton alumni. An inspection of this plant impresses a visitor with the thoroughness of the standard maintained. The principal, Rev. Dr. Arthur H. Ewing, is rightly reckoned one of India's great educational leaders. In the big preparatory school for boys, which is a part of the institution, I had a chance to test all the classes in English, and I cannot imagine a school in the homeland emerging from this sort of ordeal more successfully.

The Living Dead.

At Allahabad is situated a large leper asylum, maintained jointly by the government and by the beneficent Mission to Lepers in the East. It is managed by Mr. Samuel Higginbottom, of the Presbyterian mission—one of the innumerable extras that I found missionaries everywhere carrying. "Salaam, sahib," the lepers would cry as we passed, lifting pitiful stumps of fingerless hands to their foreheads. A more desolate spectacle than a leper asylum can scarcely be imagined; yet here was to be found, in some cases, the grace of Christian resignation, with cheerfulness, which is not always present amid scenes of health and prosperity.

Not all leepra are in asylums; unnumbered thousands roam the streets at will. While attending the daily clinic of Dr. Charles R. Cook, of Lucknow, the only misaionary in all India of the Reformed Episcopal church, I sat within five feet of two lepers crowded in the press. Next to one of them was a man whose family was suffering with the plague, five having died, and four being ill at the moment. Another one of the patients had, witbin a few days, lost a baby, a wife and four brothers, and his father lay dangerously ill, all with the plague. One convalescent plague patient, whom the doctor had cured, was mildly rebuked by this quiet, unruffled missionary for leaving his bed too soon. A boy smitten with the plague was brought by a mother with dread-filled eyes, and carefully examined by the bare hands of the doctor.

This one doctor, with a single native assistant, had 61,638 cases last year, including a few in his well-kept little hospital. All classes, rich and poor, Mobammedans, Hindus and Christians, come for help. I counted 30 crowded into the small room at one time, while outside a larger crowd of waiting patients was listening to the native preacher.

A Medaled Missionary.

One of the star missions of the American board is at Ahmednagar, ... Dr. Robe... ...ume to senior missionary. Dr. Hume is less widely known as the recipient of a medal from King Edward for his famine relief work than as the author of "Missions from the Modern Viewpoint." That he and his associates stand high in native esteem was evident from the constant salaams he received as we rode about the city together in a tonga, or native cart. Many non-Christian natives have given largely to this mission work for Indians, and the government also contributes to the industrial school.

I found all sorts of educational and industrial enterprises under way, some of them, from a bicycle repair shop to a tract depot, being wholly or in part self-supporting. The big church in native style, where even Hindus have been known to worship unknown gods, interested me less than the extensive industrial establishments where oriental rugmaking, wenving, woodcarving, carpentry and brass and silver working are carried on for the market, under the direction of D. C. Churchill, of Oberlin college and the Massachusetts Institution of Technology, and J. B. Knight, of Amherst college, and an agricultural college—types of the nonministerial, college-bred missionaries who are doing pioneer work for the orient. Mr. Churchill has invented a new hand loom that is within the compass of the average Indian mind and purae.

Miss Emily R. Bissell and her brother, Rev. H. G. Bissell, carry on in this mission the work which their mother, who had been 54 years in India, laid down last year. While watching the arrival at the hospital here of a woman patient in a bullock cart I saw Miss Moniton comforting the weeping husband, a Christian teacher, in a manner which revealed to me the beautiful devotion of the missionaries to the people.

It takes devotion of an unselfish sort to do this work, especially among the villages. One Sunday morning I sat, with Rev. Mark Keaslar, of the Agra Methodist Episcopal mission, in blistering, life-shriveling heat, in a low, dirty, malodorous dwelling on the outskirts of the city, while he told a crowd of hookah-smoking natives the gospel story and answered their interested questions; which looks romantic and picturesque from this distance; but is work to take the heart out of anybody less devoted than a missionary; and it is the work which many hundreds of missionaries are doing all over India to-day.

HE MADE SOME MONEY.

How Champ Clark Earned Enough to Leave Kansas Town.

Few people know that Champ Clark, the celebrated congressman from Missouri, and also known as a lecturer, once practiced law, or tried to do so, in Wichita, Kan. But he did, according to a Wichita letter in the Topeka Capital. In 1875 Champ Clark opened an office where the Pacific Express company now is located. There was not a great deal of business for young attorneys at that time, and Champ Clark did the best he could to make a living, but he became discouraged, and, in time, left the state and returned to Missouri, where he was afterward elected to congress. He met Kos Harris on the street one day and told him that he intended to stay in Wichita until he had made some money, no matter how much or how it was made. Several days later he was seen on the streets and he had a beautiful bronze on his hands and face. It was the dark brown color that tells of honest toil in the corn field.

"I got it from cutting corn up in the country," was the reply.

"Get anything else?" asked the friend, who looked at the then attenuated form of the future fleshy and prominent lecturer.

"Sure," replied Clark. "I got this dollar for the day's work. And I want to tell you I am going to leave this town. I said I would not leave until I had made some money, and now that I have made it I am ready to leave." He left.

IMPORTANCE OF BEING FORTY.

Middle Age Said to Be the Right Time for Marriage.

At present, though a man is too old for many things at forty, it is not generally held that he is too old to marry. Far from that being the case, the increasing standard of comfort of the white racea and the increased cost of living are steadily putting forward the marrying age.

A paper read by Dr. Louise Robinovitch at the congresa of psychiatry at Amsterdam suggests another reason for comparatively late marriages. From a study of 74 biographies of eminent men, writers, painters, musicians and soldiers, she found that more than 80 per cent. of them were born of middle-aged parents. Napoleon, Benjamin Franklin, Coleridge, Balzac, Rembrandt, Rubens, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Wagner, Schumann and Schubert were all the youngest children of large families, and their parents were at least middle-aged when the genius of the family was born.

This may not be a precise argument in favor of late marriages, but it may encourage the hope in bachelors who have reached middle age without doing anything famous themselves that matrimony may recompense them for their own failure.

Inference Natural.

Charles ..., whose family moved lately next door to a handsome country home, where wide, green lawns are ornamented with strutting peacocks, was introduced for the first time to the birds of gorgeous plumage. His eyes grew round and rounder still with amazement. Then he went home to his mother and whispered to her in awed confidence:

"Mother, Mrs. C. has some turkeys with Christmas trees for tails!"

Smoking in Clubs.

The question of smoking was a burning one in the mid-eighteenth century, and it was not until 1845 that White's gave up a room to the use of tobacco, saya the London Chronicle. And in all clubs the smokers were relegated to the most dismal apartments. It was King Edward, when prince of Wales, who broke through the tradition, and when White's refused to extend the accommodation for smokers, started the Marlborough, wherein smoking was permitted in every part of the house but the diningroom.

REMINDED HIM OF HOME.

New Yorker Saw Beauty in Sign, Where Maiden Lady Could Not.

A party of tourists was being shown around Ciudad Juarez, the little Mexican town just across the Rio Grande from El Paso, Texas. Every one was delighted with its picturesqueness, and in particular a maiden lady, who went into raptures about each new sight.

"It is all so quaint," she said, ... adobe houses, the old church, the narrow streets, the little plaza, those dreadful-looking men wearing sombreros; everything breathes the spirit of an old-world civilization. It is so different from our United States."

"That's so," assented a New York man who had been listening. "For instance, where in all the world could you find anything so antique, so full of inherent beauty, so charged, as it were, with the essence of pure joy, as that sign over there." He pointed toward a whitewashed mud house on whose exterior was painted:

"BIGGEST BEER IN TOWN, 5c."

The woman eagerly turned to look. Then she froze the horrid man with a glance and did not speak to him again during the whole trip.

A LOYAL FRIEND

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1908, by the Author, W. E. Edson.)

Scripture Authority. — 1 Kings chapter 5 and 7:13-46.

SERMONETTE.

Not the least valuable legacy which a father leaves a child is the friends he has made. Gold and silver, houses and lands are as nothing in comparison with the true and loyal friend who stands ready to show that kindness and bestow that wise counsel which is like unto that which the father himself would have given.

"Hiram was ever a lover of David." This strong, close friendship is the best kind of an index to the character and ideals of this man, Hiram, king of Tyre. There can be no question but that this friendship was based entirely upon the qualities of goodness, and manhood and honor characteristic of both men, rather than upon selfish motives of political or material advantage to be gained.

It has been said most truthfully that "true friendships are made in heaven." And surely on this friendship which existed between this king of Tyre and King David we find the brand mark of heaven. It was of that enduring kind which when the father was gone was transferred with warm-hearted loyalty to the son.

This, then, is the first point we would emphasize: The enduring quality of true friendship. What kind of friendship is that which flits like the sunbeam and is gone when the cloud arises and darkness and trouble come? Who is worthy the name of friend who lets the dark valley fix the limits of that friendship? Friend to the father—friend to the children! And so we find Hiram sending the message of consolation and cheer to the young King Solomon when he hears of the death of his old friend King David. The friendship for the father shall be perpetuated in friendship for the son. Hiram will prove how true his friendship to David was by showing kindness and encouragement to King Solomon.

And the other point we would emphasize is the appreciation of the son for his father's friend.

Young man! Young woman! Had you a worthy father or mother? Then cherish as earth's best treasure for you the loyal, true friends they left behind. No new friendships you can form will prove so loyal and true as those which your parents tested through the storms and sunshine of their busy lives. Cleave to them, and form the new friendships slowly, testing and proving so that you in turn will have the rich legacy of tried and true friendships to leave to your children. Too often children cast ruthlessly aside the friends parents have won to themselves through the years.

What a splendid picture we have here of this young, inexperienced King Solomon finding in his father's friend an adviser and helper in the great and noble enterprise which was to mark his reign.

Young man, you cannot do better than to make the friend of your father your friend.

THE STORY.

HIRAM, king of Tyre, received the news of the death of the good King David with deep sorrow. He had been proud to count himself one of David's friends. Ever since the incidents years before which had brought them together in friendly intercourse these two kings had maintained the most cordial relations. The merchants of the busy commercial Tyre found good markets in the kingdom of Israel for their merchandise, which came to that port from all parts of the world, for the Tyreans were great traders. And in exchange they took the fruits and the grains, the sheep and the cattle, which the land of Israel produced so bountifully. And so as a result there had come to exist between the kingdom of Tyre and the kingdom of Israel the most friendly intercourse. And Hiram delighted in this friendship which the good King David showed towards him. Hiram was a great lover of the truest and best in manhood, and long before he had come to the kingdom and while yet David was fleeing hither and thither to escape the murderous wrath of Saul, he had felt a great admiration for the bold young adventurer who was ever ready to strike a blow in defense of the weak and the oppressed. Stories reached him from time to time of the bravery and skill of the indomitable warrior and his hardy band, and when a few years after he (Hiram) came to the throne of Tyre, and events transpired in Israel which gave David the kingdom, he sent a deputation with gifts and cordial messages of greeting. This had been the beginning of a close intimacy between the two, and when a few years later it came to his ears that David desired to build himself a house, he had sent the great cedar timbers from Lebanon, and the house had been built. And then when he heard that King David desired to build a house to his God, he had hastened to again offer him the timbers from Lebanon. That for some reason which he never clearly understood, David's plans had been suddenly checked, and to his offers David had merely suggested that perhaps some day he might renew the offer to his son.

And now that the news had come of David's death this was the first thought which occurred to King Hiram. Would the new King Solomon have the desire and the ability to carry out the will and wishes of his father? He had seen the young man but once, and that was upon the occasion of one of his visits to Jerusalem, but he remembered how he had been struck by the beauty of the young man.

"Ah, but it takes more than beauty of person to make a worthy king," he had muttered to himself as King David had brought the young lad to his side and had whispered in Hiram's ear that God had promised that the boy should sit upon his throne.

And now his beloved friend David was dead and his son Solomon sat upon his throne. Would he prove a worthy son? Would he escape the manifold pitfalls which would surround him in his exalted position?

"Well, the friend of David will be the friend to David's son," exclaimed Hiram. "Whatever the young man may be, we shall strive to show him kindness for his father David's sake."

So it was that among the first to send words of greeting and encouragement to the young ruler of Israel was the king of Tyre, these significant words being part of the message:

"The cedars of Lebanon make obeisance to Israel's king and delight to await his pleasure."

"It may be," thought Hiram, as he indicted the message, "that it will bring to the mind of Solomon the great commission which his father David desired him to perform. Will the young man realize his great opportunity or will the other things of the kingdom occupy his thoughts? Perhaps he will desire conquest rather than the building of a temple for his God."

Nearly four years went by and Hiram waited. No word had come from King Solomon of his purpose to build the house of God in accordance with the wishes of David his father. Yes, Hiram had heard of the growing splendor of the kingdom. He had heard of the grace and wisdom which marked the beginning of Solomon's reign, and he noted with a certain degree of hopefulness that king and people were devoted to the service and worship of the God of Israel.

"But how can he delay the building of a house to his God? What can he do with all the gold and silver which his father David gathered? And the cedars of Lebanon groan in their desire to find place in a building to David's God," and Hiram sighed within him.

"What is that?" he asked as at that moment a servant interrupted his reverie. "A messenger from King Solomon? Show him in at once."

Eagerly Hiram waited while the courtier entered and made his obeisance.

"I will hear at once the message from the son of my friend David."

Without further delay the courtier unrolled his parchment and read:

"To Hiram, king of Tyre: Thou knowest how that David, my father, could not build an house unto the name of the Lord his God for the wars which were about him on every side, until the Lord put them under the soles of his feet."

With the beginning of the reading and the first reference to the building of a house to the Lord Hiram's face lit up with a glow, his eyes sparkled with a new enthusiasm, and he exclaimed under his breath: "Blessed be the name of the Lord this day which hath given David a wise son over his people."

The messenger paused and looked up hastily, but being reassured by the lively interest which Hiram was taking in his reading, he continued:

"Command thou now, therefore, that they hew me cedar trees out of Lebanon."

"The Lord be praised! The Lord be praised!" Hiram cried fervently as the message was completed. And turning to his servant he hastily summoned his secretaries and had inscribed at once a message to King Solomon, saying:

"I have considered the things which thou sentest to me for: and I will do all thy desire concerning timber of cedar and concerning timber of fir."

Which message when Solomon read he thanked the Lord and took courage in the great undertaking, saying, gratefully:

BEYOND LIMIT OF PATIENCE.

Explanation Satisfied Policeman That Punishment Was Due.

Policeman Kneirem, of the Tenderloin precinct, saw an old man beating a small boy on Seventh avenue recently in a fashion that reminded the officer of the happy days when he used to beat it from the parental beating. So with a cheerful smile, having children of his own, the policeman approached the old man.

"Listen," replied the man; "half an hour ago I sent Isaac to the delicatessen. I gave him two quarters, one with which to buy bread, the other to buy fish. And now he comes back and says he wants to know which quarter is for the fish and which for the bread. Is it enough?"

"It is," replied Kneirem.—New York World.

ITCHING HUMOR ON BOY

His Hands Were a Solid Mass, and Disease Spread All Over Body —Cured in 4 Days By Cuticura.

"One day we noticed that our little boy was all broken out with itching sores. We first noticed it on his little hands. His hands were not as bad then, and we didn't think anything serious would result. But the next day we heard of the Cuticura Remedies being so good for itching sores. By this time the disease had spread all over his body, and his hands were nothing but a solid mass of this itching disease. I purchased a box of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment, and that night I took the Cuticura Soap and lukewarm water and washed him well. Then I dried him and took the Cuticura Ointment and anointed him with it. I did this every evening and in four nights he was entirely cured. Mrs. Frank Donahue, 208 Fremont St., Kokomo, Ind., Sept. 16, 1907."

"'My wife,' was the reply. 'She says they issue the prettiest calendars.'"

NO BLESSING FOR HER.

Disappointed Youngster Discriminated in His Prayer.

For several weeks, little Ralph had enjoyed the use of a Shetland pony, the property of a horse dealer who was a friend of the family. But much to Ralph's sorrow, there came a day recently when the pony was sold, and the delightful horseback rides came to a sudden end. The purchaser, as Ralph found out by inquiry, was a little girl of about his own mature age of five. Ever since his acquaintance with the pony began, Ralph had included him in his bedtime prayer, and "God bless the pony," was an earnest nightly petition. The first evening after the sale of the pony, Ralph hesitated when he reached his pet's place in the prayer. Then, after a moment's thought, he continued:

"Please, God, bless the pony just the same; but, God, don't you bless the little girl what's got the pony."

Frank If Not Complimentary.

Her brother, aged 17, had been made captain of a high school football team and consequently had become suddenly popular with the girls in the neighborhood. Because of this the manager of a skating rink presented brother with a season pass. Sister, who had attained the tremendous age of 20, was truly flattered when brother asked her, rather than some of the younger belles of his acquaintance, to share the privileges of that skating rink pass. But brother's explanation removed all danger of the immediate growth of sister's vanity. "You see," he told her with frank simplicity, "I'm not used to skating with girls. I'll practice on you for a month or two, and then when I can do it real well I'll ask some of the other girls."

Made Him Nervous.

"What in the world is the matter, Harold?" anxiously inquired the pretty girl. "Why, you seem too nervous to sit down a minute."

"You'll have to pardon me," responded Harold Hatband, with an eye on the window, "but—er—I just saw your father prowling around with a bird gun."

"Oh, nonsense! Why, father likes you. Didn't I hear him say that you were good enough to eat?"

"H'm! That's just the reason why he might try to pepper me."

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing catarrh. Send for testimonials, free.

REV. TROUTMAN SENDS BEST WISHES FOR PE-RU-NA

Rev. George A. E. Troutman, Mt. Washington, Mo., Writes,

"My Wife and I Are Strong Believers in Pe-ru-na."

REV. GEORGE A.E.TROUTMAN

Catarrh and La Grippe.

Rev. Geo. A. E. Troutman, Mt. Washington, Mo., writes: "My wife and I are strong believers in Peruna.

"For several years I have been troubled with a peculiar spasmodic affection of the throat. It would seize me suddenly and for a few minutes I would be unable to speak audibly, and my breath would be greatly interfered with. I would be obliged to gasp for breath.

"I finally concluded that it was some catarrhal affection which probably excited the spasm. It interfered with my vocation as a preacher, attacking me occasionally in the pulpit.

"I had heard so much about Peruna as a catarrh remedy that I determined to try it. After taking two bottles, my trouble has disappeared. I feel sure that Peruna has greatly benefitted me."

Rev. P. E. Swanstrom, Swedish Baptist Pastor, Box 238, Grantsburg, Wis., writes that from the use of Peruna he is perfectly well, entirely cured of chronic diarrhea and catarrh.

I was cured of a bad case of catarrh when nothing else that I tried had any effect. My wife was cured from a severe case of la grippe, and we feel that the least we can do is to gratefully acknowledge the merit of Peruna.

"My wife joins me in sending best wishes for your success."

Throat Trouble.

Rev. H. W. Tate, 920 Lincoln Avenue, Walnut Hills, Cincinnati, Ohio, writes:

Peruna in Tablet Form.

For two years Dr. Hartman and his assistants have incessantly labored to create Peruna in tablet form, and their strenuous labors have just been crowned with success. People who object to liquid medicines can now secure Peruna Tablets, which represent the medicinal ingredients of Peruna. Each tablet is equivalent to one average dose of Peruna.

Local News.

B. B. Hume has been giving his two steppers some exercise the last week. He has them in fine flesh, which will have to be reduced before they can get down to their best trip.

Battie Long, who moved from his farm at Richwood to the vicinity of Florence, a few years since has moved back to his Richwood possessions. Mr. Long is one of the county's very successful farmers.

In another month the days will be a nice length again, there being time enough between sun rise and sun set, in which a good day's work can be done, and about then the farmers will be getting very busy with crop preparation.

The Odd Fellows' lodge at Florence had a rousin' meeting last Saturday night, when there was work in all the degrees. Several brethren from the city were present and assisted in the work. Venus looks on the boom again.

The Consolidated Telephone Co. is considering a proposition of constructing several trunk lines and installing a switch-board at Walton. If the improvements now being considered are introduced the Consolidated will have the best rural system in this part of the State.

Charles Finn, of Plattsburg, was in town, last Friday, and presented this office with a box of frames filled with nice honey. Mr. Finn says it was made by the bees late last fall, when they worked nearly entirely on the weed called by some "the last rose of summer," which is generally considered absolutely worthless.

Have Patience.

Some of those who will be served by the Burlington and Francesville rural mail route (Burlington No. 3) if established, are already becoming impatient, but they must bear in mind that Uncle Sam takes his own sweet time to do his work. If the petition is granted the route may be in operation in a few months, which is the best that can be hoped for, but rest assured that the matter will be pushed as rapidly as possibly by Mr. Rhinock, who will give it his personal attention.

Big Time at Erlanger.

A large delegation of local Knights of Pythias responded, last Saturday night, to an invitation to visit the Erlanger lodge, where they witnessed degree work on three candidates, after which a sumptuous lunch was served. Several Covington members of the order were present. The Erlanger lodge has a lengthy roster of members, which is growing all the time, and it is one of the best entertainers among the several secret organizations in this part of the State. When Erlanger lodge has anything good on hand the brethren from the surrounding country are always invited to share it.

Walton—Hughes.

Earl Walton, of Petersburg, and Miss Artie Hughes, daughter of Attorney G. G. Hughes, and wife, of Burlington, were quietly married in Covington, last Saturday, at the residence of Rev. Milo Atkinson. Mr. Walton came to Burlington, last Friday evening, and Saturday morning they left for Covington by the way of Lawrenceburg. It had been understood for several days that the wedding would occur shortly, but very few knew it was their intention to marry so soon. The bride is a quiet, unassuming lady, who will make Mr. Walton an ideal companion for life, while he will be a kind and thoughtful husband. These young people are deservedly popular at their respective homes, and in their new relations of life they have the best wishes of a host of friends.

Caused by a Gasoline Stove.

About half after nine o'clock last Saturday morning the bucket brigade was called to the residence of David Sanders, colored, to fight a fire that had gained considerable headway in the attic of the L. The house is located in the southeast part of the town and it took some time for the brigade to assemble and begin work, but soon after the water was turned on the blaze it began to diminish and was under control in a few minutes. The fire was caused in some manner by a gasoline stove that was being used in ironing. Balls of carpet rags, some clothing and other small articles in the attic were damaged considerably by the fire, while a small space on the roof had to be torn off. It was a narrow escape for the entire residence, a portion of which was built only a few years ago. The short time in which the fire was subdued is another proof of the efficiency of the local bucket brigade which always gets together in short order after the alarm is turned in.

A Higher Health Level.

"I have reached a higher health level since I began using Dr. King's New Life Pills," writes Jacob Springer, of West Franklin, Maine. "They keep my stomach, liver and bowels working just right." If these pills disappoint you on trial, money will be refunded at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

Hastened the Delivery, No Doubt.

On Tuesday before Applegate and Hoffman escaped from jail on Wednesday night, County Judge Cason, County Attorney Riddell and some of the justices of the peace visited the prison to see in what condition it was and how provided for in the way of bed and bedding and while there Judge Cason called the attention of the other officers to the fact that the door to the corridor was hanging at one of the lower corners, when that part of the cell was looked over prowy closely. The Judge says he is satisfied that he had his hand on or very near the rivets that were sawed, but saw nothing to attract his attention to the work. He now remembers that the prisoners seemed ill at ease all the time the visitors were in their presence, and that one of them carried a closed book under his arm all the time, which, no doubt concealed the saw that was used for cutting the rivets. It may be that the visit of the officers to the prison hastened the delivery.

Worse Than Night-Riders.

One day last week the Commercial Tribune contained an exagerated account of the burning of the Nixon residence near Gasburg. As usual it had blood hounds on the track of the incendiaries which it said were night riders. The only truth the article contained was the statement that the building burnt. The sensational newspaper articles that are being sent out from Kentucky are doing the State vastly more harm than the night riders. People at a distance never see them denied, and relying on the articles as true, believe that incendiaries are overrunning the State, and that they are organized into bands of night riders. A Kentuckian who has any regard for himself and is loyal to his State and her institutions will not prepare for publication articles such as the one above referred to.

Compromised.

The hearing in the contest over the probate of the last will of Chas. Stevenson was begun in the county court Tuesday of last week and continued that day, and after hearing numerous witnesses, again resumed Wednesday morning, when a compromise was effected. At the regular December term of the court two papers, each being properly executed, purporting to be the last will and testament of Charles B. Stevenson, deceased, was presented to the court and offered for probate, and the hearing of the case was set for Tuesday, the 14th day of January. The decedent died in the National Soldiers' Home, at Dayton, Ohio, and his estate consists of money to the amount of about $1,500. One paper of date July 12th, 1900, made George Miller the beneficiary, and named him as executor, the other, of date Sept. 15th, 1902, made Theodore Stevenson, resident of Norfolk, Va., and son of the decedent, the sole beneficiary. By the term of the compromise Mr. Miller is to receive the sum of $200. D. E. Castleman was appointed administrator of the estate with the will annexed.

It Does The Business.

Mr. E. E. Chamberlain, of Clinton, Maine, says of Bucklen's Arnica Salve. "It does the business; I have used it for piles and it cured them. Used it for chapped hands and it cured them. Applied it to an old sore and it healed it without leaving a scar behind." 25c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

Wm. Clore raised four turkeys last year, which always roosted in his poultry house. Just before Xmas he sold three of them, keeping one for his dinner on the 25th. On the morning of the 24th he got up early so as to catch his turkey before he came down off of his roost, but when he arrived at his poultry house, no turkey was to be seen. After day break he searched the poultry yard and still could not find it, giving it up at last, declaring someone had stolen it the night before. He called his son by telephone and told him of his loss, asking him to sell him one of his turkeys, which he did. Later in the day after getting his fowl dressed and ready to cook, he was relating the story to his tenant, who was passing, when he said, "I heard a turkey up in my tobacco at the barn this morning." They started for the barn and when they reached it Mr. Clore spied his turkey sitting up in the top of the barn, where it stayed all day and night. The next morning it came back to the house and has never left.

A GOOD WOMAN GONE.

"After Lifes' Fitful Fever She Sleeps Well."

From the home of her sister, Mrs. Joseph H. Graves, of Erlanger, January 15th, 7 o'clock p. m., after one week's sickness of pneumonia, the spirit of Mrs. Fanny Graves Latham entered into rest. She was a daughter of the late Joseph Addison and Anna Cabell Harrison Graves. "After life's fitful fever she sleeps well."

A beautiful life has closed, a troubled spirit has at last found that place which passeth understanding. In the death of Mrs. Fannie Graves Latham, the community at large has lost a public benefactor, the needy a friend, the poor and broken hearted a comforter—one whose charity was unbounded, whose purse was ever open to the cry of the afflicted.—Dr. Edward Guerrant, one of the shining lights of the Presbyterian church, called her the "Elect Lady." So unostentatious was her "lending to the Lord," that in many, many instances her most intimate associates never knew of the deeds of kindness which lifted the burdens from tired shoulders. The 13th verse of the 19th chapter of 1st Chronicles was the motto by which her life was moulded, her main object being "God's will to know, God's will to do, God's will to love." An invalid for some years before her passing away, she was always bright and cheerful, always bearing in mind one of her favorite couplets, "Take heart, who bears the cross today shall bear the crown tomorrow." The funeral services took place from the home of her devoted sister, Mrs. Joseph Graves, of Erlanger. Rev. Dr. Evans, of Walton, paid just and worthy tribute to the memory of one whom he had known and reverenced for many years. His "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the spirit, that they may rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

WHAT BOONE COUNTY NEEDS

Is More Graded Schools, and The People of Burlington and Vicinity Should Get Busy.

To those interested in a Graded School at Burlington:

It has been my purpose for several years to do something in the schools of Boone county. We have very few graded schools in the county. Walton and Verona have established schools of which they may well feel proud. Petersburg and Belleview are planning for greater things. If about three more schools were established with High School departments and the rest of the schools in the county could be graded common schools we would not have so many of our good citizens moving to the cities, and besides this the property of the county would be increased in value, while many good people would settle on the farms. Several of Burlington's progressive citizens have signified their cooperation in a Graded Private School by signing their names together with the number of children to an article in the hands of the RECORDER. It is the purpose to establish a regular Graded School including a high school course. The diploma from the high school will admit the graduate to any regular college in the State. I have employed an assistant on the condition that the success of the school is assured by the first week in February. It has been decided to fix the tuition at $40 per session for the high school, and $25 per session for the lower grades. If the parents will furnish the means for a high school, then any bright student can finish his own education by his own efforts. It is my purpose to be in Burlington on February 1st, and also in the morning of Monday, February 3d. Over one-third of the number of pupils, necessary for the school to be a success, have been signed, but many have not signed who say that they will patronize the school. I can not guarantee the salary of an assistant unless you guarantee me your support. If this school is once established I do not think it will be hard to maintain, but the patrons in and about Burlington are the ones who are to determine whether or not it shall be established. I trust that you can see me at the time I mention and frankly tell me your position so I can make my plans accordingly. Respectfully,

EDGAR C. RILEY.

HON. JAMES N. KEHOE

Will Speak at the Court House, Burlington, Ky., Monday, February 3d, 1908, FLORENCE.

Last Wednesday (22d) was a most enjoyable day at the Lutheran Parsonage. About 30 of the members of Hopeful Church called on the pastor and wife. They took possession of the house about 10 o'clock. They were welcomed and invited to make them selves at home. They were a jolly, happy-hearted company, well fitted to encourage the pastor's family. They brought their dinner with them, much more than could be eaten by those present, and such a dinner. Everything was of the very best and was so perfectly cooked and spiced as to please everyone. Besides what was brought for the dinner, there was a donation of potatoes, sugar, bread and canned goods in large quantity. Such expressions of interest and appreciation are powerful to encourage the pastor and his wife, especially so at the beginning of a pastorate.

The pastor and wife hope that many more of their people may come to spend a day at the parsonage, to become better acquainted with the pastor's surrounding and the occupants of the parsonage.

MRS. GEO. HAFER

Lavenia Alice Hafer, wife of Geo. Hafer, of Hebron, died January 15, 1908, aged 57 years, 7 months and 15 days.

Mrs. Hafer's maiden name was Conner. She was born at Hebron, Ky., May 30th, 1850 She was a member of Hebron Lutheran church for 40 years. She was one of its most devoted and active members, and for many years one of its ablest Sunday school teachers. She was married to George O. Hafer, Nov. 10th, 1870. To this union four children were born, three sons and one daughter. Three of these, Dr. L. C. of Florence; O. C. of Hebron, and Lovena, at home with the husband, survive the wife and mother. She died at the home of her son in Florence where she had gone for care and treatment. Diabetes was the cause of her death. Of her it can truly be said death had no terrors, and faith in Christ conquered all fear. She rests from her labors and her works do follow her." Her husband is comforted in her bright hope of eternal life; and her children praise her for the words and influences that moulded their christian character. In their upright walk and conversation she rejoiced and was made submissive to the will of God. Mrs. Hafer looked upon her being spared till her children were grown and the sons settled in life, as a goodness of God, and was then "ready to depart and be with Christ." Her work was done—her reward is with her.

Japaness Methods.

A grim story of Japanese ingenuity comes from the island of Formosa, formerly Chinese territory, but now a possession of the Japanese, who are waging war against the savages of the interior. These are represented to be of the ferocious order, the head-hunting variety of barbarians who are relentless in pursuit of enemies and to whom accordingly it is deemed useless to show mercy in time of hostilities. At least it is represented that very effective means have been taken to bring the savages to terms. As the story goes, whenever a band of the insurgents can be located a strong barbed-wire fence is constructed all around the area, and is heavily charged with electricity. Then the Japanese troops advance, the head-hunters falling back before them. The result is inevitable. If the savages face the Japanese they are killed by rifle fire. If they continue to flee until they bring up against the wire fence they are shocked to death by electricity. Certainly a few applications of that sort of medicine will be effective on the patient. Before such scientific warfare the occupation of the head hunter is gone. And if he persists the head hunter goes himself.

Revolutionists in Russia may be punished but not cured, and the aristocrats among them hold to their principles even more pertinaciously than do the representatives of lower classes. Dispatches record that Mme. Breshkovskaya, a woman 70 years old and one of the first aristocratic converts to the terrorist propaganda, has been cast into prison in St. Petersburg for distributing terrorist literature. She was sent to Siberia in the early seventies, but succeeded in escaping. The experience, however, only strengthened her revolutionary ideas. As in France in the time of the revolution, it is the fiery determination of the women that does much to keep the spirit of rebellion alive.

Princess Louise of Orleans was married to Prince Charles of Bourbon in England recently, in the presence of the king and queen of Spain and nearly 40 other members of royal families. She is the youngest daughter of the late Comte de Paris, who with his brother and uncle served on the staff of Gen. McClellan in the civil war in America. The count's history of the war has been translated into English, but he and his family have never stirred the national imagination as did Lafayette, that other Frenchman who fought with American troops.

They are shipping apples from Portland, Ore., to Vladivostok, Russia, on the opposite side of the Pacific, and the fruit brings $7.50 per bushel. Of course the apples are carefully selected and packed, but the fact that such prices can be obtained fully warrants the trouble. When an American product as perishable as apples can be shipped 10,000 miles across the water and sold at a big profit it should be encouragement to try the same process with other articles. There are hundreds of things which the United States can supply, and the field is waiting to be improved.

There will be music in the air when the big battleship fleet is not engaged in naval practice. No less than 20 pianos with pianolas were taken along on the ships, having been furnished by private subscription for the delectation of officers and men. That gives at least one instrument to each ship, and some of the vessels will have two pianos with mechanical attachments. And as a full supply of both classic and popular music goes along there isn't a doubt that the boys will have some delightful times. The pianolas will play when the guns do not.

A recent chemical investigation by the New York health department discloses the pleasing intelligence that bologna sausage and liverwurst are all that they should be. Frankfurters are uncertain, however, because some of them are seasoned with borax or sulphite. In view of the doubt that was cast on these delicacies some months ago this information will be welcomed by would-be consumers whose faith was undermined. As for a little borax, there might be worse things in sausage!

Our navy certainly is a wonder. One hundred men from each of the battleships which paused at the Island of Trinidad were given shore leave and there were no brawls. Can other nations blame us for pointing with pride?

King Leopold has sent to New York for display a large collection of what are said to be very valuable and interesting exhibits from the Congo. So far as reported no scarred and mutilated natives are among them.

BUILDING THE TEMPLE

SERMONETTE.

"Behold, I purpose to build an house unto the name of the Lord my God, as the Lord spake unto David my father, saying, Thy son, whom I will set upon thy throne in thy room, shall build an house unto my name." The high and noble ambition of David, the father, to find realization in the willing service of Solomon the son.

It is a splendid thing for a father to have visions of noble, exalted service which find their realization in the son. What greater legacy could a father leave than the commission to the discharge of a great mission?

It is a grand thing to find a son whose filial love and obedience holds him steadfast to the working out of the father's will. How better could the son display the true qualities of sonship than in purposing to consummate the great work for which the father had planned?

In this respect Solomon was a striking type of the Christ, who came delighting to do the will of the Father who had sent him. The one plan of his life was the consummation of the supreme plan of salvation, purposed in the heart of God from the beginning.

If Solomon was to build a temple of wood and stone for the dwelling place of God, Christ was to build a temple, not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. His task was the transforming of the human life into the temple beautiful for the indwelling of the blessed Paraclete, the holy representative of both God the Father and God the Son.

"There was neither hammer nor ax nor any tool of iron heard in the house, while it was building."—Thus reverently did the building of God's house proceed. All the material was brought to the temple site completely fitted and finished, so that all that was necessary was the placing of stone upon stone, and beam upon beam, each fitting perfectly into its place.

May we not gather from this the inspiring, helpful thought that we who are being builded as living stones into God's temple are being shaped and fashioned and prepared to fit perfectly into the completed structure when all the parts are at last assembled. Here in this life we know not what niche we are to fill, that remains to be revealed. But like the stone in the quarry far below the temple site was hewn and smoothed and grooved ready to find its place at last in the splendid temple which was to be reared, so we, here in the earthly pilgrimage, are receiving that discipline which shall knock off the sharp corners, and smooth the rough surfaces and groove the life with the pattern of God's will so as to at last make it fit into its place in the completed temple.

THE STORY.

HEAPS upon heaps of glittering gold and shining silver.

Scarcely a Croesus could have looked upon richer treasure than that which greeted the eyes of King Solomon that morning as he had been led to the secret store house by the prophet Nathan.

"And all this my father David gathered?" questioned Solomon, as with a sort of awed wonder he contemplated the great piles of yellow and white metal.

"Yea," replied the aged man of God, thoughtfully watching the face of the young king, "it was the one passion of his life that he might gather the treasure which should be reared into a dwelling place for his God."

"He hath surely made my task an easy one," responded Solomon, meditatively.

"Then thou dost accept the commission?" questioned the prophet, almost eagerly.

"Yea, thou knowest that from the first day that God gave me to sit upon the throne of David my father, this thought has been ever before me."

"But it is already the fourth year of thy reign."

"True, but what place had the building of a temple to the God of Israel until the certainty of the kingdom was established in my hands? These have not been idle years."

"Nay," hastily rejoined Nathan, "I meant not to chide thee with neglect, for I know how faithful thou hast been in the discharge of all that God would have thee do, but my old heart longs with an intense longing to see the house of God reared even as David, thy father, planned it should be."

"Then am I glad that I came this morning to speak with thee concerning the beginning of the work," Solomon responded, heartily.

"And I see by thy face that thou hast some good news in connection therewith."

"That I have, thou good Nathan, and thou shalt speedily know that the thing which my father David so earnestly desired is to come to pass. See!" he exclaimed, thrusting into his hands the message which he had received that morning from Hiram, king of Tyre. "See, the timbers of cedar and the timbers of fir ... now being hewn and prepared for their place in the temple."

"'Tis well. I knew that Hiram's heart was toward thee in this thing.'

"And even now the workers in stone are cutting out the blocks which shall be used in the building."

"Thou art swift indeed, when thou hast once begun the work."

"Yea, the project absorbs my every ambition. What a great privilege that to me should have come the task of building a dwelling place for the great God of Israel. My heart does magnify him this morning. No treasure is too great to be used in his house, and so I rejoice as I see these heaps upon heaps of gold and silver. Verily it shall be an house of gold which shall be reared to my Lord."

"In this, then, it will be no different from the gorgeous temples which are reared to the gods whose images of gold and silver and precious stones are the works of men's hands."

"Thou hast but spoken of the thing which is upon my heart, and about which I have come to talk with thee. The mere wealth of cedar timbers and gold and silver and precious stones cannot provide a suitable dwelling place for the great God of Israel. There is none like unto him among all the gods of the nations round about, and the house which should be built unto his name and for his dwelling place should be different from those reared to the names of these other gods."

"True," responded the old prophet, fervidly, entering whole-heartedly into the spirit which evidently possessed the young king.

"But in what respect can we mark the dwelling place of our God with the reverence and devotion which is due his great and exalted name? For the power and majesty of the name of our God has gone out into all the earth, so that whithersoever any of our people go they are known as the chosen people of the one and mighty God."

"True," again fervidly responded Nathan, and then added in appreciative tone, as he laid his hand upon the young man's shoulder: "And thou, my son, by thy loyalty to the God of David thy father, and thy care to walk in all his statutes, hast exalted the name of the Lord whithersoever the fame of thy kingdom hast gone."

A glad light sprang into the face of the young king. These words of the prophet sounded sweet in his ears, and without any thought of personal pride he responded:

"Yea, the Lord hath been much to me, and his blessing hath surely rested upon me and my people. And for this reason would I rear his temple so that it shall be known through all the earth as the temple of the only and true God, the God of Abraham and of Isaac, and of Israel."

"And shall not this be brought to pass by the spirit of devotion which thou dost bring to the work? For thou must know that the work which we do becomes marked and glorified by the spirit with which it is performed."

"Thou hast uttered just the thought that is in my heart and what could show more clearly the reverence due our holy God than that his temple should be reared in silent dignity and grandeur?"

"I do not catch your meaning, I think."

"It is just this. Each stone and each timber and all the fittings thereto shall be so shapen and fitted that there shall not be sound of hammer or saw or other tool heard upon the temple site. To that lofty rock overlooking the beautiful valley shall be brought all the materials fitted and prepared to grow into a building where our God shall be pleased to dwell in the midst of his people. No building before has been reared in this way, and the people shall know that the temple of the God of Israel is indeed holy."

"It will be marvelous," ejaculated Nathan, earnestly.

"Yea, but possible, for the Spirit of God shall move in the work to the enlightenment of his servant in planning the work and in his workmen who shall prepare all the parts to fit one within the other."

"And thou hast my blessing in all this," ejaculated Nathan. "And there will be none in all Israel who will so earnestly give himself in thought and prayer to this thing than your old friend and father in Israel, Nathan."

"Thank you," responded the king, simply. "And now I shall give myself to the work."

Enterprising Missionary Exposition.

The great missionary exposition held at Swansea, Wales, recently, was attended by more than 20,000 persons and it was held in the vast hall built for the annual musical festival called the "Elsteddfod Pavilion." There are six "courts" formed, representing India, China, Africa, the South Seas, Madagascar and New Guinea. The actual scenes of these countries were admirably reproduced under the direction of missionaries now visiting in or retired to Great Britain, and thousands who before the exhibition had little knowledge of the great results obtained, are now awake to the meaning of the missionary enterprise.

BREEDER OF TRUSTS

REPUBLICAN TARIFF POLICY WELL DESCRIBED.

M. E. Ingalls Points Out Reason for the Great Accumulation of Wealth in a Few Hands—Need of Immediate Change.

In a speech delivered at Lancaster, O., January 8, on "Democracy," M. E. Ingalls denounced the trust breeding policy of the Republican party and showed the only cure for the evil—that advocated by the Democrats—proper reduction of the tariff where it serves to foster monopoly, and publicity for corporate affairs. He said in part:

"We hear much to-day from the Republican leaders about the large corporations and trusts and predatory wealth, and they call for their destruction (as though that would bring safety to the republic), when the fact is, it is like cutting down the weeds instead of digging them up by the roots. To my mind, the great source and cause of these large corporations, and this great accumulation of wealth in a few hands, is due to our system of taxation; more especially the tariff. That is the great breeder of trusts and fortunes. A tariff which enables men to combine and keep out competition, and then feed upon the public, increasing their profits from year to year. This is the source and origin of nearly all these great combinations. When this government first started, and until a few years since, the theory of the tariff was that it should be so laid as to produce revenue, with taxation as an incident. This has been changed in the last few years, so that to-day your tariff is made for protection, and the revenue is only an incident. Thus is the doctrine of the fathers reversed, and reversed for what? For the purpose of enabling these great corporations to protect themselves and form alliances and combinations which will keep out competition; and sell cheaper to foreigners than to our own people; to drive out the small manufacturerers, and produce exactly the condition of affairs that we have to-day. Does anyone think that a law can be wise or good which will enable one man to take $300,000,000 or $400,000,000 out of manufacturing business by a combination, formed solely for the purpose of driving out all the smaller manufacturers and forming one gigantic monopoly? Was there ever a tariff law made in the last 20 years that was not dictated by the sugar trust? The president of that trust, who was one of the ablest men in the country, properly and rightly stated at Washington that the tariff was the mother of trusts. No one knew better than he whereof he spoke. We do not wish to break down, to destroy. Our mission is to build up, but we want to build up for the benefit of the many and not for the few. Our Republican opponents say we must not touch the tariff this election, and that when it is amended it should be by the people who are its friends; that is, I suppose, those who are sharing the profits of the legalized robbery. This is a nice doctrine, which if applied to everything in the world would produce some astonishing results. The swindler who was cheating you might say he should not be interfered with at present, and that the laws to protect you from such swindling should be made in the future by his friends. We think it well, if this is an evil, as claimed, that it should be eradicated now, and that the provisions for its eradication should not be made by those who are sharing in the plunder. Let us have an honest deal; let the change be made at once, and let it be made by the people. So, my fellow-Democrats, I would have our party make this one of the leading issues of the coming campaign.

"Next, I would endeavor to control the trusts, and by trusts I mean any combination of men or individuals for purposes of business, whether under the name of a trust, corporation or a company. There is really no difference. I am not in favor of destroying them, as some of the statesmen of the day demand.

"The first way of controlling these is by amending the tariff, as I have already stated. This will do away with the government protection in their formation, and in the conduct of their business.

"Then, instead of destroying those that are left, let us control them and make them our servants and subservient to law instead of independent and defying it. Let us provide that any aggregation of capital, whether a trust or corporation or a company, by whatever name they call themselves, intending to do an interstate business, should apply for a license to do business to the commissioner of corporations of the national government, and in such application they must state where and when incorporated, the amount of their capital, how it was paid for, who are its stockholders and officers, and, in fact, a complete history of the formation of the company, and its financial condition. Then, if approved, they should be given permission to do business, but only with they understanding that they make up a statement of their condition at least twice a year, and that they submit all their books and accounts for examination by commissioners appointed by the government. In other words, their entire formation and conduct of their business shall be brought into the light of publicity. Then, if their conduct is wrong, the public will know and condemn it; if it is right, they will approve it."

PROSPERITY OF THE FARMERS.

Republican Claim That It Is Due to the Tariff Exploded.

Argentina is one of the greatest competitors of the American wheat farmer and the harvest is beginning there. It is reported that the weather is unfavorable, and in consequence the price of wheat in the United States has advanced five cents, or more, a bushel in the past week or two. Thus we see how the American farmers are entirely dependent upon nature, both here and in foreign climes, and how slightly can man-made laws aid those dependent upon the soil. Yet the Republican party has attempted for years to deceive the farmers of the United States by placing a duty of 25 cents a bushel on wheat and a similar tariff duty on other farm products, except cotton, produced by Democrats and darkeys who were not considered of enough political importance to even make the pretense of protecting. Although cotton was placed on the free list, the ... growers have not complained, for their common sense has taught them that late springs, or early frost, too much rain, or drought, or the boll weevil are not controlled by the Republican party, however omnipotent it boasts itself to be. Nor have the cotton growers suffered by this lack of Republican protection, for thinks to their own labors and the average good seasons the crops have been generally favorable and the price fairly remunerative.

But when the other side of the ledger is examined it is at once seen what a great increase in expenditures has come about since the present tariff law was enacted ten years ago. The average increase in the price of all the farmer buys is close upon 50 per cent., and nearly every article is protected by the tariff, which has fostered a trust or combine with the object of eliminating competition. The tariff having virtually abolished competition from abroad, the trusts by combination have been able to abolish it at home.

If the Democrats had been united on financial and other policies this plundering policy of protection would long since have been discarded, for nothing but Democratic divisions has kept the Republican party in power. The recent panic shows that Republican policies are unsafe and unsound, and that Democratic unity is necessary to relieve the distress that such policies have brought on the American people. Honest Republicans, like honest Democrats, are helpless to effect necessary reforms, without the aid of a united Democracy. The majority that controls the Republican party is wedded to its idols, the trusts and corporations, and must, at least, suffer a period of loss of power that it may have the opportunity to throw off the political barnacles that now infest it. Therefore, let all Democrats work and pray for unity in the party, without which there can be no reform.

Republican Decay.

The Portland Oregonian, the leading Republican paper of Oregon, if not of the Pacific slope, has declared its independence of the Republican party. "It is tired," it says, "of the effort to appeal on principles, political, social, financial, national and historic, to men who don't care for anything of the kind, but are actuated merely by selfish piques, petty desires and trifling personal ambitions." What a pen picture of the debased Republican party of Oregon, with its publicly disgraced senators and representatives whom it elected to congress. But should the picture be confined to Oregon? Similar conditions prevail in Pennsylvania, in New York, and the underworld of Republican politics everywhere exhibits to those who understand existing circumstances about the same lack of principles. How can honest men vote and work to continue the Republican party in power? To do so is to agree to be plucked like geese without squawking. The Republican party in Oregon, as elsewhere, must be in a bad way and tottering to its fall. Its foundations have become rotten.

American Shipping Policy.

Under Republican policies and legislation our merchant marine has been driven from the seas. The American consul at Hull, England, officially reports to the state department that: "Among the 25,000 or more ships that have entered the Humber river ports during the last seven years there has only been one ship of American register." This striking evidence of the decay of American shipping with foreign countries must be the result of bad laws. The only remedy proposed for the past ten years by the Republicans is the ship-subsidy or the postal subsidy, which would merely tax the people for a few big shipowners. Tariff reform and a revision of our navigation laws is what is needed, but such would antagonize the trusts and combinations that control the Republican leaders.

Not this year may Republican standpatters point to the highest average tariff rate America has ever known as the "maker of prosperity." Most people have always suspected that American prosperity was due to industry to thrift, to the wide diffusion of intelligence, to nature's bounty in a broad domain. They now know that an excessive tariff—"mother of trusts," as the late Henry Havemeyer called it—has made war on prosperity by stimulating speculation and raising unendurably the cost of living. The woman with the market-basket elected Grover Cleveland president. She has not lost her power.—St. Louis Republic.

HOUSE WORK

Thousands of American women in our homes are daily sacrificing their lives to duty.

In order to keep the home neat and pretty, the children well dressed and tidy, women overdo. A female weakness or displacement is often brought on and they suffer in silence, drifting along from bad to worse, knowing well that they ought to have help to overcome the pains and aches which daily make life a burden.

It is to these faithful women that comes as a boon and a blessing, as it did to Mrs. F. Ellsworth, of Mayville, N. Y., and to Mrs. W. P. Boyd, of Beaver Falls, Pa., who say:

"I was not able to do my own work, owing to the female trouble from which I suffered. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me wonderfully, and I am so well that I can do as big a day's work as I ever did. I wish every sick woman would try it.

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Southern Woman Suffered with Itching, Burning Rash—Three Little Babies Had Skin Troubles.

"My baby had a running sore on his neck and nothing that I did for it took effect until I used Cuticura. My face was nearly full of tetter or some similar skin disease. It would itch and burn so that I could hardly stand it. Two cakes of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment cured me. Two years after it broke out on my hands and wrist. Sometimes I would go nearly crazy for it itched so badly. I went back to my old stand-by, that had never failed me—one set of Cuticura Remedies did the work. One set also cured my uncle's baby whose head was a cake of sores, and another baby who was in the same fix. Mrs. Lillie Wilcher, 770 Eleventh St., Chattanooga, Tenn., Feb. 16, 1907."

JURY FREES DETSCH

STORY THAT HE THOUGHT FERREE A BURGLAR ACCEPTED.

WIFE'S NAME PROTECTED

Defendant Denied Police Claim That He Was Actuated by Her Misconduct with Man He Killed.

Philadelphia.—After a trial of three days Andrew Jackson Detsch, who was charged with murdering Harry Ferree in a boarding house in this city last November, was acquitted late Friday afternoon.

The jury was out nearly three hours. The announcement of the verdict caused an enthusiastic demonstration in the courtroom. The killing of Ferree was sensational and, owing to the peculiar circumstances, the case created great interest. Detsch claimed he killed Ferree in mistake for a burglar and the jury took this view of the case.

Detsch, who is 23 years of age, lived with his young wife and child in an uptown boarding house. On the night of November 5 policemen heard shots and traced them to the house. They forced an entrance and on the third floor hallway, in front of the door of the Detsch apartments, they found Ferree dead with three bullets in the body. He was in his stocking feet.

Ferree was about 50 years of age and had occupied a room on the second floor. Detsch told the policemen that he heard some one trying to get in the room and, thinking it was a burglar, shot four times through the door.

The police were inclined to accept this explanation, but in searching the effects of Ferree they found many letters that had passed between Ferree and Mrs. Detsch and a number of suggestive photographs. The police then charged Detsch with having deliberately killed Ferree. They contended that Detsch learned of alleged misconduct between his wife and Ferree, that Detsch caused his wife to lure Ferree to her room, and that Detsch fired the shots when he heard Ferree place his hand on the door knob.

Detsch maintained during the trial that he did not know that the man outside the door was Ferree and that he thought he was shooting at a burglar.

He flatly denied that at the time he suspected his wife's chastity, and refused the opportunity to plead the "unwritten law," preferring to protect his wife's reputation at the risk of his neck.

USE CLUBS ON JOBLESS.

Police Break Up a Parade in Streets of Chicago.

Chicago. — Several hundred men were clubbed by the police and a number were more or less seriously hurt in the loop district shortly after two p. m. Thursday when 200 uniformed patrolmen and detectives, under personal command of Chief Shippy, charged an "army of the unemployed" in efforts to disperse them.

The "army" was marching toward the city hall to demand work. It was finally disrupted effectually by the police.

Two attacks on the mob were made and thousands of persons were attracted to the scene by the shouts of the men and the bluecoats as they struggled in the streets.

Dr. Ben L. Reitman, self-appointed leader and friend of the "jobless," was arrested and taken to Chief Shippy's office. He was charged with inciting a riot.

During the disorder a number of women were knocked down. They were given immediate attention by the police.

W. L. BOCKEMOHLE KILLS SELF.

Cashier of Defunct Kansas Bank Commits Suicide.

Great Bend, Kan.—W. Leo Bockemohle, cashier of the suspended Bank of Ellinwood at Ellinwood, Kan., under arrest for making a false statement of the bank's condition in December, shot and killed himself Friday night.

The suicide took place at Bockemohle's home in Ellinwood. He had given bond several days ago to appear in court Saturday. His bondsmen had surrendered him and were leaving the house after notifying him of their decision. As they reached the gate he called out: "Wait a minute." They turned and saw Bockemohle shoot himself in the head with a pistol and fall dead on the porch.

The Bank of Ellinwood was founded 23 years ago by Bockemohle's father, now dead, and until lately was considered a strong institution.

DELAY IN THE THAW TRIAL

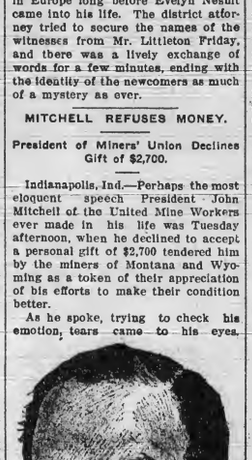
WITNESSES FROM EUROPE ARE UNABLE TO REACH LAND.

Jerome Fails to Learn Their Identity —Case May End by Next Saturday.

New York. — The blinding snowstorm which swept New York Friday caused the first serious interruption of the second Thaw trial. It put an embargo on practically all the shipping in the lower bay and prevented the big steamer Adriatic from reaching her dock.

On board the liner are four physicians and a trained nurse from Europe, who, Mr. Littleton declared in court, are important witnesses for the defense and whose testimony he desires to place upon the record before propounding hypothetical questions to the three experts who will swear that when Harry K. Thaw shot and killed Stanford White he was so mentally deficient that he did not know the nature or quality of his act or that the act was wrong. The request for an adjournment until Monday, made upon the opening of court, was granted by Justice Dowling.

Mr. Littleton promised to have the long hypothetical question ready immediately after his few remaining witnesses of fact have testified on Monday, and unless Mr. Jerome's cross-examination of the experts is unexpectedly long, the defense will rest by Monday night. The prosecution will proceed on Tuesday with its rebuttal case and should not occupy more than a day and a half. The surrebuttal by the defense will be brief and the case should end by Friday or Saturday of next week.



The witnesses who are to land from the Adriatic are expected to tell of alleged irrational outbreaks by Thaw in Europe long before Evelyn Nesbit came into his life. The district attorney tried to secure the names of the witnesses from Mr. Littleton Friday, and there was a lively exchange of words for a few minutes, ending with the identity of the newcomers as much of a mystery as ever.

MITCHELL REFUSES MONEY.

President of Miners' Union Declines Gift of $2,700.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Perhaps the most eloquent speech President John Mitchell of the United Mine Workers ever made in his life was Tuesday afternoon, when he declined to accept a personal gift of $2,700 tendered him by the miners of Montana and Wyoming as a token of their appreciation of his efforts to make their condition better.

As he spoke, trying to check his emotion, tears came to his eyes.

John Mitchell.

"Give it to Mrs. Mitchell and the children," he said, trembling with emotion. Big, hardy miners shed tears with him.

Thomas Gibson, president of the Montana miners, had come to the platform carrying a draft for $2,300. He said the draft was backed by a smaller amount which would bring the total up to $2,700.

The draft will be sent to Mrs. Mitchell.

NO ROOM FOR HIM.

PORTLAND HAS BIG BLAZE

CITY HALL AND PUBLIC BUILDING IN MAINE CITY BURNED.

Seven Hundred Persons at Pythian Jubilee in Peril—Property Loss is $1,000,000.

Portland, Me.—A fire which caused a property damage of $1,000,000 Friday destroyed the city hall and police buildings and endangered the lives of more than 700 persons. Although known as city hall the building was divided between city and county offices, while the police building sheltered the supreme, judicial and municipal courts in addition to the police department. One of the most valuable libraries in the state, the Greenleaf law collection, was completely destroyed, with a loss estimated at $10,000.

That there were no fatalities is remarkable, as there were more than 700 persons attending the Western Maine Knights of Pythias jubilee gathered in the auditorium of the city hall when the flames were discovered. Only a few persons were hurt, Chief Engineer Melville Eldridge being the only one known to be seriously injured, and he was able to direct the fight against the flames throughout, being supported by two assistants.

Baltimore, Md. — Fire Friday took heavy toll of the members of the fire department of this city, three being dead and 16 others more or less seriously injured. The list of the latter includes the name of George Horton, chief of the fire department. He has a badly lacerated scalp and internal injuries. The first hasty examination indicated that his skull was fractured, but a more careful investigation showed this not to be the case. The dead are: Lieut. Frederick Harman, William B. Pugh, Charles Friiman, all firemen.

The financial damage is estimated by Mayor J. Barry Mahool, who was on the scene, at $100,000.

PLOT IN PORTUGAL FOILED.

Conspiracy to Proclaim a Republic Is Failure.

Lisbon.—An abortive attempt to overthrow the monarchy and proclaim Portugal a republic was nipped in the bud Wednesday night by the prompt action of the government. The plot was organized by a small group of advanced republicans, the leaders of whom were arrested.

As near as can be ascertained the plan was to assassinate Premier Franco and then depend for success upon street risings, supported by secret, republican and labor organizations, armed with bombs and revolvers.

Leslie M. Shaw Resigns.

New York. — Leslie M. Shaw has resigned the presidency of the Carnegie Trust company, which he assumed early last March on his retirement from the treasury portfolio at Washington.

In explaining his resignation Tuesday Mr. Shaw said that he had "small differences" with Charles C. Dickinson, the organizer and chief owner of the trust company. Of his future plans he would say nothing beyond this statement: "I may shy my castor into the political ring."

Bomb Wrecks Italian Bank.

New York.—An exploding bomb Thursday night wrecked the front of an Italian bank building on Elizabeth street, briefly exposing $40,000 in silver and gold which the bankers, Pasquale A. Fati & Son, had piled in the windows as ocular proof of their ability to pay depositors on demand.

It is supposed robbery was the motive, but that the robbers lost courage and fled.

Rio de Janeiro.—To the booming of guns and the cheers of thousands on the accompanying pleasure craft, the American warships sailed from Rio Janeiro Wednesday afternoon, bound for Punta Arenas.

TO GUARD CROP STATISTICS.

Giving Them Out in Advance Made Criminal Offense.

Washington.—At the close of a day of excitement in the house of representatives an amendment was added to the penal code bill, making it a criminal offense for any officer or employe of the government to give out advance information regarding any crop statistics authorized by law to be prepared.

The necessity for its adoption was conceded by nearly every member who addressed the house, and its safe running of the gauntlet was greeted with applause.

Earlier in the day interest attached to a tilt between Mr. Daizell of Pennsylvania and Mr. Randell of Texas, over the latter's amendments prohibiting senators or members from being employed by public service corporations. Believing that Mr. Randell had insinuated that he represented such corporations at this time, Mr. Daizell grew indignant and declared that he had not been employed in such capacity for 20 years.

The climax of the debate came when Mr. Clark of Missouri announced, amid thunderous Democratic applause, that William J. Bryan would be nominated at the Denver convention, while Mr. Bouteil of Illinois aroused the members on his side of the house to a high pitch of enthusiasm by stating that Speaker Cannon would be the Republican nominee at Chicago in June.

EARTHQUAKE IN ITALY.

Severe Shocks Do Much Damage in Calabrian Villages.

Reggio di Calabria.—A strong earthquake shook this province Thursday. No report of loss of life has been received. The shocks were particularly severe at the villages of Bianco, Brancaleone, Bruzzano and Ferruzzano. Terrified, the people rushed from their houses to the open fields or took refuge in the nearby subterranean grottos.

Later in the day another shock was experienced considerably more severe than the first. Many buildings were damaged, a large number of houses being rendered uninhabitable. The municipal building at Bianco Nuevo collapsed.

Notwithstanding the intense cold, the people are camping in the open. The municipal authorities have set up tents in the fields, which to some extent will alleviate the sufferings.

POISONS HER LITTLE SON.

Woman in Burlington, Wis., Then Attempts Her Own Life.

Burlington, Wis.—After administering a huge dose of laudanum to her young son Kenneth, Mrs. George Stetson drank the remainder of the vial in an attempt at suicide Friday. The boy, aged nine, is dead, and the woman probably will not survive.

Since the departure of her husband, who went to Little Rock, Ark., in an attempt to regain his health, Mrs. Stetson has made her home at the residence of her father, Richard Ball. Despondency over her financial condition and the continued illness of her husband is thought to have induced the woman to commit the act.

Afraid to Test Fire Hose.

New York.—Startling testimony to the effect that the hose used by the New York fire department had never been tested for fear it would burst was had Wednesday from Fire Commissioner Lantry, who was a witness in the inquiry concerning defective hose used in fighting the fire in the Parker building, in which three firemen lost their lives. Commissioner Lantry declared that 41 lengths burst at the Parker building fire.

Nevada Police Bill Wins.

Carson, Nev.—The Nevada police bill passed the senate Friday without a dissenting vote and went to the assembly. In the assembly there was a test vote on the union strength. A resolution was introduced by Mr. Vaughan, one of the union men, asking that members of the contesting factions at Goldfield be heard upon the floor of the house. After a lively debate the resolution was lost by a vote of 31 to 7. This majority is even heavier than had been relied upon by the supporters of the measure.

What Is Going on in Different Sections of Kentucky.

FOR BETTER SCHOOL SYSTEM.

Willson Urges Legislature to Take Drastic Action.

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Willson submitted to the legislature his second message, devoted entirely to public schools and other educational institutions of the state. He suggests that this legislature create a commission, of which he and the superintendent of public instruction should be ex-officio members, to look into the educational conditions of the state, and be prepared to make the necessary recommendations to the next legislature for better pay for teachers, better school facilities and longer terms. He suggests that one county school superintendent, one city school superintendent, the president of a state university, the president of a normal school and one woman from the Federation of Women's clubs, together with at least one republican member of both branches of the legislature, be selected to co-operate with the democratic members of the commission to study the school question and make the recommendations needed to "lift the schools of Kentucky to a plane equal to any of the schools of the United States."

He also suggested that the old system of county school trustees he done away with, and that the trustees of the state college, which will become the state university, be equally divided between the democrats and the republicans.

JOINT BALLOT FOR SENATOR

Will Be Taken, But Indications Point To Same Result.

Frankfort, Ky.—The Senate and House again voted separately for senator, and the total vote was as follows: Beckham 65, Bradley 63, scattering 6.

Senator Campbell voted for J. C. S. Blackburn, and Representative Lillard voted for James B. McCreary. A joint ballot will be taken and all indications are that the result will be about the same.

The Beckham men insisted on voting on joint ballot for senator following a vote in separate ballot, but the Republican and anti-Beckham men blocked this by forcing an adjournment. On this vote a tie resulted, but the Lieutenant Governor voted in favor of adjournment.

Would Cut Wages.

Louisville, Ky.—As the result of a meeting held here by coal operators of Western Kentucky, miners in those fields will be asked to accept a cut for one year. Some time ago this was tried and the workers agreed to knock off 12½ per cent. from the wage scale. The same proposition will be submitted this year, but a strike is feared. Operators say they are overstocked with coal.

Rules For the Child.

Frankfort, Ky.—The court of appeals has decided in the case of Alvin Julius Stein, who seeks the estate of the late Charles Stein, his father, that, although a child born out of wedlock in a foreign country may be considered illegitimate there, it is legitimate here if the parents have wedded and brought it to this country and recognized it as their child.

$50 Per Acre Tax Proposed.

Frankfort, Ky.—If the bill introduced by Senator Brown, of Gallatin county, becomes a law at once there will be no tobacco grown this year. The bill provides that any grower shall obtain a license from the county clerk before he can raise any tobacco this year and the price of the license is fixed at $50 per acre for each acre proposed to be grown.

Boys Held For Murder.

Louisville, Ky.—Hiram Troxell and Arch Lewis, white boys, were held to the grand jury for the murder of Isaac Felker. Felker was found dying on the sidewalk Christmas morning. The boys confessed the murder, saying their motive was robbery.

Deaths Exceed Births.

Covington, Ky.—In his annual report Health Officer Brinker shows an excess of deaths over births in this city in 1907 of 164. This is a reversal of ratios of former years, when the birth rate was about 10 per cent. greater.

To Reduce Working Force.

Barboursville, Ky.—Practically all the big coal companies in this territory have ordered a reduction in working force. This is the result of the railroad companies being stocked up, with no storage facilities.

Killed By a Deputy.

Hickman, Ky.—Frank Conley, charged with boot-legging, was shot and killed by J. A. Rogers, a sheriff's deputy. It is alleged he was resisting arrest.

Judge Holt Appointed.

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Willson appointed Judge William H. Holt, of Louisville, special judge of the Henry circuit court to try the case against the American Tobacco Co., alleged to be a "trust" in violation of the Kentucky statutes.

Tobacco Barn Is Burned.

Lexington, Ky.—The large tobacco barn of J. P. Turner, near here, was burned with $1,500 loss. The tobacco had just been delivered to the American Tobacco Co. An explosion was heard before the fire alarm was given.

DEADLOCK STILL ON.

Rumored Bradley Will Withdraw and Help Elect McCreary.

Frankfort, Ky.—The senatorial deadlock was not broken and there seems to be no immediate prospect of a shift in votes.

The rumor that more men will desert Beckham is still persistently circulated and also the rumor that Bradley will withdraw and help elect McCreary, because of influences at work in Washington.

Speaker Goodc, who presides over the joint sessions, ruled that a majority of a voting quorum could elect a senator, and he would so decide if the question came up.

The two houses voted in joint session. In the senate Beckham received 17 votes and Bradley 14. In the house Beckham received 67 votes and Bradley 64. There was no election.

McCreary received two votes in the senate and two in the house. David W. Baird, Louisville, received one vote in the house.

The following bills were offered:

An act providing for the shipment of attendants with live stock.

An act to provide for the protection of the lives and property of persons traveling and shipping freight upon railroads in the state of Kentucky.

An act to promote the sheep industry and providing for a tax on dogs.

A bill was offered giving the commissioner of agriculture authority to regulate the tobacco industry.

The state senate referred to the committee on executive affairs the appointment of M. H. Thatcher to be state inspector and examiner.

BECKHAM STILL LACKS 3 VOTES.

Senatorial Deadlock Settles Down to Tiresome Balloting.

Frankfort, Ky.—The senatorial deadlock has settled down to a succession of tiresome humdrum ballots with no excitement except for the steering committees to keep up with the pairing of votes and the sick and absent ones. Beckham is still three votes short of election and Bradley is five shy, with the six anti-Beckham democrats holding the balance of power.

These six can elect Bradley or Beckham if they choose, but it is doubtful if they can force the election of another man. Another ballot will be taken Monday.

Thoroughbreds Shipped to England.

Lexington, Ky.—Twenty thoroughbred mares and geldings which have been recently purchased in this vicinity by Scott Hudson to fill an order from England, were shipped to New York on their way to Liverpool. From England some of them will be distributed to other European countries. The mares are either barren or have never been bred and all of the consignments are intended to be used as hunters.

New Military Bill.

Frankfort, Ky.—A bill to reorganize the state militia has been submitted to Gov. Willson and Adjt. Gen. Johnston for their approval, and it is likely that it will be introduced. It was prepared by Col. J. Embry Allen, of Lexington, and it codifies all of the laws and acts of former legislatures necessary to make the militia of this state conform as nearly as possible to the rules and regulations of the United States army.

Indictment For Harvester Trust.

Frankfort, Ky.—The Franklin county grand jury returned an indictment against the International Harvester Co., of Milwaukee, charging that said company had combined with the McCormick, Champion, Deering and Osborne Cos., to regulate and control the prices on mowers, reapers, binders and other harvesting machinery.

Widow Gets Last Cent.

Winchester, Ky.—The last payment was made on the $8,000 judgment awarded to Mrs. Abrelia Marcum against James Hargis and Ed Callahan, as a result of the murder of J. B. Marcum. Due to interest and other causes it amounted to over $11,000.

Heavy Increase in Taxation.

Hickman, Ky.—The Fulton county board of equalization raised the assessed valuation of the property of this county $75,000. Last year the same board raised the valuation $300,000, making an increase in the last two years of $375,000.

Prominent Physician Dead.

Harrodsburg, Ky.—Dr. William Caspell, for many years a prominent physician of Harrodsburg, died at his home at Mitchellsburg, in Boyle county, after a few days' illness of pneumonia.

Another Trial For Powers Predicted.

Lexington, Ky.—Word from Georgetown says the petition to be presented Gov. Willson asking executive clemency for Caleb Powers will be the largest ever presented to a governor in the United States. The impression is that Powers will be tried again.

Jury Disagrees.

Lexington, Ky.—John Hughes and Clarence Haverly, two of the several men indicted in November on charges of illegal registration, were discharged from custody. The jurors failed to agree.

BOONE CO. RECORDER.

W. L. RIDDELL, Publisher.

[Falmouth Pendletonian.]

The embargo in the form of an earnest request from the Board of Control of the A. S. of E., made to the local tobacco dealers and acquiesced in by them to cease buying unpooled tobacco for a time, was raised at the tobacco meeting held last Saturday. This, we are informed, releases our tobacco merchants from further obligations and they are at liberty to go in the market and make purchases of unpooled tobacco.

The first recent delivery of sold tobacco to a local buyer was made Tuesday by D. W. Logan and H. W. Mesmer to Mayor F. T. Browning; the former had 6,282 pounds for which he received 11c, and the latter 3,048 pounds, sold at 9c. There were four wagon loads and as the procession passed through our streets it was a sight good to see.

The following official notice of the release or termination of the agreement entered into was handed us for publication by Mr. H. F. Monroe, secretary of the Board of Control:

The question has been asked frequently of late, have you turned the non-equity tobacco loose? The Board of Control has no authority over this tobacco but the county committee did ask the buyers to refrain from making purchases of same for a time. They agreed to this, but as sales of non-equity tobacco have been made in many other counties, Dr. McMillen, in a speech last Saturday, released the buyers of this county from their promise. There is only a small per cent of non-equity tobacco in Pendleton county and the committee thought best to get this out of the way.

Kentucky, with all of her night-riding and tobacco troubles—with her "turbulant turmoils" and her tinkering with guns—with all her dry counties and cussin' between drinks, is thirty-three and a third per cent. better than everything north of the Ohio river and south of the Tennessee, b' dadburned if she ain't. True, a Republican is Governor of the State, the Legislature is in session and a financial panic is clawing at us, yet we all expect to live through it, and have a big time celebratin' Bryan's election to the Presidency next November.—Springfield Sun.

A new banking law has been introduced in legislature, which provides for dividing the State into two districts and for the appointment of two bank examiners. It is desired by those who have the bill in hand to give depositors additional protection for their money and to abrogate some other practices on the part of some banks that are not consistent with honest banking.

According to the monthly circular issued by the National City Bank, of New York, $276,000,000 in cash dropped out of circulation between the call for the condition of the national banks responded to last August and that of last month. That amount filled quite a number of old socks and other odd receptacles for retired cash.

Hon. J. W. Kennedy has something to say to the tobacco raisers this week. Mr. Kennedy has made a close study of the situation which he presents in a clear and forceful manner. The present tobacco movement is along the lines he suggested when the Hawkins plan was being tried.

Mr. Tobacco Grower, you will exercise a sound discretion—by pooling your 1907 crop of tobacco and not raising any in 1908. The campaign against the trust will be successful if a 1908 crop does not materialize, and the grower who is politic will get in the procession at once.

One day last week Jas. Hargis and Ed Callahan made the last payment on the $8,000 judgment Mrs. Abrelia Marcum secured against them as the result of the murder of her husband, J. B. Marcum. The Judgment, interest and costs amounted to over $11,000.

Among the bills introduced in the house, last Thursday, was one requiring a license fee of $50 for each acre of tobacco grown in 1908. Senator R. B. Brown, of this district introcuced the bill.

The first bill to pass the State Senate is to repeal the law requiring registration in small towns. Representative Berkshire, of this county introduced a like bill in the House.

No change in the Senatorial situation at Frankfort.

CONSTANCE.

A hotel is needed here. The river was so rough the ferry boat could not run Sunday night and left a number of city people on this side without any place to stay.

The pie social given by the Constance Pleasure Club was a grand success. It cleared $19 75. Pies sold high. Miss Laura Biehl's pie brought the highest price—$4 10.

LANDING.

Last Sunday was very windy, and the river was quite rough.

Wm. Shinkle has completed his new house near Gunpowder and has moved into it.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jones gave a dinner in honor of Mr. Jones' birthday, last Sunday.

Ross Shinkle sold a pair of mules to C. G. Riddell, of Rabbit Hash, one day last week, for $370.

Mrs. T. B. Wilson, who had the misfortune to break her arm some time ago, is improving slowly.

Miss Rose Adams has dismissed her school for one month on account of her being exposed to measles.

The people of this neighborhood have been taking advantage of the pretty weather, burning and sowing tobacco beds.

S. J. Ewalt has lost two horses and one mule in less than a year— I was killed by lightning, I fell dead while working to a wagon and the mule got its leg broken recently and had to be killed.

RABBIT HASH.

Colin Kelly is quite sick.

F. G. Louden is stripping a fine crop of tobacco.

Tom Campbell sold his tobacco for 20 cents per pound.

Mrs. Harriet Walton is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Ida Wilson.

Mrs. Lou Dormon, of Cincinnati, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Ellis.

Solon Ryle visited relatives on Quarrelsome Ridge, last Saturday and Sunday.

Will Craig and family spent several days last week with Mrs. Craig's father in Patriot.

C. G. Riddell sold his team of young horses to an Indiana man for $325 and bought a team of mules from Wm. Shinkle for $340.

The spelling school at Maple Hill was a hit to everyone that didn't miss. We hope that the next one will have a larger attendance.

Louis Calvert has been entertaining the East Bend people with his graphophone during the past week. He talks of leaving for Kansas City, soon.

Hubert Ryle and Will Craig each have a large bunch of fat hogs. They are impatiently waiting for the market to advance. Why are hogs so low and meat and lard so high? Because it costs less to raise the hogs than to convert them into meat and lard? Nit!

BELLEVIEW.

Jan. 27.—Last Thursday I made a trip down into the wilds of Rabbit Hash. My first stop was at J. H. Walton's, where I spent the night and tried, in vain, to win a game of checkers from G. H. Walton, the champion checker player of Rabbit Hash. Friday I visited Maple Hill school, where 20 years ago, I had my first day at school, and where, at that time, Mrs. Ozark Ryle made me tremble in my shoes because I didn't know A from X. And here is where Miss Nettie Barbour, two years later, ran my brother Will and I half way home, one morning, because she thought we had the measles. Miss Brenda Craig has charge of the school, now, and is well liked by pupils and patrons. With the exception of one or two familiar faces, the pupils were all strangers to me, which shows what great changes have taken place there in the past 10 years. Another thing that impressed me with the flight of time, was the meeting with one of my old schoolmates, Colin Kelly, accompanied by his wife and little daughter. After a pleasant chat with Cousin Brenda I left Maple Hill and made my way to the hospitable home of R. T. Stephens and wife, where I enjoyed such a dinner as only Mrs. Stephens knows how to prepare. Here, also, I met my old friends Dick Richards and Uncle Hogan Presser. After spending several hours very pleasantly here I proceeded to Rabbit Hash, where I found a crowd watching Whitlock & Akin's new boat, which was just leaving the wharf at Rising Sun for a trial trip. This boat will enter the Rising Sun and Aurora trade, next week, making three trips per day. It has a 55-horse-power engine and a speed of 25 miles per hour. I called at Riddell's store and inquired for my old friend, J. E. Calvert, but was informed by Albert Clore that John had gone to the river to collect wharfage from a junk-boat that had stopped there the night before. From R. H. I went up through Stringtown to my boyhood home, which is now vacant. Memories of the past came surging over me, some joyful, some sad as I gazed on the old familiar scenes of my childhood, and thought of the old times when we were all together in the house now so silent and deserted. When I started home I felt that if I had a cane and a pair of spectacles, I would look as old as the proverbial Methuselah. I arrived at home about dusk and found a letter awaiting me, from a brother in a State far away from old Kentucky, and in it asked about our Old Kentucky home. ERNEST RYLE.

THE CINCINNATI GRAIN CO.

MODERN AGE DEMANDS MODERN METHODS.

Previous to the organization of productive industries, manufactured goods such as coal, iron and steel were produced under a system of business very different from the system and methods of today. These factories were established for the production of various kinds of goods by an individual, or by two or more forming a partnership and one or all doing part of the labor and superintending the business. Raw material was purchased as low as possible and converted into their special product as rapidly as possible, and placed on the market by jobbers to get the best price they could for them in competition with the factories, allowing others to fix selling prices, and returns were often not satisfactory and without profit.

The coal and steel barons, and oil and tobacco kings pursued the same methods, believing, if they needed more money the way to get it was to produce more and dump it on the market. The farmer accepted the same idea and practiced it, because he was taught it by his society, his farm journal and by the department of agriculture, when he ought to have known that the records showed that the smaller crops sold for more dollars than the abnormal crop, but misery always loves company and makes friends of those who were our enemies. So they began to organize and cooperate with one another, and adopted new methods and cut out competition and profited by past experience.

The manufacturer first ascertained the amount of raw material on hand and in sight, so he would know how to buy. Then he sent his salesmen out to get orders at stated prices, so he would know how much to manufacture, and when orders came in they were filled and shipped at prices fixed by them.

The coal baron no longer dumps his coal for what he can get. When he finds he has a surplus mined, he just cuts wages and causes a strike, and raises the price of coal, and waits until the surplus is exhausted, and then compromises with his men and gets them back on more favorable terms to him, profiting thereby, but not concerned about the wrong he has done the laborer or the consumer.

The steel magnate, the oil king, meat trust and tobacco lord, protected by special privileges, have reached out with their long tentacles, like the devil fish, and have grasped every product of the farmer, driving out by unfair and unjust methods all competition, causing wreck and ruin, poverty and suffering in their path, piling up their unearned millions, a menace to good government and society, esteeming the dollars of more importance than humanity, society or the government, and driving the people to socialism, anarchy, lawlessness and crime, and they themselves are held by high authority in both state and nation immune from crime or punishment. But when the farmers of the United States attempt to adopt modern methods by organization and cooperation to control production and fix prices on what they produce, a cry of holy horror goes out from those great monopolies and their sympathizers though a subsidized press, giving long accounts of lawlessness that had no foundation in fact whatever, therefore rendering the daily press so unreliable that if you were to eliminate the error, misrepresentations, exagerations and fake advertisements from its pages, it would come to you blank every day, and influenced by this unreliable press this high authority can see no wrong except in the Society under whose plan we are working.

Each state is organized and cooperating under the plan of the A. S. of E. to control the production and marketing of their special crop. Kentucky's special is tobacco and grows more than one third of all of the tobacco grown in the U. S. There are five tobacco districts in the State, each growing a distinct character of tobacco peculiar to its own district, and each district having its own organization, cooperating with each other in the State Union. To take up all these districts would make this article too long, so I will confine myself to the White Burley district, which I have regarded as the hardest proposition of the five, and have always anticipated the bitterest and probably the longest struggle of any district in the State, because the White Burley is the best tobacco and the most profitable to manufacture and is used for our home trade and very little of it exported. But, although a hard proposition and a long struggle, I know the determination is to stand by our guns, cut the 1908 crop out and hold out two crops, for it would be suicidal to throw it down or raise another crop before we sell this one. We first enlisted in this fight under the Hawkins movement, and tobacco advanced $3 per 100 pounds, but when it was called off it declined $3 50 per 100 pounds in five days. Then we tried the Stewart plan and tobacco at once advanced, but when called off again it declined. The fight we are now making has raised the price of tobacco 80 per cent, and therein lies our trouble. About four fifths of the growers are in the pool, some with one and some with two crops.—The one-fifth out ally themselves with the trust, getting a price it did not help to make, profiting by the effort of those whom they are injuring and refusing to assist in a movement that is not only beneficial to one but all. That element outside seems to be devoid not only of justice but of business sagacity, for along with the emissaries of the trust they seem to try, not only by selling their tobacco, but by indiscreet talk and misrepresentation, to dissatisfy the weak and timid and destroy the goose that lays them the golden egg; and they further claim that no man has a right to injure them or interfere with them in any way. That is true, and we admit it frankly; but, on the other hand, we claim that one-fifth have no right to injure or delay the four fifths in their returns for their tobacco.

Now, my brother, look at this matter as it is, and for once in life be not only just but be generous and assist us, for your assistance will not only benefit us but will benefit you. Now, the White Burley tobacco association is composed largely of farmers, who own property, money and bank stocks, others of education and legal ability, and includes in its ranks the best citizenship of the State, and they neither advocate nor endorse any lawlessness of any kind, nor will they permit it if in their power to prevent it; but in a society so large there will, no doubt, be some who are passionate and resentful and some inclined to lawlessness, and I trust that those who oppose this movement for betterment of all will use discretion and not do or say anything that would excite the anger or animosity of anyone, for the Burley Society is no more responsible for the conduct of an individual member than any other society or association is for theirs.

Now, I would suggest that the legislature declare the A. T. Co an outlaw and oust it from the State, forcing it back into the market. Until it entered the country to buy, the producer, dealers, and warehouses in Cincinnati and Louisville were prosperous and happy and no trouble, and by their coming among us they have destroyed this prosperity and caused trouble. Pass the Paris Green Bill and stop the growing of these large crops of tobacco. Let the Legislature memorialize Congress to repeat the revenue on tobacco and then manufacturers will spring up all over the country and good prices will prevail. Make the pure food law apply to tobacco as well as other things and stop the adulteration of tobacco and it will increase demand

Now, in conclusion, I again appeal to those outside to come in and help us win this fight by holding your tobacco and cutting out the 1908 crop and let us all stand together and step out on the high plane of your legitimate power and control your own business, and control your production and control your marketing and fix the prices on what you produce.

The wind did not blow through his whiskers fast enough, last Thursday, and B. B. Hume had his 2:15 trotter out trying his speed.

It is said a mine of white coal has been discovered in Kentucky. It is not so much white coal as cheap coal that Kentucky needs.

When you sow your cabbage and lettuce beds it will not be a bad idea to label them so they will not be mistaken for tobacco beds.

W. C. Goodridge delivered his tobacco to Albert Conner, last week, it being the first crop received by Mr. Conner after going into business alone.

Hubert Rouse will be one of the applicants for carrier on roral route No. 3 in case it is established. He has done considerable work in the interest of the route.

The season for sowing tobacco plant beds is at hand, but the unusual rush into that business will not be in evidence this year, so say those who ought to know.

The slump in the prices of hogs caught some of the farmers feeding theirs, after they were ready for market, in anticipation of better prices which failed to come, and consequently some got a small price for their corn.

Mr. W. T. Smith celebrated the 89th anniversary of his birth, at the home of his son, James E., last Wednesday. Mrs. Smith prepared an elegant dinner for the occasion and several old persons were present to enjoy the occasion with their venerable friend.

Many people are predicting some very ugly weather during the next three months, but as the winter has been a record breaker up to the present time it may continue on its good behavior during the months of February, March and April. The old inhabitants give it up and say they have no recollections of as nice winter as this has been.

Rivilet DeMoisey, of Walton, came down last Thursday, and after dickering with Boodle Hume a while, became the owner of a $250 trotter with which he will dust the boys in his neighborhood from now on. This stepper was one of Mr. Hume's recent finds, which he expected to "matinee" the coming season it he kept it.

Menter Martin was in town, last Thursday saying good-bye to his friends preparatory to starting to Oklahoma, where he will make his home. The RECORDER will visit him weekly that he may keep tap on his many Boone county friends. All who know Mr. Martin wish him all the prosperity imaginable in his western home.

GEORGE W. POPHAM

Passes Away After a Short Illness --In His Eighty-First Year.

George W. Popham, died of paralysis and other diseases incidental to old age, at his home about five miles south of Burlington on Wednesday, January 22. Mr. Popham was a son of the late Job Popham, and was born October 14th, 1827, in Rapahannock, county, Virginia. He was a bachelor, he and his cousin, Miss Ellen Snyder having kept house at the old homestead ever since Miss Ellen's mother died several years ago. Mr. Popham was a gentleman of the old Virginia type, and abhored anything that was not on the square in every particular. To ascertain the character of a man go among his neighbors, and of him, those among whom Geo. W. Popham spent many years of his life, not a person is there who would speak other than in the highest terms. He was a plain, honest, unassuming man, who attended to his own affairs and left those of his neighbor strictly alone. He was made a Mason in Boone Union Lodge on the 20th of September, 1873, and attended his lodge meetings faithfully until his advanced age made it necessary for him to deny himself the pleasure of meeting with his brothers, but he remained faithful to the order and a lover of its tenents, and its teachings he followed through life, and, at last his mortal remains were consigned to their last earthly resting place by the members of Boone Union Lodge, to remain at refreshment until the last great day when the Grand Master of the Universe shall assemble the craftsmen at a grand lodge meeting in His realms above. In the death of George W. Popham his neighborhood and the county have lost a good citizen, whose presence will long be missed by those among whom he lived so long, and who learned to honor and love him. The remains were interred in the Odd-Fellows' cemetery at Burlington, last Friday at high twelve.

The ignorance of the editors of daily newspapers in the cities concerning the tobacco question is little short of absolute. They know nothing of the situation; they are unacquainted with the growers' needs, hardships, and struggles with the trust; they have no idea of the time and labor involved in the production and marketing of a crop of tobacco. Their sympathies are with the great corporations, the trusts, the moneyed men who pay them their salaries. They hear of nothing but night riders and barn burners, and soldiers and bayonets and fire marshals and war-like governors. Is it any wonder they write like chumps?—Cynthiana Democrat.

Since the matrimonial fever appeared in Burlington in such virulent form, a young man can not accompany a young lady away from town without the report being sprung that they have gone to marry. The entire town was on tip-toe a day or two last week on account of a report of the kind above mentioned, but the parties did not leave home on matrimony bent or they changed their minds.

The attendance at the meeting of the Boone County Farmers' Institute last Friday afternoon was scarcely enough to transact the business for which it met. It is strange, indeed, that the farmers in this county do not take more interest in their organization. With their cooperation it can be made interesting and of very great value to them.

Attorney T. H. Cloud, of Pleasant Hill, Mo., has been shown. A letter received from him one day last week reads: "Dear Sir:—I send 'money order' on subscription. I keep pretty well informed on Boone county happenings, through the columns of the RECORDER. It is the best local paper I ever read."

The moving season is at hand, but there does not appear to be as much shifting of residence at the beginning of the year as there use to be. One reason for this change is the moving of a very large per cent of tenants to the city, where they get better wages and good schools for their children.

Lambs are beginning to show up in nearly every direction, and in the next few weeks the sheeplette will begin to multiply and replenish the flocks at a rapid rate. No sales have been reported as yet, but the price is expected to be about the same as for the last several years.

A "hello" girl in a nearby town who could not wake up to get to the office on time, bought an alarm clock. When it went off the first morning she rolled over and said in her usual sweet voice though asleep, Line's busy, call again."

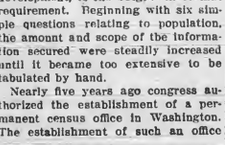
Millions Wanted for Next Census

WASHINGTON.—The next census of the United States will be taken on April 15, 1910, and it will cost $14,000,000. Plans are now being made for it.



The Constitution of the United States requires an enumeration once in ten years as a basis for the apportionment of representatives in congress. The modern American census, which collects statistics relating to every important feature of national development, is the outgrowth of that requirement. Beginning with six simple questions relating to population, the amount and scope of the information secured were steadily increased until it became too extensive to be tabulated by hand.

Nearly five years ago congress authorized the establishment of a permanent census office in Washington. The establishment of such an office was first advocated in 1888 by Gen. Francis A. Walker, superintendent of the ninth and tenth censuses. The census to be taken in 1910 will be the first since the establishment of this permanent bureau.

The director, S. N. D. North, who was an earnest advocate of a permanent office, says he believes the thirteenth census will disclose that there was neither misrepresentation nor extravagance in the claims of those who persuaded congress that there would be an economy of expenditure, time and service in keeping always on hand a skeleton organization for the decennial rush.

The enumeration of 1910 will be taken on April 15 of that year. Heretofore the enumeration has been taken on June 1. Mr. North says that more accurate statistics will be collected by the proposed change of date. This change will have the effect, he thinks, of showing great gains in the population of the great cities like New York, Boston and Philadelphia. He says that the summer resorts begin to attract many persons in May, and that if the census is delayed until June 1 the enumerators will find many vacant houses when they make their rounds.

Odd Items on Senate Expense List

ONE would think United States senators drank ink and bathed in mucilage, and that they were mighty curious "critters," to judge by the microscopic explanation of senate expenses which has just been issued. Some rattle-brained reformers are seriously advocating abolishing this august body. If it were wiped out of existence it would save the tax payers just exactly $1,640,354.60 every year, for that is what it cost to keep the sagacious lawmakers during the last fiscal period.

Even the layman can understand why thousands of dollars should be paid for telegrams sent by senators to each other, or to friends, or to members of the cabinet, for even a United States senator must have his lines of communication in good working order, but apparently it would tax the ingenuity of a fortune teller to explain what these distinguished statesmen could possibly do in the course of 12 short months with three dozen packs of cards and half a dozen opera hags. These things appear on the expense account, but the uses to which they were put are not explained.

According to the secretary of the senate that notable assembly required 88,445 pounds of ice during the month of December, 1906, when frosty breezes were blowing over the capitol, and it was cold enough to freeze the water in the pipes.

If a man should rush up to you in the street and ask in a hurried whisper what a "tatum adjustable punch" is one would probably call a policeman and endeavor to escape from the madman. Yet the senate used one of these mysterious things, and "one tatum adjustable punch" is duly itemized. Somebody drew a silver purse at $5, and eight dozen corkscrews were purchased to open the ink, mineral waters and mucilage and other liquid refreshments which were bought in such quantities as to suggest a drought at the north end of the capitol. Safety razors, razor blades, scissors, handbags, eyeglass cleaners, beaded bags, photo frames, pocketbooks, adhesive tape, picture baskets and rubber shoes figure in the list of senate necessaries. The senate expense account is the most curious document issued by the government.

Little Known of the Louise Home

MRS. LETETIA TYLER SEMPLE, daughter of President John Tyler, died a few days ago at the Louise home in this city. The Louise home is a large brick building standing in fairly spacious grounds at Massachusetts avenue and Fifteenth street. It was founded and endowed by W. W. Corcoran as a home for southern gentlewomen who had become impoverished. I have lived within a block of the Louise home for four winters. I pass the place three or four times a day, and the only time that I have ever seen any signs of life about the home was the day that death paid its visit.

The home is filled with occupants, and there is a long waiting list, and yet in four winters' time I never have seen one of the old ladies looking out of a window at the sunlight, nor have I seen one of them entering or leaving the place. All through one month of June when the session of congress was delayed, the great shady garden of the home was deserted.

There is an apparent ignorance in Washington outside, of course, of the immediate friends of the occupants of the Louise home, as to who these occupants are. One never hears nor reads of individuals until the day of death comes, and then the world learns that some old southern woman of distinguished name and family, who in her time bore active part in the social world, while her husband or father bore an active part in the political world, has passed away. I heard when I first came to Washington that a daughter of a former president was living in the Louise home. I asked some people who had lived in Washington all their lives and most of the time not a stone's throw from the home, if this were true. The answer was that John Tyler's daughter formerly had lived in the home, but that she had been dead six years. This president's daughter was buried the other day.

Asks Statue to Hero of Lundy Lane

SENATOR JACOB H. GALLINGER of New Hampshire was born in Canada, where his mother and father were born before him. This fact has not prevented Mr. Gallinger from introducing a bill in congress for the erection of a statue to the memory of Gen. James Miller, the hero of Lundy's Lane. In pretty nearly every school history of the United States is told the story of Gen. Miller's charge on a battery and his capture thereof. If memory serves, Miller at that time was a captain, but the chances are that most Americans remember neither his title nor his first name, but know him only as "I'll Try, Sir," Miller. When Miller was asked if he could charge and take the battery his answer was "I'll try, sir," and the answer has stood him as a front name ever since.

It may be that some of Senator Gallinger's immediate ancestry fought on the British side against Scott and Miller and the rest at Lundy's Lane, but back of the immediate ancestors the senator had other ancestors who fought on the American side in the revolutionary war. He gets his Americanism from an original pure font. He hopes to have the statue of Gen. Miller erected at Peterboro, N. H.

It may be that memory is faulty, but if it isn't, "I'll Try, Sir," Miller was a man of decided opinions, and after the war of 1812 he had a few rows with the authorities which made the Washington officials angry with the hero.

Recollection also has it that he went to Peterboro in a sulky mood and lived there for a long time before he came out of it. His service to his country at Lundy's Lane, however, makes him more deserving of a monument that are many other heroes and some near-heroes who have been bonored in stone at the expense of the United States.

USE PRINTERS' INK

BEST METHOD OF COMBATING MAIL-ORDER EVIL.

HOME MERCHANT TO BLAME

Much has been written about the subtle influence of the big four-pound catalogues sent broadcast over the land by the houses located in the big cities, and which, strange to say, refuse to sell goods to the residents of the cities in which they are located. There is no mysterious element in these bulky paper books. From cover to cover they are filled with pictures and with prices and descriptions of goods. It is the power of printers' ink that is the only magnet, and this magnet can be used by merchants everywhere. The publishers of these great catalogues do business running well up toward the fifty millions yearly. Such success has been in the ink they use, and the way they use it. Because these concerns receive patronage that should go to the home merchant it is the home merchant's fault. He neglects to do just what the houses which publish the big catalogues do. He may not have the money to get out such a great list, neither the means of carrying great stocks of goods. Yet he possesses all the means necessary to gain the trade that goes to these great concerns. He can buy goods just as low, has less expense, and while the big catalogue goes to a customer only once in a year or two, through the medium of the local newspaper the merchant can go to all the people of the community once a week and at the lowest expense.

As to the matter of prices, the big catalogue is an educator. It tells the people of values. These values are associated with classes of goods. The merchant in the home town can turn this information to his own account. In the catalogues are only pictures. The merchant can show the goods, and can explain the difference between grades. It is evident that if trade is to be held at home it must be upon a business basis. Sentiment cuts a mighty small figure in matters where dollars and cents are concerned. The average farmer would rather buy good from the home store than from some distant place if he is only sure that he is getting a square deal. It is up to the merchants to let him know that he is getting this square deal. There are towns in the western agricultural sections which a few years ago were getting only half the trade that was to be had in the district. Merchants became convinced that they were weak somewhere. They found that they were not advertising rightly and commenced a campaign which has resulted in driving the catalogue houses out of business as far as these towns are concerned. The newspapers of these towns tell of the enterprise of the merchants. The merchants themselves will tell you that they do not fear the mail-order houses, as they have educated the people to trade at home. The people who were mail-order house patrons will tell you that they know that they can do better by buying at home, that they are convinced that their interests are best protected by the home merchant, and that since they have thrown off the mail-order habit they are saving more money. The mail-order house is a great bugaboo. It is not near the evil than many suppose it is. It is harmful only in accordance with the lack of enterprise on part of the home merchants. Where the merchants are awake, are up-to-date, and advertise rightly, there is no complaint as to the mail-order system.

Each country editor can do his share in educating the merchants as well as the people in business methods, in principles that are helpful to the home town. The live merchant can hold his own. Business is based upon such principles as give the competent merchant a fair show in the competition for trade. No one person has a monopoly of the right to advertise. The way is as open to the small merchant as it is to the big one. The principles involved apply to the small business as well as to the large business. The only magic used by the catalogue houses is that found in advertising and in prices.

D. M. CARR.

Point Too Frequently Overlooked.

If five thousand people reside within a certain town or district, and these people send away to some distant place $100 per day, it represents a loss that would not be offset by a factory located in the neighborhood that would give employment to 40 hands. Here is a point that is too often overlooked by commercial and "booster" clubs. Efforts are made to secure factories for a place, and the fact is overlooked that citizens who form the habit of trading away from home daily send away perhaps four times the amount that would be paid in wages by the factory.

Keep Money at Home.

By patronizing home industries people prevent mony going to other sections of the country. Dollars sent to a distant place for commodities that can be produced, and often are produced at home, is money gone from local circulation, and which is not likely to ever return. It is the keeping of the wealth produced in a locality that makes that locality rich.—Bulletin.

PRIZE AND PREMIUM FAKES.

Bait Held Out to Catch the Trade of the Unsophisticated.

Prize and premium offering are methods that are resorted to by some concerns that seek to do business through the mails with people residing in agricultural districts. The wise people will never be caught on this game. All classes and kinds of goods have a real value, and are worth so much in the markets of the world. The farmer who has 5,000 bushels of wheat to sell knows that his goods have a fixed value dependent upon the market prices. It would be foolish for him to offer to the buyer as an inducement a few head of cattle, a barrel of cider or a slab of bacon in order to induce him to buy. Yet these very farmers will bite at a proposition which is identically the same in principle. The manufacturer of soap offers ten dollars' worth of soap and to the buyers give a piece of furniture of the value of ten dollars. Is this a fair business deal? Can the manufacturer afford to do it if his goods are standard? He may say that by selling direct to the consumer, and cutting out middlemen's profits," he can afford to do so. But this is a lie, a flimsy excuse, and is not in accordance with sound business principles. There must be a profit for the manufacturer or he will fail. He does make a profit. He even makes a larger profit than the average dealer in goods of his kind. In the first place he sells the cheapest kind of article, even though it may look nice and be highly perfumed. In the second place he gives light weight and gets the highest price. The value of the premium given is always misrepresented, exaggerated, and that which is supposed to be worth ten dollars is not worth four dollars, and for the latter amount can be purchased from any respectable dealer. The premium is never free. It must be paid for and it is the one who receives it that generally pays for it. Mrs. Jones would wonder if Grocer Brown would ask that she give half a pound of feathers with every dozen eggs he buys of her. Mrs. Jones has too much common sense to think that she can afford to give away a pound of butter with each dozen eggs. She knows she would be loser. But if she could induce the grocer to pay her 40 cents a dozen for her eggs when the market price is only 20 cents, she she might see how it would be profitable to her to throw in as a premium a pound of over-ripe butter. Still Mrs. Jones will join soap clubs, coffee clubs, and fakes in the premium line of every kind, just because she does not stop to do a little sound thinking.

Local Dealer Sometimes to Blame.

Thousands of dollars go out of Jefferson county each year in connection with the mail order business, to the loss of the local dealers and manufacturers. It does not help very much to appeal on the ground of patriotism to those people who buy of outside dealers, as purchasers go where they think they can find the best bargains. Every one must recognize the fact that the local dealer cannot prosper without local trade, but there are a lot of people who fail to govern themselves accordingly. Orders for goods are sent to Syracuse or New York or Chicago which could have been as cheaply bought in Watertown, but this is frequently the local dealer's fault. The great success of the big mail order houses has been built up almost wholly by advertising. Fortunes are spent in letting the people of the country know what they have to sell. Liberal space in the newspapers and magazines is used to exploit the mail order business in addition to the catalogues issued. These are the avenues through which the houses draw a large part of their business.

Is there not a lesson here for the local dealer? Cannot he hold some of the business which goes to the outside mail order houses by judicious use of the columns of the local newspapers? The Watertown newspapers have a large circulation through the towns and rural districts of northern New York. The Standard believes the local merchants and manufacturers could divert much of this trade to themselves if they took the proper methods. The Standard's interests are wholly with the local dealer and these suggestions are made with the firm conviction that he has a remedy for his loss of trade in local advertising.—Watertown (N. Y.) Standard.

Work That Wins.

He who would succeed in any undertaking must first understand that intelligently directed work is the only kind that wins. He who starts out to accomplish things for his home town cannot blunder along unless he endangers that which he sets out to do. Commercial clubs too often fail in accomplishing good because of a lack of system in the efforts made. There is an old saying: "Too many cooks spoil the broth." This axiom is exemplified frequently by the organization which attempts to carry out great projects without the proper system for doing the same. Work must be rightly pursued or it comes to naught. Each worker should have his particular part to perform, and for this part he should be selected with a view ar to his fitness. Concerted effort rightly made always wins.

Would Benefit Mail Order Houses.

A parcels post threatens the continuance of the country store's business by enlarging the opportunity of the mail order houses. Who will spring to the defense of the cracker barrel and box of sawdust—together with the little red schoolhouse, joint palladia of our liberties?—Providence (R. I.) Bulletin.

NEW CEMENT MADE

JAPANESE FIND USE FOR VOLCANIC ASHES.

Quantities Already Exported—Discovery Strikes One More American Product from the List of Japan's Necessaries.

The saving Japanese, who are forced to play a close game with life because of the narrowness of their island and the tremendous yearly increase in the population, have learned to take cunning advantage of every byproduct of nature.

They rake the sea beaches for seaweed to use to burn into charcoal. Now they are turning the many and troublesome volcanoes to good purpose by manufacturing the volcanic ash into cement. To them belongs the credit of discovering that the scoria that sweeps down from volcano vents and scars the neighboring countryside may at least be tolerated, if it has to come, as an economic asset.

G. H. Scidmore, American consul at Nagasaki, has reported to the department of commerce and labor at Washington that a Japanese company organized to work volcanic ash into cement had already paid a dividend of nine per cent. for the first half year on a capital of 200,000 yen and that it had more orders in sight than it could fill. The Mitsu Bishi and Kawasaki dockyards, the two great privately owned dockyards of the empire; the government naval yards at Sasebo and the Wakamatsu Iron Foundry Company were all being supplied with the new ash cement.

The government had recently granted a contract for 60,000 bags of the stuff to be used in the new harbor works at Keelung. Quantities have already been exported to north China, Formosa and Korea.

The ash, which is obtained from two of the great craters in the so-called Japanese Alps, running through the main island of Hondo, near the west coast, is ground and screened at the new company's factory, and because of the nature of the composition it needs nothing but water to become very good cement. One asset the new company can count upon—the supply of the crude material is inexhaustible, and the more that is carted away the more land will be uncovered for the struggling farmer.

The discovery of the new cement strikes one more American product from the list of our exports which had been necessaries for Japan. The Portland cement manufactured in Oregon and Washington was the only cement in use in Japan before the keen Japs turned the scoria into a paying proposition.

A Business Man's View.

"Wealth," remarked the man who moralizes, "can be made a great influence for good."

"Yes," answered Mr. Dustin Stax; "and yet when you start in with the kind of a man who has to be hired to be good, it's mighty hard to get your money's worth."

Too Realistic.

The husband of the pretty actress had shot at her press agent.

"Now, see here," exclaimed the agent, with some impatience; "you oughn't to be so careless. Next time don't stand so close. Those blank cartridges scorch a man at six feet."

Miss Swellgirl—The rich people of this country seem to be money mad.

GRAFTING ON A GIGANTIC SCALE

CHARGED AGAINST FORMER OFFICIALS WHO BUILT STATE CAPITOL.

TRIAL OF FIVE OF THE DEFENDENTS BEGIN

Experts in Metallic and Wooden Furniture, Marble and Other Furnishings Will Be Called as Witnesses By Each Side.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 27.—The first of the 37 criminal suits against former state officers, contractors and others connected with the furnishing of the new capitol of Pennsylvania will be brought to trial in the Dauphin county court Monday before Judge Kunkel. The defendants in the suits listed for trial first are Architect Joseph M. Huston and Contractor John Sanderson, of Philadelphia; former Auditor General William P. Snyder, Spring City; former State Treasurer William L. Mathues, of Media, and James M. Shumaker, of Johnstown, former superintendent of public grounds and buildings.

The defendants are charged with conspiracy to cheat and defraud the state out of $135,000 by falsifying the weight and measurements of certain furnishings supplied by Sanderson under his "per foot" and "per pound" contract with the board of grounds and buildings. The prosecution has selected five cases against these defendants to be tried first.

The suits against Congressman H. Burd Cassel, of the Pennsylvania Construction Co., who supplied the metallic furniture for the capitol, and who is under indictment on charge of conspiracy and false pretense, and the remaining eight defendants in these prosecutions will be tried later.

The total cost of the capitol was $13,000,000, of which $4,000,000 was expended by the building commission for construction and $9,000,000 by the board of grounds and buildings for furnishings. Sanderson's contract amounted to $5,487,899, and his profit in some instances is alleged to have been as much as 4,000 per cent. Huston designed the capitol and the furnishings and received in commissions more than $400,000. Shumaker is accused of having failed to audit the bills of Sanderson and other contractors and with having accepted Huston's certifications that the work was according to specifications. Mathues is alleged to have paid the bills and Snyder is said to have passed the bills without them having been audited in either case.

Many of the furnishings supplied by Sanderson and other contractors will be produced by the commonwealth before the jury and experts will be called to show that they are not up to the specifications and that the prices were excessive and not according to contract.

AID ASKED FROM BOSTON

For Blaze That Threatens Business Portion of Portland, Maine.

Portland, Me., Jan. 27.—The wholesale dry goods establishments of Milliken, Cousins & Co. was destroyed by fire Sunday night, with a loss of $500,000.

After the fire was apparently under control it broke out again in the roof of the A. F. Cox & Sons shoe establishment. Before additional lines of hose could be run up the entire roof was ablaze, and at 2 a. m. it seemed as if part of the block, with its wholesale stock of shoes said to be worth $250,000, would be burned.

Despite the work of the firemen the flames ate their way through the fourth and third floors of the Cox building, gutting them completely.

Aid has been asked from Boston, Dover, N. H., Portsmouth and a number of Maine cities, as it was feared the blaze would get beyond control.

Blaze in Norwich.

Norwich, Ct., Jan. 27.—A general fire alarm has been sent in, calling out all the fire apparatus in the city to fight a fire which is raging in the building at Nos. 9 and 11 Water street, occupied by the L. A. Galup Co., wholesale grocers; the Norwich Belt Manufacturing Co., and the William H. Davenport Arms Co. At 3:20 a. m. the fire was thought to be under control and confined to the block where it started. The loss, it is estimated, will be under $40,000.

Violent Windstorm at Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 27.—A violent storm, with unusual features for the winter season, swept over the city Sunday night. There were vivid flashes of lightning and heavy thunder, and for a short time rain fell in sheets, while wind of terrific velocity raged.

Shanghai, Jan. 27.—A Japanese launch has been fired upon and robbed by Chinese pirates near Kia Hsing fu. The pirates also attacked several Chinese launches en route to Shaughai, killing four Chinese and wounding nine.

AN ADVERTISING TRICK FOR WESTERN FARMERS.

Real Estate "Agents" Go After Men with Land for Sale and Reap Rich Harvest.

A smooth scheme for separating farmers from their money has been worked with much success in South Dakota. An oily grafter calls on a farmer and makes a bid for his land. The figures are absurdly low at first, but by degrees are raised as high as $60 an acre, and the farmer consents. Then the visitor explains that he is only an agent, but that he can sell the land at the price named if the owner will agree to pay for advertising at the rate of fifty cents an acre. The "agent" promises orally that the advertising money will not be payable until the land is sold, but this stipulation is not contained in a contract that the farmer signs.

In a few days he receives a copy of an ad and not over-courteous demand for money. It is said that seventy-two agriculturists were caught with this bait in Brown County and that one of them gave up $320. Others declare hotly that they will not pay but they will make a fight in the courts.

Sad Memories.

The commuter handed the brakeman a five-cent cigar.

"Say, George," he said, "why does the engine always let off such a heartrending howl just as we pass Long Oak?"

George shook his head sadly.

"Ah," said he, "it was here that the engineer, poor fellow, first met his wife."

An Object Lesson.

"Miranda," said the mistress, "you are a good cook, and I just know that you are too good for us to keep. Some man will come along one of these days and induce you to marry him."

"O, no, mum," answered Miranda, fervently. "I've lived with you and your 'usband too long to want ever to get married."

There are two conclusions to be drawn from the reply of the faithful servant; one is that she was loyal to her employers, the other is as it may be.

The Ruling Passion.

Mammy Liza has lived with the "family" long enough to acquire words and expressions, which, used at second hand, are sometimes fatal to the family gravity. Recently a member of the little circle had occasion to call for the horse and surrey from the livery stable. After waiting a long while the order was repeated, with no immediate result. Mammy, having heard the conversation, and knowing the impatience of her mistress, expressed herself thus:

"Huh! Dey's jes' no use countin' on dem libery stable folks, dey's so dilitante."

CUBS' FOOD

They Thrive on Grape-Nuts.

Healthy babies don't cry and the well-nourished baby that is fed on Grape-Nuts is never a crying baby. Many babies who cannot take any other food relish the perfect food, Grape-Nuts, and get well.

"My little baby was given up by three doctors who said that the condensed milk on which I fed her had ruined the child's stomach. One of the doctors told me that the only thing to do would be to try Grape-Nuts, so I got some and prepared it as follows: I soaked 1½ tablespoonfuls in one pint of cold water for half an hour, then I strained off the liquid and mixed 12 teaspoonfuls of this strained Grape-Nuts juice with six teaspoonfuls of rich milk, put in a pinch of salt and a little sugar, warmed it and gave it to baby every two hours.

"In this simple, easy way I saved baby's life and have built her up to a strong healthy child, rosy and laughing. The food must certainly be perfect to have such a wonderful effect as this. I can truthfully say I think it is the best food in the world to raise delicate babies on, and is also a delicious healthful food for grown-ups as we have discovered in our family."

Grape-Nuts is equally valuable to the strong, healthy man or woman. It stands for the true theory of health. "There's a Reason. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Commissioner Smith vs. The Standard Oil Co.

From the Railway World, January 3, 1908.

Mr. Herbert Knox Smith, whose zeal in the cause of economic reform has been in no wise abated by the panic which he and his kind did so much to bring on, is out with an answer to President Moffett, of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana. The publication of this answer, it is officially given out, was delayed several weeks, "for business reasons," because it was not deemed advisable to further excite the public mind, which was profoundly disturbed by the crisis. Now that the storm clouds have rolled by, however, the Commissioner rushes again into the fray.

Our readers remember that the chief points in the defence of the Standard Oil Company, as presented by President Moffett, were (1) that the date of six cents on oil from Whiting to East St. Louis has been issued to the Standard Oil Company as the lawful rate by employes of the Alton, (2) that the 18-cent rate on file with the Interstate Commerce Commission was a class and not a commodity rate, never being intended to apply to oil, (3) that oil was shipped in large quantities between Whiting and East St. Louis over the Chicago & Eastern Illinois at 6¼ cents per hundred pounds, which has been filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission as the lawful rate, and (4) that the 18-cent rate on oil was entirely out of proportion to lawful rates on other commodities between these points of a similar character, and of greater value, such, for example, as linseed oil, the lawful rate on which was eight cents. President Moffett also stated that thousands of tons of freight had been sent by other shippers between these points under substantially the same conditions as governed the shipments of the Standard Oil Company.

This defence of the Standard Oil Company was widely quoted and has undoubtedly exerted a powerful influence upon the public mind. Naturally the Administration, which has staked the success of its campaign against the "trusts" upon the result of its attack upon this company, endeavors to offset this influence, and hence the new deliverance of Commissioner Smith.

We need hardly to point out that his rebuttal argument is extremely weak, although as strong, no doubt, as the circumstances would warrant. He answers the points made by President Moffett substantially as follows: (1) The Standard Oil Company had a traffic department, and should have known that the six-cent rate had not been filed. (2) no answer, (3) the Chicago & Eastern Illinois rate was a secret rate because it read, not from Whiting, but from Dolton, which is described as "a village of about 1,500 population just outside of Chicago. Its only claim to note is that it has been for many years the point of origin for this and similar secret rates." The Commissioner admits in describing this rate that there was a note attached stating that the rate could also be used from Whiting.

The press has quite generally hailed this statement of the Commissioner of Corporations as a conclusive refutation of what is evidently recognized as the strongest rebuttal argument advanced by the Standard.

In fact, it is as weak and inconclusive as the remainder of his argument. The lines of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois do not run into Chicago. They terminate at Dolton, from which point entrance is made over the Belt Line. Whiting, where the oil freight originates, is not on the lines of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, which receives its Whiting freight from the Belt Line at Dolton. The former practice, now discontinued, in filing tariffs was to make them read from a point on the line of the filing road, and it was also general to state on the same sheet, that the tariff would apply to other points, e. g., Whiting. The Chicago & Eastern Illinois followed this practice in filing its rate from Dolton, and making a note on the sheet that is applied to Whiting. This was in 1895 when this method of filing tariffs was in common use.

Now let us see in what way the intending shipper of oil could be misled and deceived by the fact that the Chicago & Eastern Illinois had not filed a rate reading from Whiting. Commissioner Smith contends that "concealment is the only motive for such a circuitous arrangement," i. e., that this method of filing the rate was intended to mislead intending competitors of the Standard Oil Company. Suppose such a prospective oil refiner had applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission for the rate from Chicago to East St. Louis over the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, he would have been informed that the only rate filed with the commission by this company was 6¼ cents from Dolton, and he would have been further informed, if indeed he did not know this already, that this rate applied throughout Chicago territory. So that whether he wished to locate his plant at Whiting, or anywhere else about Chicago, under an arrangement of long standing, and which applies to all the industrial towns in the neighborhood of Chicago, he could have his freight delivered over the Belt Line to the Chicago & Eastern Illinois at Dolton and transported to East St. Louis at a rate of 6¼ cents. Where then is the concealment which the Commissioner of Corporations makes so much of? Any rate—from Dolton on the Eastern Illinois or Chappell on the Alton, or Harvey on the Illinois Central, or Blue Island on the Rock Island, applies throughout Chicago territory to shipments from any other point in the district. So far from the Eastern Illinois filing its rate from Dolton in order to deceive the shipper, it is the Commissioner of Corporations who either betrays his gross ignorance of transportation customs in Chicago territory or relies on the public ignorance of these customs to deceive the public too apt to accept unquestioningly every statement made by a Government official as necessarily true, although, as in the present instance, a careful examination shows these statements to be false.

The final point made by President Moffett that other commodities of a character similar to oil were carried at much lower rates than 18 cents, the Commissioner of Corporations discusses only with the remark that "the reasonableness of this rate is not in question. The question is whether this rate constituted a discrimination as against other shippers of oil," and he also makes much of the failure of President Moffett to produce before the grand jury evidence of the alleged illegal acts of which the Standard Oil official said that other large shippers in the territory had been guilty. Considering the fact that these shippers included the packers and elevator men of Chicago the action of the grand jury in calling upon President Moffett to furnish evidence of their wrong-doing may be interpreted as a demand for an elaboration of the obvious; but the fact that a rate-book, containing these freight fates for other shippers was offered in evidence during the trial and ruled out by Judge Landis, was kept out of sight. President Moffett would not, of course, accept the invitation of the grand jury although he might have been pardoned if he had referred them to various official investigations by the Interstate Commerce Commission and other departments of the Government.

We come back, therefore, to the conclusion of the whole matter, which is that the Standard Oil Company of Indiana was fined an amount equal to seven or eight times the value of its entire property, because its traffic department did not verify the statement of the Alton rate clerk, that the six-cent commodity rate on oil had been properly filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission. There is no evidence, and none was introduced at the trial, that any shipper of oil from Chicago territory had been interfered with by the 18-cent rate nor that the failure of the Alton to file its six-cent rate had resulted in any discrimination against any independent shipper,—we must take this on the word of the Commissioner of Corporations and of Judge Landis. Neither is it denied even by Mr. Smith that the "independent" shipper of oil, whom he pictures as being driven out of business by this discrimination of the Alton, could have shipped all the oil he desired to ship from Whiting via Dolton over the lines of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois to East St. Louis. In short, President Moffett's defence is still good, and we predict will be so declared by the higher court.

The Standard Oil Company has been charged with all manner of crimes and misdemeanors. Beginning with the famous Rice of Marietta, passing down to that apostle of popular liberties, Henry Demarest Lloyd, with his Wealth Against the Commonwealth, descending by easy stages to Miss Tarbell's offensive personalities, we finally reach the nether depths of unfair and baseless misrepresentation in the report of the Commissioner of Corporations. The Standard has been charged with every form of commercial piracy and with most of the crimes on the corporation calendar. After long years of strenuous attack, under the leadership of the President of the United States, the corporation is at last dragged to the bar of Justice to answer for its misdeeds. The whole strength of the Government is directed against it, and at last, we are told, the Standard Oil Company is to pay the penalty of its crimes, and it is finally convicted of having failed to verify the statement of a rate clerk and is forthwith fined a prodigious sum, measured by the car. Under the old criminal law, the theft of property worth more than a shilling was punishable by death. Under the interpretation of the Interstate Commerce law by Theodore Roosevelt and Judge Kenesaw Landis, a technical error of a traffic official is made the excuse for the confiscation of a vast amount of property.

Local News.

S. W. Henry Passes Away.

Special by Telephone from Erlanger:

Stephen W. Henry, at one time a member of the Kentucky Legislature from Kenton county, died of pneumonia at Christ hospital, Cincinnati, last Saturday night, the 25th inst. Mr. Henry was born in Christian county, Kentucky, in 1829, and received his education at the Georgetown College, and married Miss Sallie Buckner, a sister of Dr. James Buckner, of Cincinnati. One daughter, Mrs. Potts, the wife of Rev. Potts, of Memphis, Tenn., survives him. "Uncle" Steve as he was familiarly called, was well known in Northern Kentucky. Funeral services were conducted here Monday, after which the remains were shipped to Hopkinsville for Interment.

Frank Saddler Dead.

Special by Telephone from Idlewild:

Mr. Frank Saddler, in his 81st year, died of heart failure, last Saturday night, at his home on this side of the river a mile or so above Lawrenceburg ferry. He had been complaining for some time, but his death was unexpected. For many years he was one of the most successful fishermen on the Ohio river, and shipped fish to the Cincinnati market by the ton. His wife died some time since. He was a good neighbor and a splendid citizen.

TOBACCO QUIDS.

A dispatch from Winchester under date of January 24th says: "One thousand hogsheads of tobacco were sold today by the American Tobacco Society to an independent buyer, whose name is withheld. This is in addition to 300 hogsheads sold earlier in the week, and all was sold at equity prices. A strenuous campaign has been inaugurated to secure 100,000 acres of the present crop pledged to raise no crop in 1908. About 65,000 acres have been pledged to date."

The Kentucky Congressmen are girding their loins for an attack in solid phalanx on the tobacco trust. What they want is the repeal of the six-cent tax on tobacco so that the planters may find a market independently of the trust. Representative Rhinock introduced a bill yesterday afternoon to wipe out this tax. It, or a similar bill, will pass the House if it comes to a vote but Senator Aldrich is preparing to take up the cudgels again in the Senate to defeat legislation.

Five members of Fayette county S. of E. have announced their willingness to pledge their private fortunes to finance the crop and to care for the crops upon which money had been borrowed. That is the way to make the pool a success as to financing, and shows ones faith by his works.

A dispatch from Vevay, Ind., dated the 25th inst., says the Switzerland county branch of the Society of Equity, has disbanded because of the lack of funds with which to finance the crop. This action places on the market 750,000 pounds of tobacco.

J. D. Vance has filed suit in the circuit court at Georgetown, Scott county, to rescind a contract for lease of a farm for which he was to pay $1,815 per year. He alleges that the contract stipulates that he was to have 20 acres of land for growing tobacco, estimated worth $40 an acre; that the action of the Society of Equity makes it impossible for him to grow tobacco, reducing the value of the farm to him in the sum of $750.

Hundreds of the laboring class in the large cities are in almost destitute circumstances, and a period of severe, cold weather would entail an immense amount of intense suffering among that class, owing to the fact that they have been without work for several weeks just at that time of the year when idleness bears the hardest on them. Those in a position to know the facts say there never was a time in Cincinnati and Covington when so many families were dependent upon charity. Hundreds of men are idle who are anxious for work—men whose families depend upon their daily earnings for food and fuel. These men have been brought to a point where they have to beg or steal that their families may be provided with enough to keep soul and body together. The numerous charitable associations have been doing all in their power to prevent suffering but their means are not equal to the demands. The societies that have been dispensing charity are appealing for assistance in order that they may be able to meet the demands upon them. The outlook for the poor in the cities is gloomy, and there is no indication of any improvement in conditions for some time yet.

No new cases of smallpox in the lower end of the county.

Miss Rose Adams, of Big Bone is very ill of measles and heart trouble.

McVILLE.

The ferry at this place is crossing to-bacco.

There is talk of building a creamery here next spring.

Mrs. Ezra Aylor, who has been quite sick, is getting better.

S. D Rice has built an air-tight house in which to smoke meat.

Col. Richard Lacy was a guest of John Presser and wife, last week.

Joe Vanness, of Hamilton, Ohio, is here visiting his sister, Mrs. Dolph.

James Louden, of Frozentoe, Indiana, is here the guest of his son John.

Mrs. Rhea Berkshire spent a few days, last week, in Rising Sun, visiting her mother.

Miss Julia, the charming daughter of Capt. R. D. Akin, spent a few days, last week, in our town.

Mrs. Lottie Rowland bought a good looking horse from Hamp Rogers, of Rising Sun, last Saturday.

Roland McCarty is in deep sorrow. His $200 fox hound got a foot cut off in a steel trap over on Lick creek. Roland is disconsolate.

Several members of the local Masonic lodge attended the Masonic banquet given by the Rising Sun lodge on Monday night of last week.

Mrs Rell Sullivan was brought from Cincinnati last Sunday. She is recovering slowly, and will remain at Pepper Smiths until she is able to go out home.

The Thaw trial, Society of Equity and the Senatorial contest, furnish food for the debaters around the country store stoves, and it is hard to decide which is the most popular theme.

Joe Stepheus was in town one day last week, complaining of a hook and ladder company being organized. He says they use the ladder to get to his chicken roost and then hook the fowls.

We heard a lady say the other day; "Mr. Riddell need not try to fool the people into believing that he is publishing a first-class paper, for I have it from good authority that it is sent through the Burlington postoffice as second-class matter."

Silver Wedding.

Rabbit Hash, Ky., Jan. 27.—Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Riggs celebrated the 25th anniversary of their wedding at their home in East Bend, on last Saturday, Jan. 25th. A large number of their friends and neighbors were present to assist in the celebration and to extend their felicitations to them on their long and happy married life. Mr. and Mrs. Riggs are model entertainers and everyone present thoroughly enjoyed themselves. An elegant dinner was served at 2 o'clock, to which everyone did full justice. Lewis Calvert was present and rendered selections with his graphophone from time to time. In the evening the young folks took possession and had an old fashioned candy-pulling, which was followed by Flinch and other games in which the older folks joined, and with as much interest as the younger ones. At a late hour the guests took their departure, all wishing Mr. and Mrs. Riggs many happy returns of their wedding day. Mr. and Mrs. Riggs were both born in this neighborhood and have always lived here. They have five children all of whom were present. Among those present were:

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Will Craig, Mr. and Mrs. R T Stephens, Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Baird, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Shinkle, Mr. Lewis Calvert, Mr. Arthur Holmes, Miss Dora Lee, Miss Nannie Baird, Miss Katie Baird, Miss Effie West, Miss Addie Grace West, Miss Minnie Stephens, Miss Frances C. Stephens, Masters Mark Lee, Dwight Lee, Vance Lee, Herold R. Craig, Jesse M. Craig, Roy W. Craig, Floyd Stephens and Wilbur Baird.

Mr and Mrs. W. J. Rice entertained L. A. Conner and family, L. Nichols and wife, G. W. Sandford and wife and Robert Carver and amily Sunday.

L. A. Conner and Hubert White made a business trip to the city, yesterday.

February has five Saturdays this year.

Gloomy weather so far this week.

How many acres of tomatoes are you going to grow this year? is a question that is asked often in the neighborhood of Belleview and Petersburg, owing to the great demand created for that vegetable by the local canneries, which made good money for the growers last year.

A Higher Health Level.

"I have reached a higher health level since I began using Dr. King's New Life Pills," writes Jacob Springer, of West Franklin, Maine. "They keep my stomach, liver and bowels working just right." If these pills disappoint you on trial, money will be refunded at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger, 25c.

A Freak Month.

February will be a freak month, in that it will have five Saturdays. It comes in on the last day of the week and goes out the same way it came in. Laborers will have five pay days and the unmarried women will have five Saturdays in which to propose—for this is leap year, you know. St. Valentine's day is on the 14th, and Saturday the 22d is Washington's birth day, on which the rural mail carriers will get a lay-off. All this will happen in the shortest month, too, and when it will occur again deponent sayeth not. Last, but not the least, on the last day of the month, and the last day of the week our old friend, Henry Phipps, who resides on the classic waters of Middle creek, will celebrate his birth day the first time since 1891, and, no doubt, this will be one of the swellest occasions of the month, one of which the unmarried ladies will hail the coming with the greatest dee-light.

Old Boreas swept down on this part of the country, last Thursday night, and by Friday morning the mercury had begun to hunt zero. Before noon Friday it warmed up some and rain began falling about 2 p. m., but another cold wave arrived Friday night along with a wind that was almost a gale. Saturday the wind drove the cold into living beings at the rate of 40 miles an hour, it being the most disagreeable day of the season. Sunday morning the mercury ranged from 5 to 7 degrees above zero, making it a good day to sit close to a roaring fire, and plan for putting up ice the next day. Monday was another cool specimen, and the ice harvest was in full blast.

PROGRESSIVE RELIGION.

A Religion That Will Take Every Man by The Hand and Call Him Brother.

After being closed for several years the Baptist church in our town will throw open its doors to the public on the first Sunday after the second Saturday in February. I was informed by one of the members of said church that their object was to begin what is generally known as revival services. I asked him if he had chosen any particular subjects for the speakers during their religious services. He told me he had not. I suggested that on account of the people becoming so illberal in their views, that it would be a good idea to have the ministers to address the people on Progressive Religion. Perhaps some will ask, what is Progressive Religion? It is a religion that will take every man by the hand and call him brother, without stopping to ask what church he belongs to, or what his creed is? creeds amount to nothing. It is his deeds that have weight. No religion that starves the mind will do for this age. You want a religion that can keep up with the times, that is a lve with the spirit of the age; you want a religion that will bring about some visible good. You want a religion that is honest in all things, one that will associate with man seven days in the week—not like a fine suit, to be worn on Sundays and then laid aside the other six. Something different from that to which the little girl referred to when she said her "father was a christian, but he didn't work at it much." You want a religion that will plant trees without stopping to ask who will gather the fruit? The world is starving for a religion that will be just to every man, woman and child, and one that will pay one hundred cents on the dollar every time. You want a religion of reason and humanity—one that will do for manly men and womanly women that are cordially invited to attend the meetings at the said Baptist church, and I hope you may have the pleasure of listening to a religion that is free from false pretenses, and full of demonstrated truths.

It is our sad duty to record the death of our sister, Mrs. Alice Hafer, who departed this life on the 15th day of January, 1908.

DON'T PUT IT OFF.

Come In and Subscribe and Help A Good Thing Along.

Edgar C. Riley was in Burlington Monday, in the interest of the school he desires to establish here. Only ten more subscribed pupils are required to make the school a go, and an earnest effort will be made to secure them. It will be a great pity if the people of Burlington and vicinity who are interested in having a good school year after year, fail to grasp the present opportunity. Study the matter over, compare the cost of sending your child to school at home with that of sending him abroad and you will at once be convinced that you ought to lend a helping hand in the effort to secure the school even though you may not patronize it at first. Every property owner in or near Burlington is directly interested in the success of the school. Only a few days remain in which to act, so lose no time in calling at this office and adding your name to the subscription paper. If you have no pupil to send, say how much you will contribute. If the school is made a success the first year, there will be no trouble about it thereafter.

At its session last Monday the fiscal court reduced the rate of taxation on property for county purposes five cents on the $100. VISIT OF QUEEN OF SHEBA

(Copyright, 1908, by the Author, W. S. Edson.)

Scripture Authority.—Kings, 10:1-13.

SERMONETTE.

"Behold, a greater than Solomon is here." Do you hear the challenge of Scripture? A contemplation of this story of Solomon and appreciation of his wisdom and glory bring with them nothing but condemnation. In that we can discern the splendors that marked his life and reign while at the same time we miss the beauty and charm of the son of God, the greater than Solomon.

"The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with this generation and shall condemn it." And the judgment will be just, for how can we escape when we have neglected so great opportunity of seeing and knowing him who is called "Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace?"

True it is of the world as Isaiah declares: "When we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him. He is despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief; and we hid as it were our faces from him; he was despised and we esteemed him not." It is not that the beauty and the glory and the power are not there, but it is that we turn our faces from him who would reveal all these things to us, and see only the temporal things of life.

Having ears we hear not. But not so with the queen of Sheba, the country far, far to the south, for when tidings came of a certain King Solomon, and of his wisdom and the splendors of his kingdom, she listened to the story, and determined that she would prove to her own ears and her own eyes that all she had heard was true. And so she came!

CAME! Do you grasp the significance of that word? Where you are now dwelling in ease and contentment you will never be able to know that these things which are spoken of the greater King Jesus are true. You have heard the reports. You have been told over and over again by those who have come straight from the presence of King Jesus that he and he alone can satisfy the heart of man, and yet you have been content to stay where you are in the far country of sin. Why not, like the queen of Sheba, come and prove whether the things you have heard are really so?

King Solomon received the queen of Sheba because she came as an honest inquirer. He was willing that she should see and hear and know. And the greater than Solomon invites the most searching kind of honest investigation and testing. "Prove me," is the invitation.

THE STORY.

"BUT what if the story is true?" and as the question kept pressing itself in upon her, she tapped her daintily-sandaled foot impatiently upon the polished marble floor, as though she demanded answer from the very stones at her feet. But no answer came to her ears but the soft, muffled tap of her foot upon the floor.

"It all comes from listening to the idle tales of the wanderer and adventurer," she exclaimed at last impatiently; and then almost in the same breath she added:

"But what if the story is true? How I wish I knew.

"This King Solomon of Israel must be a wonderful person," she continued musingly to herself, as she threw herself upon the low divan and gave free rein to the thoughts which crowded into her troubled heart. "And his God must be even more wonderful than the gods of Sheba.

"But no," she added hastily, "this cannot be. Let me not be disloyal to my gods and my land. What fairer land could they give than the sole-laden fields, the golden sands of her rivers and the precious stones? Surely the God of Israel cannot have done more."

"But your gods never divided the waters of a mighty river, nor threw down the walls of a city," came back the answer as snatches of the story of the nation of Israel came to her mind as they had been related to her but a few days before by the traveler.

This traveler had come on one of the trading ships which had touched at a near-by port, and the wonderful stories of the land from which he had come had reached her ears and she had sent for him. And he had come, glad of the chance to tell to the beautiful queen of the land of Sheba his story. Eagerly she had listened while he had told of the people of Israel, of the God of Israel and his wonderful leadings and dealings, of the land which he had given to his people, and of the wonderful king whom God had established upon the throne. And when he had gone and the first thrill of the story had been spent, she found doubt creeping into her heart.

It was naught but the fair dream of a romancer. No land could be better than her land. No gods were better than the gods of her fathers and her fathers' fathers. She would not prove disloyal to them. But always while she sought thus to bring herself back to rest content with what she already possessed, there persisted this question:

"What if the story is true?"

"And how shall I ever know whether it is true or not?" she asked herself at last.

"Why not go and see?" An incredulous little laugh burst from her lips at the very thought of such a thing, and to prove that it was impossible she began to run over in her mind the many seemingly insurmountable things in the way of such a long, hard and perilous journey. She might just as well give up her people and her kingdom as to undertake such a journey, for while she was gone what might not happen?

"But what if the story is true?" came back the question again and again. And it gave her no peace. To every reason great and small which she could think of why she should not go on the journey, the question kept coming back with redoubled force: "What if it is true?"

"If it is true," she exclaimed at last, with an air of decision, "I want to know. And how shall I know save as I go and see for myself? Did I send a deputation to this King Solomon, I should have only their say-so. If Israel has such a king and such a God, I must see and know for myself, if I would be satisfied."

"And so would you go?" she asked herself at last. "Yea. I would," she exclaimed with an air of decision. Rising hastily as though that matter was now settled, she summoned her waiting maid.

"Go, Felica, and dispatch messengers to the port. I would see the traveler who came thither on the ship and who told such wonderful stories of the land from which he came. Make haste, for if I remember rightly the boat was to have sailed this day."

Thus admonished Felica quickly had the swiftest runner on his way, and that evening he had returned, bringing with him the traveler whose stories had so aroused the fair queen.

"How can one make the journey to thy land?" she demanded, eagerly.

"What," exclaimed the man, wonderingly, "would you face the fatigue and danger of so long a journey?"

"Yes, yes," the queen responded. "Thy stories have roused in me a spirit which will not be stilled. I must go and prove thy words."

"And thou shalt not be disappointed," was the confident response.

One month later found the queen of Sheba well on her way to the land of Israel. Her determination to make the long, perilous journey had come as a surprise and shock to her people, but when they realized her earnestness of spirit and desire to learn the truth of the wonderful things she had heard, they had at last heartily entered into her plans and had laden her camels with the richest treasure which her kingdom afforded, for, said they:

But, oh, the wearisomeness of that long journey. Had not her desire been so great she would have turned back more than once. But it was when on the burning sands of the desert that the greatest test came. There was murmuring among her great retinue of servants and she was weary and faint, and their water was almost exhausted. Should she go on or should she turn back? Did not her own country offer all that her heart could desire?

"But I would know of this wonderful King Solomon, and of the God who has his dwelling place in the midst of his people," she cried almost in despair at last. "Yea, I will keep my face set steadfastly toward this land of Israel, though I perish in the attempt."

And with the final resolve and the putting away of the temptation to turn back there came peace to her heart and she said, softly: "Perhaps the God whom I seek will bring me back this way after I have seen all the wonderful things of which I have heard."

"Yea," said the queen, lifting her eyes and looking about her. "Yea, I thought I was not mistaken. This is the place. Ah, how near I came to turning back in my quest, and how glad I am now that I kept on. What wonderful things have I heard and seen. Truly the God of Solomon is the one and only God. Not half was told me of all the wisdom and prosperity which the God of Israel has given his servant Solomon. And now I go back to my land, and the God of Solomon shall be my God, and he shall be the God of my people, for I have seen and do know that there are no gods like to the God of Israel."

Eager for Bible Knowledge.

Rev. W. M. Junkin writes from Korea of the Korean Christians making sacrifices in order to attend the Bible teaching services and says: "Where but on the mission field can you find men clamoring for Bibles and running with them to anyone who can teach them saying: 'Tell me the meaning?' This is the case here and it is the most encouraging phase of the work in Korea at present."

BECKHAM LOSES ANOTHER VOTE.

Opinion Held That Ice Is Broken and Further Breaks Are Looked For.

Frankfort, Ky.—The anti-Beckham men are jubilant over Klair's desertion of Beckham, though as far as can be learned his vote for John Allen had no special significance except it placed Beckham one vote farther away from a majority.

The anti-Beckham democrats have confidentially claimed from the first that more democrats besides the first six would leave Beckham in due time, and Klair was the first to break the ice.

This gives them hope there will be others follow Klair's lead in a few days. The democrats who vote against Beckham declare they will never vote for Bradley or any other republican, and claim that some democrat will ultimately be elected senator if anybody is elected this session. This gives no encouragement to the republicans, but these same democrats are so frequently in conference with the republican leaders that it gives color to the oft-asserted claim that Bradley will win out.

BLIND MOTHER

Dragged Her Son's Corpse From the Bottom of a Bath Tub.

Louisville, Ky.—When William N. Ryan, aged 52, was asphyxiated his blind mother, aged 70, groped for his body at the bottom of a bath tub and lifted him out. Ryan had been an invalid for years, as the result of the loss of a leg in a street car accident. He took a bath, and in attempting to light a small heater two of the burners did not ignite and the escaping gas filled his weak lungs. He drowned in about three feet of water. His mother smelled the gas, and led by her daughter, Mrs. C. T. Daniel, she entered the bathroom, where she felt for the bath tub, and, reaching through the water, seized her son's body and pulled him out on the floor.

Sheep-Killing Dogs at Work.

Newport, Ky.—Sheep-killing dogs played havoc with a fine flock of sheep, the property of ex-Squire Byrd, at Claryville, Campbell county. Five were killed outright and a number of others were wounded and worried so that they died shortly afterward. Mr. Byrd, under the new state law, will be paid by the state for the sheep killed by making affidavit within 24 hours before the nearest magistrate as to the value of the sheep.

Still at It.

Mt. Sterling, Ky.—"Night riders" burned the large tobacco barn of John C. McDaniel, near Rogers' mill. All the tobacco crop was consumed. His loss is $2,000. Hamilton Bros. and Foley Bros., the heaviest tobacco growers in Bath county, have been warned by "night riders" to refrain from selling. The two firms have 75,000 pounds. The warehouses are under heavy guard.

Her Identity Revealed.

Louisville, Ky.—"Jimmy" Allen, cabin boy on the Falls City, was arrested as Mildred Allen, and she admits that she is. For three weeks she has been doing duty on the steamer, and the crew was astounded when her sex was disclosed by the statements of the officers. She hails from West Point, Ky., but has never been contented with a life in skirts, it is said.

Blew Off His Sister's Head.

Mayfield Ky.—Patrick Crawford, 7, shot and killed his sister, 5, at their home near Farmington. The children were playing "robber," and the boy, pretending that he heard a noise at the door, seized a shotgun and marched out. Just as the boy opened the door the little girl marched in and the weapon was accidentally discharged, the load blowing off her head.

Insurance Company Quits.

Louisville, Ky.—The New Amsterdam Casualty Co. has withdrawn from the Kentucky field. All policies which are now in force will be continued but no new business will be written. Generally unsafe conditions were given as the cause.

Formal Ballot Is Taken.

Frankfort, Ky.—A formal ballot for senator was taken to preserve the continuity of the balloting as contemplated by the law, the legislature having adjourned. Beckham received one vote and Bradley one.

Cut the Cable Rope.

Lexington, Ky.—Reports from Knox county are that a posse is pursuing a negro miner, who cut a cable rope supporting a coal car, allowing it to crash down a shaft, killing one man and wounding 12 others.

The Goods on Him.

Lexington, Ky.—Ollie Forston, charged with having stolen Congressman Langley's valise from a C. & O. train, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to a year in the penitentiary. Forston had on a boiled shirt, once a part of the congressman's wardrobe.

Turfman Lewis Dies Suddenly.

Frankfort, Ky.—Walter H. Lewis, aged 63 years, who with his brother, W. J. Lewis, owns the noted Belair stock farm, near here, dropped dead of heart failure, caused by an attack of indigestion.

HOPKINS DESERTS BECKHAM.

Other Opponents of Former Governor Unite on John R. Allen.

Frankfort, Ky.—There was a slight change in the senatorial ballot, as Beckham lost another vote, W. W. Hopkins, of Floyd county, voting for J. C. Mayo.

All the other anti-Beckham democrats united and voted for John R. Allen, giving him 7 votes.

It is claimed by the opponents of Beckham that two or three more democrats will desert him, but that they will not vote for Bradley.

The two branches of the legislature adopted a joint resolution to adjourn to give certain committees time to visit the asylums and other state institutions.

In the senate the legislative apportionment bill was introduced by Senator Burnam. Many changes are made.

Senator Cureton introduced a bill giving representatives and senators a salary of $40 per month and the lieutenant governor $2,500 per year.

Other bills introduced were as follows:

By H. H. Smith—Locating one subexperiment station in Western Kentucky and one in Eastern Kentucky.

By Mr. Renaker—Giving aged and indigent confederate soldiers a pension of $125 per year.

MAY END DEADLOCK.

Temperance Fight Fast Merging Into Senatorial Fight.

Frankfort, Ky.—The temperance fight is fast merging itself into the senatorial fight, and the indications are that the more pronounced anti-local option democrats will become so bitter if Gov. Beckham's friends push the passage of the county unit bill that they will vote for Bradley.

It is asserted that the fight in the house to recommit and thus delay the county unit bill was made by the republicans, who hope through this plan to emphasize the alleged hostility of Beckham toward the liquor people and induce the liquor democrats to seek revenge by electing Bradley.

Another story says that Gov. Beckham is now assured of a permanent deadlock and will hold out to the end and go before the people again and ask the next legislature to elect him.

Drilled For the Governor.

Louisville, Ky.—Gov. Willson had his first official experience as commander-in-chief of the Kentucky troops, when he inspected the regimental dress drill of the First Kentucky infantry at its armory here. He showed that he was well pleased with it. "I even touched the guns with my gloved hands," said he, "and not a spot of grease could I see on the gloves." Company H, the "Hopkinsville company," gave a special drill and parade.

Seek Powers' Release.

Washington.—Eight hundred employes of the pension office signed a petition which was sent to Gov. Willson, asking that Caleb Powers be liberated. It is said Commissioner of Pensions Vespasian Warner wrote a personal letter to the pardoning commission requesting the pardon of the famous Kentucky prisoner.

Asked to Make Good.

Augusta, Ky.—Ex-City Marshal Lake Teel, who was also city tax collector, has been called upon to face an alleged deficit of $800. This sum is charged to him by an auditing committee appointed by the new city council. The alleged shortage came about, it is said, partly through a faulty system of keeping books.

Off For Washington.

Lexington, Ky.—Jouett Shouse, secretary of the Kentucky Breeding Bureau, left for Washington to deliver an address before the members of the American Breeders' association. His subject is, "The Thoroughbred Horse in America, His Utility and What Thoroughbred Blood Has Done."

Maurice Galvin Resigns.

Frankfort, Ky.—The formal resignation of Maurice Galvin as commonwealth's attorney of the Covington district was received at the governor's office. Gov. Willson, in a few days, will appoint a successor to Mr. Galvin, who is assuming his duties as collector of the internal revenue.

Indictment Returned.

Frankfort, Ky.—The Franklin county grand jury returned an indictment against the American Tobacco Co., alleging that it is a corporation having as its purpose the restraint of the tobacco trade in this county.

Jury Failed to Agree.

Louisville, Ky.—The first trial growing out of the street car riots last November resulted in a hung jury, Elder-en wanted to convict, while one held out to acquit Herbert Thomas, 17, who was charged with shooting into a car and wounding Miss Lillian Baude.

Aged Odd Fellow Called.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—Rev. John W. Venobal, for many years pastor of Grace Episcopal church here, and for the last 40 years sovereign grand chaplain of the Odd Fellows in the United States, died.

HURT HIS SENSE OF JUSTICE.

Youngster Considerably Puzzled Over Distribution of Rewards.

Having finished her afternoon's philanthropic work in the East side tenements, the voluntary helper started for home. Before she had proceeded far, however, she discovered that a small purse, which contained the remainder of her money, about four dollars, was missing from her handbag. So, surmising she had either carelessly mislaid the purse or been robbed of it, she retraced her steps to the tenements. Her search over her recent working field availing her nothing, she was about to turn again toward home, when a tear-stained, slyacting youth came out of one of the tenements and accosted her.

"Say, missus," he snivveled, pointing across the street, where another boy crouched in a hallway to examine something, "if y' 're lookin' fer y' pocketbook, dat kid over dere's got it!"

Acting on this declaration, the lady hurried over and cornered the lad before he was aware of her propinquity. Seeing no chance of escaping with the purse and its contents the boy complied with the lady's demand and handed over the pocketbook.

"Now, my honest lad," she then said, turning to the first boy, who had followed her across the street, "there's a dollar for pointing out the thief!"

"Say, missus," he said, "don't I get nothin'?"

"Not a penny!"

"Gee," he rejoined in a kind of perplexity; "an' I stole de pocketbook from him!"—Illustrated Magazine.

Selling Bread in Old London.

Bread, which, like coals, is advancing in price, was also formerly a matter of state regulation. In the thirteenth century, for example, an enactment was in force that the profit of the baker on each quarter of wheat was to be, for his own labor, six cents, and such bran as might be sifted from the meal. Again, in London, only farthing and half-penny loaves were allowed to be made, and it was a serious offense for a baker to sell loaves of any other size. Nevertheless, other kinds of loaves were sometimes smuggled into the market, hidden in various ways—under a towel, in the folds of a garment or beneath the arms. A curious ordinance in the city of London forbade the baker, if he sold by retail, to sell bread in or before his house, before the oven in which it was baked, or indeed anywhere but in the market assigned to him. There seems to have been a strange prejudice against bread made in Southwark, one reason given being "because the bakers of Southwark are not amenable to the justice of the city."—London Chronicle.

Expressing a Thorax.

Dr. Leopold Jaches of Cornell's medical school recently returned from a study of the use of the Rontgen rays abroad. Pausing in an account of his tour, Dr. Jaches said:

"Abroad, as here at home, the great public's knowledge of the rays continues rather vague. Investigators receive all manner of queer letters and requests. Thus I heard in Berlin of a man who wrote to a specialist:

"'Dear Sir: I have had a bullet in my thorax for 11 years. I am too busy to come to Berlin, but hope you will come down here with your rays, as my case should be worth your while. If you cannot come, send a packet of rays, with instructions as to use, etc., and I will see if I cannot manage to work them myself.'

"The specialist replied:

"'Dear Sir: I am sorry that my engagements prevent my coming to see you, and that I am out of rays just now. If you cannot come to Berlin yourself, send me your thorax by express and I will do the best I can with it.'"

Man at His Best.

At what age is a man at his best and most likely to achieve his life work? The Rev. F. B. Meyer once put the age at 46. That seemed late to a critic, but Dr. Leonard Guthrie at the Royal College of Physicians supported this statement. He quoted Jastro's table dealing with specially precocious people, which showed that the average age at which great artists did their first work was 13.8; their first great work, 28; their greatest work, 46.7; and that the average age at death was 60.1. For poets the figures in the same order were 15.6 27.8, 43.9 and 61.6; for philosophers, 17.6, 32.1, 47.7 and 66.3. Here is comfort for those who think of middle life as flat prose.

Her Revenge.

On a crowded street car recently there were several stout men taking up more room than they should. A slip of a girl got on and the conductor called out "move up, please." They reluctantly moved about six inches and the girl squeezed in. A few minutes later a tremendously stout woman laden with parcels entered and the girl immediately offered her her seat, which she accepted. The selfish men were lost to view under 350 pounds of stoutness and the girl chuckled to herself.

Illiteracy in New York.

Dr. Andrew S. Draper, commissioner of education in New York, says that illiteracy is much more general in that state than in Germany, France, Great Britain, Switzerland, Scandinavia or Japan.

BEGINS SIMPLE LIFE IN INSANE ASYLUM

THAW DECLARES THAT HIS STAY IN MATTEAWAN WILL NOT BE LONG.

LAWYERS WILL SUE OUT WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS

No Arrangements for specially Prepared Meals Having Been Made For Him, He Shared the Hospital Fare With All the Others.

Matteawan, N. Y., Feb. 3.—Harry K. Thaw began the routine of a simple life which the authorities in the state hospital for the criminal insane say will make his long stay in the Toombs prison in New York city seem like the height of gayety in comparison.

The new patient in the observation ward slept soundly, the presence of the fifty other men in the dormitory not giving him the slightest concern.

It was after the usual retiring hour when Thaw reached the hospital and he immediately went to bed. He had enjoyed the trip from New York with his counsel as well as the dinner in the hotel in Fishkill Landing with his counsel and one or two newspaper friends. Although the two deputies who accompanied him were guest at the dinner, there was no suggestion of prison or asylum restriction during the repast, and Thaw found the occasion much to his liking. He arose in the morning at 6 he ate a hearty breakfast at the "knife and fork table."

About 500 men were in the main dining hall when Thaw reached the breakfast table Sunday, and he was the center of attention. The novelty of the noted patient's presence had not worn off by dinner time and he was compelled again to eat under the scrutiny of many eyes.

No arrangements for specially prepared meals having yet been made for him, Thaw shared the hospital fare with all the others. His dinner included roast pork, potatoes, sauer kraut, bread and butter and coffee.

At 3 p. m. Thaw attended divine services in the auditorium or theater conducted by the Rev. Harry Sheldon, pastor of the Fishkill Landing Methodist Episcopal church.

During the day Thaw declared to one of the attendants that he probably would not be in the hospital more than one week. He said his lawyers would sue out a writ of habeas corpus in his behalf and was sure he would be allowed his liberty as the result of a hearing in court or an inquiry before a commission.

LOOTED BY SAVAGE NEGROES

Was Sinking Liner While Crew Hid in Small Craft.

Hamburg, Feb. 3.—A thrilling account of the shipwreck of the Woermann liner, Ascam Woermann, which recently went on the rocks off Liberia and became a total wreck, is given by the sailors of the steamer who have arrived here.

The night the steamer struck was a dark one and she seemed to be going to pieces rapidly. The crew took to the boats, and immediately thousands of straitest negroes in canoes, who had not replied to the signals of distress from the steamer, surrounded the vessel, swarmed aboard and plundered her.

When the seamen attempted to return in order to obtain provisions and arms, the attitude of the negroes became so threatening that it was impossible to do so. They feared to land on the hostile coast in the darkness and were compelled to stay in the small boats throughout the night.

When morning came the crew landed and camped in the brush for several days, always fearing an attack. Meanwhile they watched the negroes going to the ship and returning from her laden with booty. Finally the vessel disappeared. As soon as the negroes departed and the crew hastened to their boats again they rowed for 17 hours to the northwestward and were picked up completely exhausted by a passing steamer off Monrovia.

Ran Into Open Switch.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Feb. 3.—Passenger Train No. 35, known as the New York Limited, was wrecked one mile east of Sweetwater, Tenn. The train while going at a rate of 35 miles an hour ran into an open switch and crashed into a loaded coal car. A number of passengers were seriously injured. The most seriously hurt are: Engineer Copeland, Knoxville; Mail Clerk I. M. Thomas, Cleveland, Tenn.; Robert Ashton, express messenger; Mail Clerk J. C. Matthews, Johnson City. The passengers were all badly shaken up and the track was blocked for some hours.

Heiresses, Look Out!

St. Petersburg, Feb. 3.—A revision of the College of Heraldry of Georgia, Trans-Caucasia, has resulted in the uncovering of monster forgeries of princely titles. Among 2,000 registered hereditary coats-of-arms 600 have been found to be bogus.

Five Persons Injured.

Kansas City, Feb. 3.—Five persons were injured, one fatally, in a fire which destroyed Landis court, a three story apartment house on the west side of the city. All the injured lived on the upper floors.

KEEPING HIM ON TIME.

Since Walter's Punishment He Hasn't Been Late Once.

Walter is not a bad boy—as boys go. He is inclined to be careless in some things, particularly in regard to getting in from play in time for the family dinner, which is eaten at a stated hour. Repeated scoldings and warnings had no effect, and on the average of three nights out of the week he was invariably late in reporting for dinner. His excuse was always the same—he "didn't know what time it was."

Walter's father does not believe in corporal punishment. On the other hand, he found that moral suasion was ineffective in his son's case, so he hit upon another plan. Next afternoon, as Walter was about to go out to play, the father displayed to his astonished eyes a small alarm clock, a stout leather belt with a staple attachment and a small padlock. The clock was wound and set to ring the alarm at a quarter of an hour before the time for dinner. The belt was made fast around the boy's waist, the clock being secured by the loop in the top. Before Walter could utter a word the padlock was snapped into place and the boy stood like a human clock tower.

"Now, my son," said the father, grimly. "You will be sure to know when it is time to come in. But, remember, if anything should happen to the clock, the price will be deducted from your monthly allowance."

"I won't go out with this clock fastened to me," said Walter, his eyes filling with angry tears.

"Oh, yes you will," said his father calmly. "If you don't go of your own accord I will take you around among your companions and explain why you are thus decorated. Furthermore, you must not return to the house until the alarm rings. I want you to get all the fresh air possible."

Sadly and shamefacedly Walter slunk out of the house. As he removed the hated burden that night his father said: "Whenever you are late for dinner hereafter you will wear the clock next day as punishment." That was several days ago, and Walter has not been late for dinner once.

For British Warships.

The British admiralty has instructed the commanders of all ships of war furnished with wireless telegraph apparatus to telegraph to meteorological stations with which they may be in communication full details concerning the weather at sea. This new branch of the English meteorological service has already proved valuable, and it is believed that its importance will continually increase. Weather information from the sea is of special value in the British Isles because the great storms generally approach across the ocean, and not, as in the eastern half of the United States, across a broad continent netted with telegraph.—Youth's Companion.

Queen Takes Fencing Lessons.

Her majesty Queen Alexandra has lately conceived a great liking for fencing, and is now taking lessons from one of the best-known fencing masters in the country, says Tit-Bits. The master in question was formerly instructor to one of the regiments of household cavalry, and boasts of having trained more first-class swordsmen than any other man in Europe. He describes her majesty as being a "born fencer," and as one who, had she taken up the art earlier in life, would have achieved great prominence in it.

Effective Fog Shifter.

A very effective fog shifter, by the way, is a good snowstorm. Last boxing day the snow that fell on the roof of the Lancet office was analyzed, and the result compared with a similar analysis of snow that fell in Kent. The result showed that the London snow, which was chiefly made up of sulphur, tar and organic ammonia, fetched down with it a large percentage of the coal smoke that is a chief constituent of London fog, while the Kent snow when melted was like d stilled water. —London Daily News.

IT SEEMED INCURABLE

Body Raw with Eczema—Discharged from Hospitals as Hopeless—Cuticura Remedies Cured Him.

"From the age of three months until fifteen years old, my son Dwen's life was made intolerable by eczema. It is worst form. In spite of treatments the disease gradually spread until nearly every part of his body was quite raw. He used to tear himself dreadfully in his sleep and the agony he went through is quite beyond words. The regimental doctor pronounced the case hopeless. We had him in hospitals four times and he was pronounced one of the worst cases ever admitted. From each he was discharged as incurable. We kept trying remedy after remedy, but had gotten almost past hoping for a cure. Six months ago we purchased a set of Cuticura Remedies. The result was truly marvelous and to-day he is perfectly cured. Mrs. Lily Hodge, Camblewell Green, England, Jan. 12, 1907."

According to the story, a Boston girl got on the street car one day carrying one of those muffs the size of an ordinary hassock. She had only one hand in the muff. A young man sitting next to her took advantage of the opportunity to slip his hand into the unoccupied end of the muff.

The Boston girl turned upon him severely. "I could have you arrested for such a familiarity," said she. "But," she added, "I'm from Boston and I purpose to keep calm. Now, I'll just give you ten minutes to let go of my hand."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

HAD TO GET STRENGTH FIRST.

Hard Worked Woman Not Ready to Face Hired Girl Problem.

A Massachusetts man, whose business frequently takes him over the line into Vermont, says that one evening he was a guest at a farm house in that state when he observed that the wife of the owner—a poor, wan little woman—was doing every bit of the work around the house.

As he himself put it, she did an amount of work that would have put an ordinary Massachusetts horse to shame and he really felt like a villain sitting there watching her.

Feeling considerable compassion for the woman, who looked as if ready to drop from overwork, the visitor asked:

"Why don't you get help here? Surely you are not going to try to pull through the long winter without a hired girl."

A sickly smile came to the pallid face of the woman. "Waal, I dunno," she said. "I don't feel as if I could just yit; but p'raps ef I should get to feelin' a little better and stronger I might."—Illustrated Magazine.

Midshipmen and Marriage.

Midshipmen and marriage are interesting the navy department at present considerably. In the last three years more than one midshipman has been dismissed from the service for marrying before he has been graduated from Annapolis. Also there have been increasingly numerous requests to the navy department from passed midshipmen asking permission to marry. The department has been thus far lenient with Cupid and has granted most of these requests.

BOONE CO. RECORDER.
W. L. RIDDELL, Publisher.

The value of diamonds imported in 1907 was $12,000,000 less than in 1906.

The sixty legislative days are more than half gone and the legislature has accomplished nothing.

As a candidate for the presidential nomination Senator Foraker does not seem to be in it a little bit even in Ohio.

From 75 to 95 per cent of the acreage has been pledged to the pool in the counties of Boone, Bourbon, Bracken, Carroll, Clark, Fleming, Gallatin, Grant, Kenton, Mason, Mercer, Owen and Scott.

The tobacco men are now hustling to provide room for the 1907 crop, and to get the 1906 crop out of the way it is said it will be necessary to warehouse a large quantity in Cincinnati and Louisville.

The message the President sent to Congress, last Thursday, is a stunner, and all kinds of constructions are put on it, it being pretty generally agreed that it is an effort to force his nomination for a third term. There is one thing very evident he is now out Bryaning Bryan.

California's orange harvest, now in full season, promises in quantity and quality to break all records. The fruit exchanges of the state estimate that the total output will reach 30,000 car loads, about 9,000,000 boxes, or 1,350,000,000 oranges. The harvest will last until next Fourth of July.

Those members of the General Assembly who favor the $50 an acre tobacco license bill presented by Senator R. B. Brown, say it will pass. Those who oppose the law will, doubtless, question its constitutionality, but by the time that question can be settled it will have accomplished its purpose, the cutting out of the 1908 crop.

The Pension Appropriation bill prepared by the house Committee calls for $150,000,000, or five million more this year. This is the largest sum since 1893, when it was $161,774,000. The increase this year is due to the law giving soldiers who are 62 years of age a service pension. Gen. Garfield said that the limit of pension payments would be reached 20 years ago and that it would afterwards decrease at a rapid rate.

Following is the bill Congressman Rhinock has introduced in Congress for the benefit of tobacco growers:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That unstemmed tobacco in the natural leaf, or stemmed tobacco in the natural leaf, or natural-leaf tobacco in the hand twist, which tobacco is not adulterated in any way, shall not be subject to any internal-revenue tax or charge of any kind whatsoever; and it shall be lawful for any person to buy and sell such unstemmed tobacco in the natural leaf, or stemmed tobacco in the natural leaf, or natural-leaf tobacco in the hand twist, which said tobacco is not adulterated, without the payment of any tax whatsoever.

That all laws and parts of laws in conflict herewith are hereby repealed."

Hon. J. N. Kehoe, who was to address an Equity meet in Burlington, last Monday, failed to put in an appearance, as did also the large crowd that was expected in the town that day, probably all on account of the very bad weather that had prevailed for two or three days before. Several prominent Equity men were present and held an interesting meeting, although very little business was transacted, all that of importance being carried over to the meeting to be held at Richwood next Saturday, when business of vital importance to the Society will be called up for consideration. It was made clear at Monday's meeting that the sentiment in favor of growing no tobacco in Boone county this year is growing rapidly, and the probability is that less than 20 per cent of an average crop will be pitched, which is very encouraging to those who are advocating the abandonment of the crop for this year. The meeting at Richwood next Saturday will be one of unusual importance, as at that meeting the places at which and the persons by whom the pooled tobacco is to be handled will be selected.

H. CLAY WHITE

Was In His Seventy-Eighth Year —Buried At Highland.

H. Clay White, born in Burlington, Boone county, Ky., February 12, 1830, died in Williamstown, Grant county, Ky., January 29, 1908, loved and honored by all who knew him.

Mr. White was the son of the late Joel White and Permelia (Kerrick) White, and was the oldest of their three children, three sons and one daughter—H. Clay, Elizabeth, W. S. and Chas. White—the two latter survive, while Elizabeth, who married James M. Riddell, departed this life several years ago.

Mr. White grew up on his father's farm near Burlington, in the schools at which he received his education under such proficient instructors as Sacket Mead and others. Not being enamored of farm life he entered the Boone Circuit Clerk's office as deputy for the late John Cave. He worked there eleven years and became a most proficient officer—obliging, correct and always at his desk when there was work to do. After the death of Colonel Cave, he became a candidate for the office. This was at a time when the county's vote was pretty evenly divided between the Democrats and Whigs, the Democrats having slightly the advantage, and, Mr. White being a Whig, was defeated by the late Milton Hamilton, Democrat, in an exciting and close contest.

He was united in marriage with Miss Mary Woodford on December 23, 1857. In 1863 he moved to Covington where he engaged in the grocery business, which he conducted very successfully, and in which time his friends multiplied rapidly until 1866 when he entered city politics and was elected city assessor. This office he held only one year, when he became clerk of the Kenton circuit court, at that time one of the best paying offices in the State. Mr. White was such a proficient officer and fine gentleman that his popularity among lawyers, litigants and with the public was never equaled by any other official in Kenton county. He held the position for thirteen years and six months, giving it up on his own motion to take possession of the Newton Hogan farm, near Williamstown, which he purchased in 1881.

Mr. White's long service as clerk of circuit courts, and his association of many years with such eminent lawyers as John W. Stevenson, James O'Hara, John F. Fisk, John G. Carlisle, and many others whose names might be recorded here, had prepared him for the bar, and after a few years spent on his fine Grant county farm, he moved to Williamstown and entered the profession and was soon enjoying a good practice to which he was devoted in the extreme.

In Williamstown, as was the case everywhere he had resided, Mr. White's worth as a public servant was recognized, and he was elected to the office of police judge, from which time dates a very considerable change for the better in the morals of that little city. At the end of his service as police judge his people, not being willing to do without his services, elected him to the office of city attorney, which position he held at the time of his death.

On the 23d of last December Mr. and Mrs. White were to have celebrated their golden wedding, but the day before he was stricken with paralysis, and grew worse gradually, until he was relieved by death. He leaves a widow and six children, his being the first death to occur in his family. The burial was at Highland cemetery last Friday at 11 o'clock. The pall-bearers were his two sons—Henry and William, two sons-in-law—W. Vernon Grant and Ethel Ransom, and two nephews—C. W. and H. B. Riddell.

Mr. White's love for the place of his childhood never waned in the least and it was always a great pleasure to him to visit Burlington and mingle with the people of his native county. In his delirium during his last illness he often fancied he was at his old home, communing with his old friends as in times agone.

In the death of H. Clay White a gentleman of the old school has passed from the scene, one who was always affable, kind and courteous, whom to know was to admire. True to a friend to the last degree, and ever sowing seeds of kindness. His death is deplored by all, and the family have the sympathy of innumerable friends.

Corn, Tobacco and Potatoes.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

It may be interesting to those who notice such things to remind them that corn, potatoes and tobacco, the three most important crops in the world are natives of American soil.

Corn and potatoes are important, first because of their great commercial value and, second, because they furnish food for millions of people, both at home and abroad. Not only the farmers, but especially the merchant always welcomes an abundant crop of corn and potatoes for then we have both bread and meat which is always a relief to merchants, especially to those who do a furnishing business, for it means a lighter load to carry as well as prosperity for all.

Tobacco is important because of the large amount grown and the vast amount of labor required in cultivation and preparation for consumption, and its great commercial value and the amount of revenue derived from it by the different governments of the world. The amounts used and revenue derived annually are approximately as follows:

United S.....	450 000 000	Rev.	70 000 000
Germany.....	205 000 000	"	17,000,000
Russia.....	155 000 000	"	25 000 000
France.....	85 000 000	"	82 000 000
Spain.....	85 000,000	"	31 000 000
Italy.....	45,000 000	"	40,000 000
Austria.....	80 000 000	"	45,000,000
Hungary.....	45 000 000	"	25 000 000
Belgium.....	45 000,000	"	2 000,000
U. Kingdom.	85 000,000	"	63 000 000
Canada.....	16,000 000	"	6 000 000
Mexico.....	20 000 000	"	2,000,000

Great Britain grows no tobacco and imports all she uses and collects about the same amount of revenue as the U. S. Other countries and the Islands of the sea I have no statistics at hand, but they all use tobacco in some form. Their tobacco is important because it supplies the world with the most popular and least harmful stimulant narcotic in use. It quiets the passion of the savage and celebrates the gentle vows of peace. It is the friend of the imprisoned and the exile, the companion of the lonely and the sailors of the deep, and makes Cuba the smile of the sea and deserves the highest tribute that can be paid to it.

Owing to the wonderful adaptation of tobacco to soil and climate it is cultivated over a wide range of territory or wherever the climate is warm enough, but there is no plant so dependent on its environments, and no plant we cultivate whose character and quality is so modified by its surroundings as tobacco, although true to its seed, yet seed taken from its peculiar district and planted in a different location and soil its character and quality will be very much modified in one season and in 3 years will lose its identity entirely.

There are thirty-one distinct types of tobacco grown in the world, all assorted into different grades and each grade manufactured in a special form and shipped to a special or a general market according to the taste of the consumers. Kentucky grows five distinct types of tobacco in five districts, each district limited by the character of soil adapted to the production of its peculiar type. The Black Patch stemming district; Green River district and Dark district grow a heavy bodied, strong tobacco, particularly adapted for foreign markets and about 90 per cent is exported, as its body and strength admits of more adulteration than weaker tobacco.

These four districts organized in 1903 and carried their tobacco for 17 months before making a sale, but since they began selling they have sold right along at prices fixed. The stemming district has sold all of her tobacco grown to date; the dark district has only the 1907 crop on hand; the Green River district, containing eight counties, has not sold all of the 1906 crop. The Black Patch has only four counties and has made good sales. The stemming and Green River districts have had no trouble or lawlessness, whatever. They claim that it is owing to the unanimity of the farmers and their superior organization. The Dark district and the Black Patch has suffered from lawless depredations that are not excusable from whatever source they may come. There has been many arrests and some indictments, but only three convictions for scraping plant beds, claiming they were hired by the trust. Yet with all their opposition those four districts have succeeded in raising the price of tobacco from an average of $2 80 per hundred in 1902-3 to $8½ and $10½ per hundred for 1903 5-6 and part of 1907, and I am told by salesmen that travel in this territory that they have no trouble in selling goods at good prices and getting the money for them, and that the evidence of prosperity can be seen in the building of new houses and barns and in the repairing and painting of old ones, and in the improvement of their farms and fencing. Rubber tire buggies and automobiles, bank accounts doubled, and circulation of money and value of land increased. I have talked with growers from each of those districts, and they all make a like report, but say they must keep up the organization and keep up the fight or go back to old prices.

The White Burley district has been in the fight for fifteen months, and while it has caused her tobacco to advance from $6.50 to $12 per hundred on the market, she has not yet reached the goal, but is encouraged by the object lessons of her sister districts to keep up and strengthen her organization and continue the fight with a determination that knows no failure.

I notice in the N. Y. World of Jan. 29th, that the A. T. Co. is not engaged in any way in the tobacco war in Ky.; that she only buys in the Burley and Green River districts and that there has been no disorder in the Burley district, and very little in the Green River district, and that there is no contest between it and the growers in these districts, and that where she buys the most of her tobacco they have the least trouble, for since she entered the field 10 years ago, she has gradually advanced prices. Peace, peace, peace, be still! until we hear from the A. T. Co., about the disorder, anarchy and lawlessness in the other districts, where the Imperial Tobacco Co., The American Snuff Co. and the Reggie buyers are buying. Now, in this statement in the World, the A. T. Co. is simply wiping one leg on the other for the A. T. Co., the Imperial Co., the British American Co., Continental and American Snuff Co., are all different organizations, but they are virtually one company, for the A. T. Co. holds the majority of stock in all of them, and not only controls them but virtually controls 35 per cent of the so called Independent Co.; and as to the trend of prices being upward since the A. T. Co. entered the field, that is not true, for her agents and brokers have always been bears on the market and have never paid fair prices except when forced by some unnatural agency, and have contended that five cents per pound was all tobacco was worth and 75 cents per day was a good price for a laborer in the tobacco patch, and threatened that if they did not sell to them at prices offered that later they would make them haul it at a lower price, as there was no one else to buy it; also they threatened if they cannot buy at their prices that they will buy land and raise their own tobacco but that is only a bluff. I would like to see them with a million acres on hand, full of worms and suckers and hands go on a strike a few days would fix it, and I doubt if there is a State in the Union that would permit them to buy the amount of land needed, and if they did, it would be worn out in three years and they would have to buy again.

Buying lands by corporations is not a new idea by any means, but when bought it will be bought after a few more special privileges are granted to national banks to take mortgages on farms and an asset currency bill is passed by Congress then mortgages will be taken on farms and then currency will be issued on these mortgage notes to loan on other farms, and then when conditions are just right payment will be demanded and mortgages foreclosed and no one to buy, but corporations, and that is the only way the A. T. Co. will buy land, and that is one reason why they want to buy your tobacco at low prices. It widens the gap between and brings about conditions desired. He who controls your living controls your life; and it is the ambition of Mr. A. T. Co. to control the tobacco market of the world and control the production of tobacco, and he does not hesitate to tell how he will do it, by fixing price for both consumer and grower.

Now, the great mass of people are affected by such conditions and ought to be interested in them, and if you are interested and opposed to the domination of these great monopolies, we ask you one and all to help us in this fight against monopoly and against their control of our living, and then they cannot control our lives and widen the gap between the rich and the poor. Will you submit to this? Your action will determine.

J. W. KENNEDY.

Neighborhood Favorite.

Mrs. E. D. Charles, of Harbor, Maine, speaking of Electric Bitters, says: "It is a neighborhood favorite here with us." It deserves to be a favorite everywhere. It gives quick relief in dyspepsia, liver complaint, kidney derangement, malnutrition, nervousness, weakness and general debility. Its action on the blood, as a thorough purifier makes it especially useful as a spring medicine. This grand alterative tonic is sold under guarantee at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger. 50c.

[Lawrenceburg Register.]

The barn and corn cribs belonging to Jacob Dils of Manchester township were mysteriously destroyed by fire at noon of Saturday, together with all of their contents, amounting to hundreds of dollars, only partially insured. The origin of the fire is involved in mystery. Mr. Dils and his farm hand, neither of whom smokes, had come in from work, fed their team and gone into dinner. While engaged in their repast, they discovered the fire under such headway that nothing was saved, one horse being seriously burned. It is suspicioned by some that the fire was intended for the barn of August Leiffier, who had considerable tobacco for sale.

J. F. Blyth is again in full charge as superintendent of the county infirmary, to which place he moved last week. This is the third time that Mr. Blyth has been given that position, which he has in each instance operated in an economical manner.

At this season of the year when every one wants a new calendar for 1908, it may interest readers to know that if they have an old one of either the years 1812, 1840, 1868, 1896 around the house it will do just as well; also if they will save their 1908 calendars they can be used again in 1926, 1964, and so on up. This goes to show that the calendar, like history, repeats itself.

Easter will be observed this year on April 19, the latest that it has come for a century or more. The date of the great Christian feast day is determined as the first Sunday after the first full moon which happens upon or next after March 21, so that the day may be as early as March 21 or as late as April 25. This year the full moon happens April 16th and the next Sunday is the 19th.

Some patrons of rural delivery place loose coins in their boxes each time they desire to dispatch letters instead of supplying themselves with postage in advance of their needs. The practice imposes undue hardship on rural carriers in removing loose coins from boxes and delays them on the service of their routes. Postmasters, therefore, urgently request that patrons of rural delivery provide themselves and keep on hand a supply of stamps consistent with and in advance of their needs. It is also very desirable that rural patrons place in their mail boxes small, detachable cups of wood or tin in which to place coins, when necessary, in purchasing supplies of stamps.

In renewing his subscription to the RECORDER, Mr. J. L. Rouse, of Spring Place, Ga., says: "Please tell the good people of Boone county that we are still living at Spring Place, Ga., and would like to have any, who will, come down and see us. We have had a mild winter—cabbage and turnips are green in the gardens. Health is good. We have one of the best climates in the U. S.—never too hot or cold. Our country is prospering—real estate has advanced at least 30 per cent since I came south. Our county has established two banks in the last three years and they passed through the panic without any trouble. With best wishes for the RECORDER and its readers, &c."

To Covington In A 'Mobile.

It is altogether probable that an automobile line between Burlington and Covington will be in operation before the close of this year. The conversion of the Burlington and Erlanger star route into a delivery route is interfering with passenger travel on the mail wagon to such an extent that in a few months it will haul very few if any people between Burlington and Erlanger, on account of the time required to make the trip being increased considerably by the frequent stops at mail boxes. The scheme is to make two trips daily from Burlington to Covington with a vehicle that will accommodate several passengers and a reasonable amount of freight. For a long time the Covington merchants have been hoping that this territory would be provided with rapid transit to their advantage, and it is believed that they will lend a helping hand towards putting in an automobile line that will run to their doors and stop. A good machine would carry a large number of people each week, and the chances are about five to one that the enterprise would pay a good per cent on the investment. Automobile lines are paying in many parts of the country, and it looks like conditions are very favorable to one between Burlington and Covington.

Your Duty to Others.

We must all realize that this life is full of sorrow, and if you personally have had the good luck to escape your share of it you are a very fortunate person. But do not, on that account, allow yourself to grow cold-hearted and unsympathetic to others. Those poor others! Their lot is often so hard—so lonely—so full of misery. We are here to "heal the wounds and bind the broken-heart;" and the only way we can do this is by being kind, loving and sympathetic. A few words of love will do more to help a sufferer than money sometimes, says the New York Weekly. For heart sickness is much harder to help than hunger and poverty. Show interest in others; try to help them; go out of your way to lighten the burden of the heavily laden. Do not hesitate to whisper your kindly thoughts in their ears. Don't pass by on the "other side;" if you are strong, then be merciful. Remember that we all look at life from a different standpoint, and what seems to you may appear like a grain of mustard seed in your path to you is an almost insurmountable obstacle to your weaker sister. The more she shrinks the more necessity for you to step in and help her on her way with genuine sympathy and loving sisterly words and acts.

College Glee Clubs.

President Hall of Clark university should cultivate a broader sense of humor. He refers to the repertoire of the average college glee club as infantile. To be sure, he is not far out of the way in his description. That is precisely why they are sung, says Boston Advertiser. The average youth at an American college loves to disport himself, and his parents and other relatives are charmed by these indications of exuberant youth. It is true that the glee club concert does not appeal to all classes of music lovers. Some earnest students of harmony, if inveigled into a college concert, might demand their money back at the door. But then it may be said that probably Dr. Hall might be asked to give his opinion of popular songs of the day. What does he think of the ten "best sellers" at the music counters of our department stores? Are they marked by any deeper intellectuality or greater delicacy than the Folly-wolly-doodle or the Boola-boola class? The man who made that delightful declaration beginning "Let me write the songs of the people" would probably be tempted to renege if he were confronted with the latest evidences of popular taste in rag-time songs and sentimental mush at the present day.

The government of the Portuguese East African province of Mozambique is about to take measures for the promotion of the ostrich feather industry. Wild ostriches with fine black feathers are found in considerable numbers in the districts of Lourenco Marques and Inhambane, and a decree has been published forbidding the hunting of ostriches, as well as the taking of their eggs and the destruction of their nests. The sale of ostrich eggs or eggshells is also prohibited. It is said to be the intention of the government to start a large ostrich ranch and stock it with young native birds caught by officials detailed for that purpose.

Dr. Karl Peters at a recent public meeting in Berlin declared emphatically that the historic land of Ophir is located between the Zambesi and Limpopo rivers. He told his German audience how he has discovered many shafts of ancient gold mines, 500 temples, fortifications and other ruins of Phoenician origin. Dr. Peters affirms that the coins recently unearthed in Mashonaland belong undoubtedly to the time of King Solomon. His opinion is that no other part of Africa could have exported the ivory, silver and precious stones which are recorded as coming from Ophir.

Albert Ware Paine, who died a few days ago at Bangor, Me., at the age of 95, was most widely known as the author of the law giving to the accused in criminal cases the right to testify in his own behalf. This law he drafted half a century ago, and after many rebuffs succeeded in having it enacted by the Maine legislature in 1864. It was the first law of the kind anywhere and soon the whole civilized world followed Maine's example in adopting it.

Although the railroads of this country were not engaged in actual war they managed last year to kill 5,000 persons and to injure 76,286. What would happen if they should get mad some time and start out to do some real slaughtering?

HUGHES' PLATFORM

NEW YORK GOVERNOR'S VIEWS ON NATIONAL ISSUES.

TRIBUTE TO ROOSEVELT

New York. — Gov. Charles E. Hughes, whose nomination for the presidency by the Republican national convention in Chicago next June is being urged by the New York county committee and other Republican county committees in New York state, has made open declaration of his views of national issues and principles.

Until Friday night, when he was welcomed by scores of well-known Republicans at a reception tendered him at the Republican club, Gov. Hughes has maintained silence on all questions affecting the country and the definition of his position on federal issues has consequently been expectantly awaited.

Gov. Hughes' Address.

First acknowledging the high honor paid him by the club, and reviewing briefly the record and policies of the Republican party, Gov. Hughes had this to say of President Roosevelt's administration:

"We are contemplating a new administration at the close of one which to a degree almost unparalleled has impressed the popular imagination and won the confidence of the people. The country is under lasting obligation to President Roosevelt for his vigorous opposition to abuses and for the strong impulse he has given to movements for their correction. Differences of opinion now as always exist with regard to the best means of solving some of the extremely difficult problems that are presented. But those who earnestly desire progress and the establishment of our security on its necessary foundation of fair dealing and recognition of equal rights, appreciate the great service he has rendered and the fundamental importance of the purposes he has had in view. We shall have in the next campaign a notable vantage ground, gained through the general admiration of his strong personality and the popular appreciation of the intensity of his desire to promote the righteous conduct of affairs and the welfare of his fellow men."

Views on Many Topics.

The governor then denounced socialism as un-American, urged the necessity of stringent measures to prevent corrupt practices in elections, and, in relation to special privileges, declared there must be no encroachment on the common right for the purpose of serving the interests of the few at the expense of the many. He said the unlawful acquisition of property should be prevented or punished, but property lawfully acquired must be safeguarded; that the opportunities for labor should be protected and enlarged and the conditions of labor improved.

Of federal and state powers Gov. Hughes said:

"It must be remembered that an evil is not the proper subject of federal cognizance merely because it may exist in many states. All sorts of evils exist in many states which should be corrected by the exercise of local power, and they are not evils of federal concern, although they may be widespread.

"On the other hand it cannot be regarded as a policy of unwise centralization that, wherever there is a serious evil demanding governmental correction which afflicts interstate commerce and hence is beyond the control of the states, the power of congress should unhesitatingly be exercised."

The speaker said he did not believe in governmental ownership of railroads, but that regulation of interstate transportation was essential.

Trusts and Combinations.

Of trusts and combinations, the governor said:

"The Sherman anti-trust act should be clarified and made more explicit. The law may be made stronger and more effective by being made more definite. Sweeping condemnations, of uncertain meaning, do not aid but rather embarrass the prosecution of those who are guilty of pernicious practices. Combinations and practices in unreasonable restraint of trade and which menace the freedom of interstate commerce should be condemned in precise terms. At the same time provision may well be made for joint agreements, under proper circumstances, as to railroad rates, which should be subject to the approval of the interstate commerce commission."

SIX KILLED BY A CYCLONE

FATAL STORM RAVAGES STRIP OF COUNTRY IN MISSISSIPPI.

Much Damage Done to Property—Snow and Cold Prevail in the Northwest.

Wesson, Miss.—Six persons were killed outright by a cyclone which laid waste a strip of farming country three-quarters of a mile wide and several miles long just north of here Friday.

Brook Haven, Miss. — A cyclone is reported to have done damage over a territory of considerable extent north of here Friday. Wire communication to the north has been lost completely.

Jackson, Miss. — A message from Hazelhurst, Miss., reports considerable damage to property and some loss of life as a result of a tornado which passed a few miles south of that place Friday afternoon.

Messengers reached Hazelhurst late in the evening from the region swept by the storm in quest of physicians, all those available at that point going to the scene.

Kansas City, Mo. — Kansas Friday experienced the coldest weather of the winter. Snow and sleet storms prevailed generally, accompanied by a decided fall in temperature.

Omaha, Neb. — The snow storm which began at an early hour Friday morning by night developed into a blizzard, the first of the winter. Advices from various points in eastern Nebraska, western Iowa and eastern South Dakota show that the storm covers a wide territory. Sioux City reports a temperature of 5 above zero and a 30-mile wind from the north. Aside from the hardship it will cause among the poor and the suffering of stock, the snow is welcomed.

FATHER SLAYS CHILDREN.

Paret Fatally Shoots Three—Grudge Against His Wife.

Chicago.—William Meutsch, a carriage maker, 417 Armitage avenue, shot and killed his five-year-old daughter, Gertrude, fatally wounded Jennie, aged four, so that she died Friday, and probably fatally shot William, Jr., aged two, in the shop beneath his home. The crime, coolly executed by the man, according to the police, startled the veteran officers who responded to the call and found the bodies of the dead and dying children in the house. Meutsch calmly told the police he had killed the children as his wife would be placed in the position of a woman whose husband will be hanged. He told Capt. Harding of the Attrill street station Friday that he was a deeply wronged man and that his wife was guilty of offenses warranted to secure him a divorce.

Nine Miners Are Killed.

Charleston, W. Va.—Nine miners met sudden death in the New River colliery, 45 miles from here, near Hawk's Nest, Thursday afternoon in an explosion that partly wrecked the mine. Twenty-five men were in the mine at the time of the explosion, and eight of the nine dead were instantly killed. The others escaped with only slight injuries. John Bowles, who was blown down the incline, was the only man not instantly killed.

Minnesota Town Wiped Out.

Albert Lea, Minn.—Fire early Thursday destroyed Twin Lakes, a village situated on the Minneapolis & St. Louis road, nine miles southwest of here. Not a structure was left standing and almost the entire population, numbering over 200, are homeless as a result. The village has no fire fighting apparatus.

Americans Buy Valued Relics.

Lansing, Mich.—A proposal for statewide liquor prohibition was rejected Thursday in the constitutional convention by a vote of 55 to 39.

FLEET ENTERS THE STRAIT.

Battleships Anchor for the Night in Possession Bay.

Punta Arenas, Strait of Magellan. —A wireless message was received here Friday evening that the American battleship fleet, which passed Point Dungeness and entered the Strait of Magellan at two o'clock in the afternoon, would anchor for the night in Possession bay and arrive at Punta Arenas at noon Saturday.

Possession bay is some 20 miles westward of Point Dungeness and about five miles from the entrance to the first narrows, and affords good anchorage.

Rear Admiral Evans' fleet now enters upon one of the most difficult parts of its trip to the Pacific, the navigation of the eastern part of the Strait of Magellan.

The first hundred miles of the strait are comparatively uninteresting. The land on either side is low and covered with grass, with scarcely a tree to be seen for the entire distance to Cape Negro. Throughout this stretch the depth of the water rarely exceeds 200 feet, there are many banks and shoals and the tidal streams are rapid, the tide rising from 36 to 44 feet.

Through the first and second narrows the tidal stream runs straight, but at each entrance to these narrows the volume of water, which has been pent up between such narrow walls, naturally seeks to spread itself out and consequently causes a strong set towards the banks of either side of the end towards which the stream is running, and a corresponding indraught at the other end.

LOOT OF OLD ROBBERY FOUND.

Stolen Bricks of Bullion Recovered When Saloon Burns.

Omaha, Neb.—Superintendent Patterson of the Pacific Express company returned to Omaha from Sidney, Neb., Thursday, bringing with him two large bricks of bullion, believed to represent part of the loot of a robbery of the company's office in Sidney, Neb., in March, 1880.

The metal was found buried in the debris of a saloon which burned two weeks ago. The robbery was the boldest of its kind ever pulled off in the west and the bullion, which had been received that day by stage from the Black Hills, was valued at $127,000.

One of the bricks was sold to the Denver mint a year after the robbery. Sheriff McCarthy, who then owned the saloon which burned recently, was believed to be the leader of the robber band, but the express company was unable to secure his indictment. His brother was hanged later by vigilantes. McCarthy has been dead several years.

DIES IN FRAT HOUSE FIRE.

Minneapolis Boy Burned to Death at Cornell University.

Ithaca, N. Y.—From the ruins of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity house at Cornell university, which burned Friday, were taken the charred remains of J. S. Klehle, a junior in mechanical engineering.

It is supposed that Klehle was on his way to an upper floor to save "Ted" Seelye of the Cornell Cross Country team, who was known to be an occupant of a room there. Seelye, scantily clothed, escaped to a balcony porch and down a ladder. Klehle was from Minneapolis.

The loss through the burning of the fraternity house is $25,000.

Marshal Halstead is Dead.

Cincinnati.—Marshal Halstead, former United States consul at Birmingham, England, died at nine o'clock Wednesday night at the German Deaconess hospital here, following an operation for appendicitis. The deceased was a son of Murat Halstead, the well-known journalist and author. He was 45 years of age.

Massachusetts Speaker Indicted.

Salem, Mass.—Speaker John N. Cole of the Massachusetts house of representatives, whose home is at Andover, and who represented the Eighth Essex district for seven years, was indicted Friday by the Essex county grand jury on a charge of violating the public statutes in requesting a reduced rate of fare on the Boston & Maine railroad for a large number of persons. The indictment is in 123 counts, and the statute provides a penalty in each case of a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $1,000.

ANOTHER MORSE BANK SHUT

NEW AMSTERDAM NATIONAL IS CLOSED BY COMPTROLLER.

President Kinsman Says Depositors Will Lose Nothing and Stockholders Will Get Dividend.

New York.—The New Amsterdam National bank, capitalized at $1,000,000 and situated at Broadway and Thirty-ninth street, was closed by the order of the comptroller of the currency Wednesday night and National Bank Examiner Charles A. Hanna was placed in charge.

The institution's liabilities are placed at $4,482,016, of which $2,065,272.49 are due depositors. The bank's officers assert that not only will every depositor be paid in full, but the stockholders will receive a substantial dividend.

The New Amsterdam National was formerly one of the chief links in the chain of banks established by Charles W. Morse. President Frank W. Kinsman, Jr., declared, in a statement issued Wednesday night, that "the closing of the National Bank of North America, attracting renewed attention to the interests which had previously dominated both institutions in their past administrations, started fresh reports of an exaggerated and sensational nature which necessitated the liquidation of the bank." The institution occupied quarters in the Metropolitan Opera house, in the heart of the uptown theatrical district and numbered among its clientele many of those prominent on the stage.

About a year ago the New Amsterdam underwent a reorganization because of a falling off in its business and Frank W. Kinsman, Jr., was elected president. Every effort was made to rehabilitate the institution. The recent panic was not without its effect, though the bank weathered the storm and succeeded in reducing its clearing house certificates from $1,705,000 to $300,000.

President D. A. Sullivan of the Mechanics' and Tradera' bank announced shortly after midnight Wednesday night that the institution would not open its doors Thursday. This decision was reached at a meeting of the board of directors lasting four hours. In a statement issued after the meeting the directors declared the bank solvent, but the state of the cash resources made it appear inadvisable for the bank to continue business.

New York. — The Oriental bank, on which a run of depositors was started Thursday, did not open for business Friday. A notice was posted on its doors announcing that the institution was closed by order of the state superintendent of banks. The Oriental is a state bank having a capital stock of $750,000.

DISASTROUS CHICAGO FIRE.

Loss of $1,700,000 Caused by Blaze in Loop District.

Chicago.—Fire in the loop district of Chicago Tuesday evening did about $1,700,000 damage and interrupted transportation for hours. The flames broke out in the wall paper house of Alfred Peats & Co., on Wabash avenue between Madison and Monroe streets, and in a short time the entire building was like a furnace. The fire quickly jumped a narrow alley in the rear and attacked the big wholesale millinery establishment of Edson Keith & Co. at 132 Michigan avenue. The four upper floors of the Keith building were gutted and only by hard work were several other large millinery houses saved. Meanwhile on Wabash avenue the conflagration spread south to the building occupied by John A. Colby & Sons, furniture, and that firm and a dozen others sustained heavy losses. The fire lasted all night and was one of the most disastrous in this city since 1874.

Kansas City, Mo.—Fire of unknown origin which started in the canning department on the second floor of one of the twin main buildings of the $27,000,000 packing plant of Nelson Morris & Co. on the Kaw river in Kansas City, Kan., Tuesday night, threatened destruction of the entire plant and caused loss estimated at half a million dollars before it was controlled.

Shipwrecked Crew Rescued.

Nantucket, Mass.—After a struggle of five hours against intense cold and a turbulent sea, the life savers of the Cosiata station rescued the crew of the Newport brigantine Fredericka Schepp, which was wrecked Thursday on the north side of Coatue beach. Mrs. Charles Oversen, wife of the captain, and her year-old baby, who were on board, were also taken off the stranded vessel.

Famine in North Lapland.

Stockholm.—Serious famine is prevalent in the iron district of northern Lapland. According to a dispatch to Dagens Nyhester, from Kiruna, the inhabitants in the parish of Veihelmina have gone to the extreme of slaughtering dogs and cats for food to prevent starving to death.

Doctor Dies of Blood Poisoning.

Omaha, Neb.—Dr. Andrew W. Riley, professor of practice of medicine of Creighton Medical college, died Friday of blood poisoning caused by infection received from an erysipelas patient. He was 49 years old.

Three Boys Are Drowned.

Nyack, N. Y.—While walking on the thin ice which had formed in the Hudson off this place Friday, Evans Steele, aged 21; Hans Kraft, 12, and Harold Dixon, 11, broke through and were drowned.

THIRTY YEARS OF IT.

A Fearfully Long Siege of Daily Pain and Misery.

Charles Von Soehnen of 319 A St., Colfax, Wash., says: "For at least thirty years I suffered with kidney troubles, and the attacks laid me up for days at a time with pain in the back and rheumatism. When I was up and around sharp twinges caught me, and for fifteen years the frequent passages of kidney secretions annoyed me. But Doan's Kidney Pills have given me almost entire freedom from this trouble and I cannot speak too highly in their praise."

The athletic son wrote home from college as follows:

"Dear Pop: Watch the papers. Next week I distinguish myself by throwing the hammer."

And the irate old gentleman stamped his gouty foot and replied:

"I don't care to read any such disgraceful antics in the paper. If you break any windows you'll have to pay for them yourself."

A Remedy for Neuralgia or Pain in the Nerves.

For neuralgia and sciatica Sloan's Liniment has no equal. It has a powerfully sedative effect on the nerves—penetrates without rubbing and gives immediate relief from pain—quickens the circulation of the blood and gives a pleasant sensation of comfort and warmth.

"For three years I suffered with neuralgia in the head and jaws," writes J. P. Hubbard, of Marietta, S. C., "and had almost decided to have three of my teeth pulled, when a friend recommended me to buy a 25 cent bottle of Sloan's Liniment. I did so and experienced immediate relief, and I kept on using it until the neuralgia was entirely cured. I will never be without a bottle of Sloan's Liniment in my house again. I use it also for insect bites and sore throat, and I can cheerfully recommend it to any one who suffers from any of the ills I have mentioned."

Laugh and Grow Fat; No.

There is nothing in the maxim "laugh and grow fat" or else the jokesmiths fail to grow mirthful over their own merrymaking.

Great humorists seldom are fat. F. P. Dunne is the heaviest, weighing about 160 pounds. The weight of others living is: Mark Twain, 150 pounds; George Ade, 147; Jerome K. Jerome, 143, and W. W. Jacobs, 132. O. Henry is really a great humorist, but he is in the 180-pound class.—Home Magazine.

PANTRY CLEANED

A Way Some People Have.

A doctor said:—

"Before marriage my wife observed in summer and country homes, coming in touch with families of varied means, culture, tastes and discriminating tendencies, that the families using Postum seemed to average better than those using coffee.

"When we were married two years ago, Postum was among our first order of groceries. We also put in some coffee and tea, for guests, but after both had stood around the pantry about a year untouched, they were thrown away, and Postum used only.

"Up to the age of 28 I had been accustomed to drink coffee as a routine habit and suffered constantly from indigestion and all its relative disorders. Since using Postum all the old complaints have completely left me and I sometimes wonder if I ever had them."

PRESIDENT URGES NEW LEGISLATION IN HOT MESSAGE

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY LAW

Chief Executive Declares Act Needs Immediate Revision—Righting of Injunction Abuses Is Urged.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:—The recent decision of the Supreme Court in the employers' liability act, the experience of the Interstate Commerce Commission and of the Department of Justice in enforcing the interstate commerce and antitrust laws, and the grave significant attitude toward the law, and its administration recently adopted by certain heads of great corporations, render it desirable that there should be additional legislation as regards certain of the relations between labor and capital, and between the great corporations and the public.

The supreme court has decided the employers' liability act to be unconstitutional because its terms apply to employes engaged wholly in intrastate commerce as well as to employes engaged in interstate commerce. By a substantial majority the court holds that the congress has power to act in the matter, the question in so far as interstate commerce is concerned.

As regards the employers' liability law, I advocate its immediate reenactment, limiting its scope so that it can apply only to the class of cases as to which the court says it can constitutionally apply, but strengthening its provisions within this scope. Interstate employment being thus covered by an adequate national law, the field will be occupied and congress will be left to the action of the several states. With this clear definition of responsibility the states will be completely active to the performance of their duty within their own limits, and the question of the importance of the subject demands.

Compensation for Employes Hurt in Government Service

I also very urgently advise that a comprehensive act be passed providing for compensation by the government to all employes injured in the government service. Under the present law an injured workman in the employ of the government has no remedy, and the entire burden of the accident falls on the hapless man, his wife, and his little children. This is an outrage. It is a matter of humiliation to the nation that there should be no law to which a poor man can go to obtain relief, or to atone for cruel misfortune. It comes upon a man through no fault of his own while faithfully serving the public. In no other prominent industrial country in the world could such gross injustice occur; for almost all civilized nations have enacted legislation providing for the general recognition of the principle which places the entire trade risk for industrial accidents, occurring in the course of work due to willful misconduct by the employe, on the industry as represented by the employer, which in this case is the government. In all these countries the principle applied to the government is just as much as to the private employer. Under no circumstances should the injured employe in any government service be required to bring suit against the government, nor should there be the requirement that he show that the accident occurred neglience in some form on the part of the government should be shown. Our proposition is not to confer a right of action upon the government employe, but to set aside the existing denial of right of action against injuries received in the course of his employment. The burden of the trade accidents in the industry in which injured in the natural course of his labor. The rates of compensation and the conditions of its payment should be specified in the law, and the machinery for determining the amount to be paid should in each case be provided in such manner that the employe is properly represented and that compensation is not delayed when the compensation should be paid automatically, while the application of the law in the first instance should be vested in the department of commerce and labor. The law should apply to all laborers, mechanics, and other civilian employes of the government of the United States, including those in the service of the Panama canal commission and of the territorial governments.

The same broad principles which govern the action of the government should ultimately be made applicable to all private employers. Where the national government has the power it should enact laws to this effect. Where the power is lacking the several states should enact the laws. It is to be observed that an employers' liability law does not work in favor of the employe as against the employer. It merely throws upon the employer the burden of accident insurance in behalf of the employe, which burden it properly should bear either to bear or to distribute through insurance the loss from accidents to which it does not distributed, but which, if undistributed, bears with crushing severity upon the unfortunate victim of accident. In theory, if wages were always freely and fairly adjusted, they would always allow for an allowance against the risk of injury, just as certainly as the rate of interest for money loaned is made to allow for the insurance against the risk of loss. In theory, if employes were all experienced business men, they would always insist that the risk of injury which is received because of the employment of injury to or loss of life insurance. But as a matter of fact, it is not practical to expect that this will be done for the great majority of cases. An employers' liability law makes it certain that it will be done, in effect, by the employer, and it does not really impose no real additional burden upon him.

There is a special bill to which I call your attention. Secretary Taft has recently recommended the immediate passage of a law providing for compensation to employes of the government injured in the work of the Isthmian canal, and that $100,000 be appropriated for this purpose each year. I earnestly hope this will be done, and that a special bill be passed covering the case of Yardmaster Banton, who was injured nearly two years ago while doing his duty. He is now helpless to support his wife and his three little boys.

I again call your attention to the need of action in connection with the present abuse of injunctions in labor cases. As regards the rights and wrongs of labor and capital, from blacklisting to boycotting, the whole subject is covered in admirable fashion in the report of the Anthracite Coal Strike commission, which report should serve as a chart for the guidance of both legislative and executive officers. As regards injunctions, I can do little but repeat what I have said in my last message to the congress. Even though it were possible, it should not undertake to abolish the use of the process of injunction. It is necessary in order that the courts may maintain their proper dignity and in order that they may in effective manner check disorder and violence. The judge who uses it cautiously and conservatively, but who, when the need arises, uses it fearlessly, confers the greatest service upon our people, and his preeminent usefulness as a public servant should be heartily recognized. But there is no question in my mind that it has sometimes been used needlessly and unjustly, and that some of the injunctions issued inflict grave and occasionally irreparable wrong upon those enjoined.

It is all wrong to use the injunction to prevent the entirely proper and legitimate actions of labor organizations in their struggle for industrial betterment, or under the guise of protecting property-rights unwarranted steps are taken in the fundamental rights of the individual. It is a farce to treat as property rights only the right and the necessity of organized effort on the part of wage-earners and yet by injunctive process to forbid peaceful agitation to accomplish the lawful objects for which they are organized and upon which their success depends. It is equally that the punishment for the violation of an injunction must be made certain and effective, necessarily be summary and without the intervention of a jury unless in cases of serious doubt as to whether a technical, or a flagrant violation has been committed. Finally, and most important, the reason why the process should be surrounded with safeguards designed to protect individuals against being enjoined from exercising their proper rights, is because the notice should be given the adverse party.

This matter is daily becoming of graver importance, and I do not see how I can possibly recommend that the congress give careful consideration to the subject. If some way of expediting the abuses is not found the feeling of indignation against them among large numbers of our citizens will tend to grow so profound as to produce a revolt against the whole use of the process of injunction. The ultra-conservatives who quite rightly object to the abuses will do well to remember that if the popular feeling becomes strong many of those whom they rely to defend them will be the first to turn against them. Often only property and not a cord to trust to anything save the spirit of justice and fair play; for those very people who, from fear, or from self interest, defend all the abuses committed by capital and pose as the champions of property rights, are the ones who they think their interest changes, take the lead in flying in the face of the law, in contempt and defiance of the strong public feeling which has been aroused by endeavoring, for instance, effectively to punish the malefactors of great wealth who Dairymen who have been selling butter and milk in Covington are having their troubles by reason of the city veterinary condemning large numbers of their cows because of the animals not standing the tuberculosis test. In some instances whole dairies are wiped out by the inspector. Strange to relate it is said the officer has been known to eat freely of the milk and butter the product of the condemned cows after the test had been made.

The Eldorado (Kan.) Republican relates an interesting experience of a Texas farmer as a proof of the great value of seed selection. He selected seed from red ears with red husks and planted remote from other corn. Each year, selecting the reddest ears for seed, he has evolved a distinct species of corn that not only has red shucks, but has red cobs, red tassels and red stalks. The corn seems to possess no special value aside from its beauty, it is especially pretty when growing, but it shows what great possibilities lie in seed selection. We seem to be just beginning to comprehend the possibilities at our command.

It is now a scientifically proved fact, says the Paris Menestrel, that music exercises a great influence on the growth of the hair. It is with good reason that great musicians, such as Paganini, Liszt and Paderwiski, are represented with a growth of hair which Absalom might have envied. Science has proved that stringed instruments have a favorable influence on the growth of the hair, while brass instruments act in the opposite direction. Every one has probably observed that a bald violinist is as rare as a bald horn player is common. Wood instruments, such as the flute, seem to have no pronounced influence either way. The general publication of the above information will, no doubt, result in a tremendous increase in the number of violinists.

Mr. Jno. A. Spoor, President of the Union Stock Yards of Chicago, in reviewing the live stock market of that city, gives some interesting figures about the magnitude of that industry. He states that the total receipts of live stock at that market during the year 1907, aggregated 15,761,479 head, including cattle, hogs, sheep and horses. For these animals the shippers were paid the enormous sum of $326,540,600. Since 1900 an average of over fifteen million animals have been sold in that market every year at an average value of over $300,000,000. More than a million dollars a day is paid out for every working day of the year. These figures only represent the live stock market and does not refer to, or include the great packing houses.

Between 1880 and 1900 negro illiteracy in Kentucky diminished 30.3 per cent; in the same time white illiteracy decreased 9.1 per cent. Percentage of illiteracy of total voting population 18.8; rank of Kentucky on this basis 38; percentage of illiteracy of white voters 13.9; rank of Kentucky on this basis 46; percentage of illiteracy of native white voters of native parentage 15.5; rank of of Kentucky on this basis 49. There are thirty-eight counties in Kentucky in which the percentage of illiterate white voters is 20 or more, in eight of these the percentage is 30 or more, and in three it is 35. In some of these counties, therefore, every fifth white voter, in others every fourth white voter, and in some every third white voter, as he steps into the voting booth, must look at the picture to know how to vote.

By indulging in a little comparison we find the following facts: Kentucky spends about 2¼ million dollars on her schools annually; Illinois, 21 millions; Massachusetts, 16½ millions; Indiana, Minnesota, Missouri and California each from 8 to 10 millions. This is equal to about $8.50 per child in Kentucky based upon the average attendance; about $42 per child in California and Massachusetts; and in the other states named, from $21 to $30 per child. The average child in Kentucky gets about 70 days of schooling per year; while the other states give from 100 days in some to 146 days in Massachusetts. What are the results obtained? In Kentucky 14.3 per cent of her native born white male adults are illiterates, while in the other states named it ranges from 4.4 per cent down to 1 per cent for Minnesota and 9 per cent for Massachusetts.

FATE OF AN INDIAN WIZARD.

(Winnepeg Cor. New York Times)

Carrying the curse of a wizard, hated by men of his blood, and an outcast like the Ishmaelite of old, a red man has died in the wilderness of the Yukon by the hand of one of his kind. Such is the tale of murder which mail advice brings from the Upper Pelly district. The story is that the wizard, so called, had incurred the hatred of the Pelly Indians, and the tribes believed he was possessed of a devil, a superstition common among the Indians of Canada's interland.

He had come to them many moons ago from the Mackenzie side of the Pelly River and had followed them from place to place until his ways had seemed to bring them bad luck in their hunting, trading and domestic affairs.

Bob Henderson, who arrived recently at Dawson from the Pelly district, brought the story, and says it was told to the whites by an aged squaw, who said the devil man had incurred the enmity of one of the Pelly tribesmen, and that the Pelly man murdered the wizard. The murder was committed near the Ross River, a district now inaccessible, owing to winter. The Indians seemed to be more pleased than displeased over the murder, and reported the affair as a novelty rather than from a desire to have the slayer brought to justi...

Heaves Caused by Hay.

A noted veterinarian of Canada says that one full feed per day of hay is enough for a horse; that because the work horses are busy in crop time they only get one full feed of hay every twenty-four hours, but in the winter are frequently allowed to stand and eat hay all day. He says that a horse to be in perfect health should have the stomach emptied of the previous meal for two or three hours before he is given another. If such is not the case, digestion will not take place in a perfect manner, and disease is likely to result. There is a remarkable sympathy between the stomach and the lungs, because of the fact that the same nerve trunk supplies nerve force to both organs. When the stomach is deranged from improper feeding the lungs are liable to become sympathetically affected and heaves often result. Care should also be taken that a horse should be fed no dusty or musty hay. This dust is as light as air, and the horse in breathing draws it right into the lung tissue with every breath, and this substance, being an irritant, is very prone to develop the heaves. If no better hay can be obtained, the dust should be laid by sprinkling with water, when the horse will not breathe it, but will be swallowed with his feed and probably do him no harm; but when at all possible only bright, clean hay, free from dust, should be fed to horses. Again no horse is in fit condition for active exercise with a stomach distended with hay, because the stomach, situated as it is right behind the lung space, if full, bulges forward into the chest to such an extent that the lungs have not room to properly expand, and cannot perform their functions properly; and anything that interferes with the function of the lungs predisposes to heaves. In many cases if farmers would feed one-third less hay to idle horses in the winter months they would come out in the spring in better condition.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has compiled a table showing in detail our trade with Germany for the months of July, August, September, and October, 1907, as compared with corresponding months of 1906. While the figures show that the total of our exports to Germany have increased, it also develops a significant fact in which our farmers are directly interested; and that is that the Germans are buying less of our meat and meat products than they did a year ago. For instance, in the four months named, we sold them in 1906, over three million pounds more beef than we did in the same months in 1907. In tallow we lost over two million pounds, canned beef over 300,000 pounds, bacon, over one and a half million pounds, hams, nearly 200,000 pounds, lard about 25 million pounds. Who is to blame for this loss of trade? If it is our laws, they should be remedied.

Another item in this table is significant, we find that during these four months in 1907, the Germans took nearly four million pounds more oleomargarine than they did in the corresponding months of 1906. Probably the Germans haven't got an oleo law like ours, and the manufacturers are dumping this stuff on to our Dutch friends as butter.

Easter came on the 25th of April in 1886, the latest date on which it can appear, and it will not appear on that date again until 1943, on which date it has not come since 1734. The earliest date on which Easter comes is March 22d, 1818, and will not come on that date again until the year 2000. I will save up a basket of eggs this summer for the RECORDER force and have them ready for a present that year. The earliest and latest date only come once in each century, some of the centuries pass without the earlist or latest appearing.

His Valentine

I am a sunbeam, you are a child;
All melting and sweet is the weather;
A breeze stirs the bronze of your hair,
warm and wild,
And mingles our treasures together.

I fly from you over the trees' jeweled heights;
You follow with limpid soft laughter,
And catch with your baby hands leaf filtered lights—
I fly, and you ever come after!

I am yours so divinely—yet yours not at all
I pine for your lips, moist and glowing.
You cry as I leave you at sable nightfall,
And both are undone at the going.

But when all is still and in slumber you lie,
A-dream with our innocent blisses,
I come in a moonbeam, and lingering by,
I cover your red mouth with kisses.

So if you be far or if you be near,
I always must hover above you;
Of all the world's guerdon to me the most dear—
I love you—I love you—I love you!
—Genevieve Farnell.

Tactics of the Little Pagan God

THOUGH the little pagan god who nearly always accompanies St. Valentine on February 14 has the same purpose wherever he goes, yet he does not everywhere employ the same methods for its accomplishment. His tactics differ in different places. He is as versatile as he is capricious. In New York city he still finds a way to mylady's heart by going to her in a dainty bit of pasteboard, tissue paper, tinsel and paint, all tucked way in a scented envelope. In Berlin he has recently found a new means of wounding his victims in the "cooing postals," which are so constructed that when squeezed they will imitate the plaintive note of a dove. In more prosaic London cupid has abandoned the postman for the telephone, and the up-to-date London lover no longer sends his sweetheart an ardent message by letter, but recites it over the wire into her very ear.

Yet the most picturesque St. Valentine day customs are not to be found in the big cities, but in out-of-the-way regions, where human nature retains much of its old-time simplicity. In some of the rural villages of England, for example, the season is observed in much the same way as in the time of Queen Elizabeth and many a quaint superstition still survives.

In remote villages of Derbyshire the custom still prevails of maidens looking out of their windows in the early morn of St. Valentine's day to learn who their lovers may be. Every girl who wants to get married is supposed to jump out of bed just at daybreak and dressing hastily open a wondow facing the street. There she must wait until some man passes by, who tips his hat and says to her: "Good-morrow, 'tis St. Valentine's day." In reply she says: "Good-morrow, sir, I'll be your valentine." As a usual thing, however, the passerby is not a stranger. A Derbyshire girl usually keeps the shutters closed until through some crevice in them she espies the man she wants.

Of all observances, however, the most popular in England is that best known as "sweeping the girls." If a girl is not kissed by an admirer before nine o'clock on St. Valentine's morning she is said to be "dusty." Accordingly all the young men of the neighborhood on learning that some young woman has remained unkissed past the fatal hour make an attack on her house with brooms, and after sweeping her thoroughly, each of her callers kisses her.

The French province of Lorraine has a custom somewhat similar, which is called "beating the ladies." It dates back to the sixteenth century. On St. Valentine's morning every marriageable daughter is expected to arise at daybreak and bake a heart-shaped cake for the first young man who may come for it. If she should oversleep, however, and her lover should call to find her all unmindful of him and the occasion which brought him to her door then his rivals are privileged to punish her in the following fashion: Armed with wisps of hay they may invade her room and, compelling her to get up, they may administer a not especially ungentle thrashing.

In the county of Norfolk, England, there still survives a custom which recalls the times when St. Valentine's day was observed throughout Great Britain and the continent by the presentation of substantial gifts. In this way not only lovers remembered their mistresses, but parents their children, husbands their wives, and in the merry days of Charles II. husbands gave presents to other men's wives.

Among the young women of Devonshire the belief still lingers that they are able to learn who their future husbands will be if they go through a certain peculiar formula shortly after the midnight that ushers in St. Valentine's day. Each maiden should go alone to the porch of the village church and there wait until 12:30 a. m. Then as the bell strikes the half hour she should return home scattering hempseed in her path and repeating:

"Hempseed I sow, hempseed I mow,
He that will my true love be,
Come, rake this hempseed after me."

And if she is going to be married in the next year she will indeed see her lover behind her clad in a winding sheet and raking up the hempseed.

In many parts of Germany the children find St. Valentine's day a special occasion to obtain charity from young women, who cannot refuse them without being threatened with the fate of becoming old maids. In certain villages of Saxony little boys and girls go from house to house singing a song which has been translated as follows into English rhyme:

"God bless the baker,
If you'll be the giver,
I'll be the taker."

WOMAN'S PLACE IN COMMUNITY.

Dr. Edward Everett Hale on Their Work and Influence.

In his Monthly Talk in the Woman's Home Companion, Dr. Edward Everett Hale says:

"Will you please to remember that the bottom rock of American success is the habit or determination that every place, village, town, neighborhood, or whatever you call it, shall have home rule. If I and Mr. Goodchild want to have a road and a bridge which shall go back to the rhododendron swamp, we build the road and we build the bridge with such help as he can get from Mrs. Tucker or from Mr. Champlin, and we do not write to a sub-prefect, who writes to a prefect, who writes to an assistant commandant, who writes to an intendent, who writes to the secretary of engineers, who sends word to us from the seat of government whether we may build it. Life where you stand expresses the foundation principle, the subsoil, the hard pan, the bed rock of American life.

"Now, a very queer thing has developed in the evolution of this principle. It has proved that where the men of the country have been too busy, or have thought they were, to attend to their own affairs, the women have been able to attend to them better than the men do.

"Take this business which I have referred to, of a neighborhood library, feeding a region of not more than four or five thousand people. The affairs of that library, if they are well conducted, are conducted by the women of the neighborhood. They know what their children want; they know what their husbands need. And it is very fortunate for the neighborhood and the library that they can harness the horses and can drive themselves to the meetings of trustees and select the books and tell Miss Dorcas how many she may buy."

The Gentle Rebuff.

Robert W. Hebberd, New York's commissioner of charities, concluded an address at a recent philanthropic dinner in this way:

"Yes, immeasurable are the rebuffs that the helpers of the poor, the seekers after charity for their suffering brothers, undergo.

"A friend of mine, a Methodist minister in a small western town, told me the other day of his last rebuff, a not unkind one.

"Entering the office of the local weekly the minister said to the editor:

"'I am soliciting aid for a gentleman of refinement and intelligence who is in dire need of a little ready money, but who is far too proud a man to make his sufferings known.

"'Why,' exclaimed the editor, pushing up his eye shade, 'I'm the only chap in the village who answers that description. What's this gentleman's name?'

"'I regret,' said the minister, 'that I'm not at liberty to disclose it.'

"'Why, it must be me,' said the editor. It is me. It's me, sure. Heaven prosper you, parson, in your good work.'"

Most Dangerous Animal.

"What is the most dangerous of all the wild animals that I have encountered? The rhinoceros," said John H. Bradley, one of the big game hunters of the world.

"In equatorial Africa you will find the rhinoceros almost everywhere, in the high land and in the low land, in the open country and in the brush. You will find him when you least expect him, and most often when stalking through his habitat, wholly unconscious of his presence, you suddenly hear his 'chug, chug!' Then God help you if you are not provided with a rifle of large caliber and carrying steel bullets. Your only chance is to do a swift sidestep, and even then you have only three shots that will count—the brain, the neck, and heart shot. When he is charging head on it is impossible for you to reach either one.

Fortune to Child and Dog.

Romeo and Juliette are two of the most interesting personages in Paris. Juliette is the only daughter and Romeo the favorite dog of an eccentric but very wealthy widow who died a couple of years ago. By her will Mme. Cleery left her fortune to be invested in government bonds, the income derived therefrom to be divided equally between her little daughter and her bull terrier Romeo. Romeo and Juliette, fortunately, are the greatest friends, the dog invariably taking his meals at his little mistress' table.

What's In a Name?

"Pop," asked little Tommy, looking up from his book, "is a Mohammedan stronger than other men?"

"Not necessarily, boy," replied his father. "Why do you ask?"

"Then why," demanded logical Tommy, "do they call him a muscle man?"

His Difficulty.

"You wrong me," said Plodding Pete, "when you say I ain't willin' to work. I'm jes' dyin' to work."

"Then what's the trouble?"

"I'm too conscientious. Whenever I git a job I'm so anxious to fill it well dat I gits stage fright."

Effort Vs. Effect.

"He writes excellent verse."

"Why, he told me all of his efforts were serious."

"That's what makes them funny."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

PROTECT THE HOME

NATURAL LAWS EVIDENCED IN COMMUNAL RELATIONSHIP.

PRACTICES THAT DESTROY

Necessity for Harmonious Co-Operation If the Highest Interests of the People of a Community Be Best Subserved.

Cities and towns are the natural outgrowth of the inborn desire in man to fraternize in a protective as well as in a social way. Primitive man illustrated a high type of individualism. Examples of his methods can be found in the barbarous, wandering tribes in some sections of the world to-day. As far as possible, he existed independent of his fellow creatures. Like the wild animal, he tracked down his prey and subsisted the best he could. A natural law binds together creatures of certain types. As intelligence in man developed, a sense of interindependence directed that tribal methods of living in community be put in force. This was necessary for self-protection and for defense against attacks of common enemies.

As far back as evidence can be found relative to man's existence, there existed resident places corresponding to our present "home towns." With the advancement of civilization, methods of living became revolutionized. One resident of a community found that his interests were best subserved by dependence upon other members and by close co-operation with them. In modern life, there are many complex conditions which make necessary the recognition of obligations of one person to another. The small city or town of to-day affords an illustration of the highest type of communal relationship. Here is found ideals as to co-operation and a full recognition of the necessity of harmonious labor, not for self alone, but for others of the community. It is by this co-operation that the highest type of society is built up. It is by this harmonious action that churches are builded, schools maintained, public libraries for the enlightenment of the people supported, roads kept in condition and all conveniences for mutual interchange in the social and commercial life recognized as necessary.

A town cannot in itself exist. It must draw the subsistence for its people from the surrounding country. The basis of the city or town is agriculture. The growing of food stuffs must be in order that people shall live. An agricultural town of a thousand population cannot exist by itself alone, but must draw its support from the contiguous territory. Those residing upon the farms find the town an essential to their welfare and enjoyment. Thus a community must be considered an entire and indivisible social organization, in which each member participates in whatever prosperity and general advancement exists within it. Thus we find that all comprising the community have equal interest in increasing its prosperity, its wealth and all its moral, social, educational and commercial advantages. This participation is not exclusive to those residing within the limits of the town, but must be enjoyed by the residents and the workers on the adjacent farms, and all who labor within the radius of which the town is the center. Perforce of this, the town becomes the apex of the social activity, as well as that of a business nature. And the social and the commercial are so entertwined that one is necessary for the other.

A spirit of mutual co-operation should permeate all of a community. Each and every one comprising the communal organization of a district has equal interest with the others. There can be no affair important to the townspeople but which is also important to the farmers and others of the community; and there can be no affair of interest to the dwellers in the rural district but is of equal import to the residents of the towns.

How desolate, how monotonous and how isolated is the life on the farm without a home town. In human kind social instincts are predominating. Unless social desires are gratified there is despondency. The records of our insane asylums prove that from the isolated farms, where social intercourse through certain conditions is most restricted, comes the majority of inmates of these institutions. Without social intercourse intelligence is benumbed and ignorance prevails. Then how important it is to the residents of rural districts that the prosperity of the home towns be encouraged. There is the social feature, the educational, the moral and religious, and as important as any and most essential for the highest perfection, is the business relations. The more prosperous the home town the more prosperous are the farms residing within its trade radius, because the livelier the town the better the home markets.

There are complications in the business world to-day and the building up of systems of business that interfere with the highest development of the small cities and towns. Railroads, telegraph, telephone, rural delivery—all has tended towards enhancing life in the country. But these means have also encouraged business methods that work against the higher development of community interests. In order that the home town exists, there must be employment for those who reside within it. This employment is solely dependent upon the town's commercial and manufacturing interests. Thus we find that the home town is reliant upon the trade, not alone of those who reside within it, but of those in the surrounding country. Any system that robs the home town of this trade is contrary to highest economic law. Such a system retards progress and works against all within the community. Dependent upon the prosperity of the home town are the degrees of efficiency of the schools, the classes of churches, the libraries, the public halls, improvement of streets and public conveniences of every class and kind. In accordance with the increase of wealth new industries come into existence to give employment to a greater number of people, and thus carrying on an upbuilding process.

In summing up conditions as they relate to the community and the home town, it is patent to the man of intelligence that the patronizing of every home enterprise best subserves his interests, as well as the interests of all of the community. The patriotic man who would be a model citizen will make it his rule to put forth every effort to build up the local community. This effort should be directed to the patronizing of every home industry; to keep within the community as far as possible all the earnings of the people; to invest surplus capital in home enterprises; to improve the schools, the churches, the roads, develop every resource of the place; and with increased prosperity of the town more happiness, more contentment and more wealth results to all the worthy ones comprising the community.

Remember that trusts and combinations are never builded up in the small towns. They find their origin and flourish in the large cities.

"SECONDS" OR "OFF" GOODS.

How They Are Disposed Of by Big Manufacturing Concerns.

Manufacturers who put out their goods under brands are watchful as to keeping their output up to the standard. Big concerns whose goods are widely advertised and are known for their excellency will not allow defective articles to go from their factories. Everything is inspected, and it must be perfect before the brand is allowed to be marked upon it.

In the large cutlery factories, the silverware manufacturing plants, the collar and shirt factories, and the like, regardless of what care is exercised, defects will be found in a certain percentage of the work turned out. In cutlery the temper of a blade may be uneven; the handle may be marred, the lining may be imperfect, and all such defects cause the knife to be discarded, that is, thrown out and not marked with the brand, if the maker has a reputation to maintain. In shirt factories the defective shirts are placed aside just the same, and so it is with hundreds of manufactured articles. All these articles are dead loss to the manufacturer unless they be remodeled, or disposed of at a cost covering the expense of the raw material and the time of employers used in their making. Thus manufacturers welcome a means of "playing even," of disposing of this damaged stock so as to prevent loss.

In many cases the damaged goods are sold to "job-lot" men who auction them off to small jobbers. But the majority of these goods are sold by contract to large houses located in the big cities, and it may be said that fully 50 per cent. of the goods that these houses handle are either of the damaged class known as "seconds" or prison made or contract goods, cheaply turned out in sweat houses.

A number of concerns have contracts with these houses for all the "off" goods made. These goods are wrapped up in such a way as to cover their defects. The concern buys them for about 30 to 40 per cent. below prices at which perfect goods can be had in the markets. Thus it can be seen how some concerns can make low prices on goods that look about as well as regular dealers carry, but which are far inferior.

Were there only large cities, how poorly would fare the farmers and the others who toil for a livelihood.

Commercial Travelers Interested.

There are more than 100,000 commercial travelers in the United States. These men are trade missionaries. They are a very necessary cog in the commercial wheel. While there are some who take the view that they are not producers, they are nevertheless important in the system of distribution of that which is produced. The successful traveling man is a close student of human nature. His vocation is such as calls for a high class of intelligence, particularly as to trade conditions and the lines which he represents. His keen observation of the trend of affairs has made him a pronounced home-trader. He realizes that his interest lies in protecting the business of the small city and town. Were trade in mercantile lines concentrated in the large cities, the field for the traveler would be narrowed. Thus we find him a strong combatant of systems that mean concentration. Circumstances have made him as equally interested in protection of local trade of merchants as the merchants themselves, and he is also interested on this account in the welfare of the people who are the customers of the merchants. The force and power of the great army of travelers in the United States is not to be considered lightly. Their influence is widespread. They will be found quite willing to work most harmoniously with the townspeople and the residents of rural districts in the matter of home protection.

That town which has not sufficient industries to employ its people is sure to go backward.

LOGGERS SAW THE AWFUL CRIME

COMMITTED BY THEIR COMRADE BUT WERE UNABLE TO GIVE AID.

KENTUCKIAN KILLS WIFE AND THEN HIMSELF

While Frenzied Because His Breakfast Was Not Ready When He Returned Home Is Thought To Be the Cause of the Tragedy.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 10.—A tragedy most harrowing in its details was enacted in a cabin home on the Fayette county bank of the Kentucky river, near Valley View, when shortly before 7 o'clock Sunday morning Elvin Newby murdered his wife and then killed himself.

Newby was 30 years of age and was the son of Letcher Newby, a farmer residing on the Madison county side of the river.

At the age of 20 Newby married a Miss Howard, sister of Alfred Howard, a contracting carpenter, who resides in this city, and she bore him two daughters. Some three years ago this wife and mother died and the daughters were sent to this city to make their home with their uncle, Alfred Howard.

About two years ago Newby married Ellen Campbell, aged 27, the divorced wife of Sam Campbell, of Beattyville. She had a daughter, now about five years of age, and this unfortunate tot proved a bone of contention in the Newby home. Finally there was a separation, followed by a reconciliation about two months ago.

Newby secured a place with the Kentucky River Poplar Co., moved into the three-room house on the hillside near Valley View and set about his work as foreman of the night crew working on the log boom. A few days ago the Campbell child was stricken with cerebro-spinal meningitis.

Having few neighbors and no nurse, the mother had attended to the child day and night, snatching now and then a nap until her energy was well nigh exhausted.

Newby left the boom about 6:30 Sunday morning, and climbed the hill to his home. Leonard Richardson and George Howard, who had taken up the work in the river where he left off, saw Newby enter the house. Later they were startled by a shot fired in the house. An instant later they saw the front door open, and Mrs. Newby, clad only in her night gown and shoes, ran out, her screams piercing their ears. Behind her Newby rushed with a revolver in his hand.

The woman reached the yard, and was attempting to escape down the hill. The man leveled the revolver at her back, and fired twice in rapid succession. The woman fell prostrate upon her face. Newby rushed into the yard, and halting directly over her, fire two more shots. He then shot himself through the heart. The horrified witnesses to awful slaughter, balancing themselves on running logs in the high tide of the river, were powerless to lend a staying hand.

No one knows what occurred to provoke the tragedy, but he presumption is that Newby, finding his tired wife asleep and no breakfast ready for him, worked himself into fiendish rage.

MATCHES AND PINS

Fed to Baby so Nurse Could Have More Time to Herself.

Mineola, L. I., Feb. 10.—Aurelia Lightbourne, 16 years old, who says she is a West Indian, was locked up in the Nassau county jail on a charge of assault in the second degree.

The complainant is William J. Purdy, of Rockville Center, who has employed the girl for the last two years. Some weeks ago he noticed his boy, 2 years old, was seriously ill at times, and hairpins, matches and safety pins were found in the child's stomach after an operation.

A few days ago the girl became deeply interested in religion and in the proposed erection of a new Baptist church for the negroes of Rockville Center. After one of the meetings she returned to her home with the Purdy family and acknowledged she had been the cause of the repeated illness of the baby.

"I gave him pins, matches and sometimes hair and safety pins so he would be sick, and then I would have more time to myself," she said.

Forced To Give Up Keys.

Knoxville, Tenn., Feb. 10.—"Stone wall" Ellis, under sentence of three years for larceny and who was being held in jail at Sevierville, Tenn., awaiting an appeal to the supreme court, frightened Mrs. J. D. Bislock, wife of the jailer, and caused her to give up the keys. He escaped.

Bankers Sentenced.

Murphysboro, Ill., Feb. 10.—W. B. Smith and J. S. Nail, of Henry county, Ky., were sentenced to the penitentiary for a term not to exceed five years in circuit court here for conspiracy to defraud the Elkville (Ill.) State bank of $5,192.

Four Men Rob Bank.

Sulphur Springs, Ark., Feb. 10.—Four men blew open the vault of the bank of Sulphur Springs and secured over $1,300 in cash, besides notes and other valuables. The robbers made their escape.

AFTER THE COURT-MARTIAL.

Man on Trial Looked Upon with Suspicion Throughout His Career.

"There isn't anything worse than can happen to an army officer than to be court-martialed for a small offense," said an army captain. "Even if it is one of the offenses for which a man is in no danger of dismissal from the service, it doesn't make any difference.

"You see, when a man is brought up for trial every commanding officer looks to see what the result is and what is the nature of the testimony. Of course in every court there are several commanding officers anyway. If a man who is up before the court is found guilty, then the officers all expect that he will try to be shifted from the post where he is.

"As soon as he goes anywhere else they are on the lookout for him. From the evidence at his trial they are prepared in all sorts of ways for his little peculiarities.

"If he happens to be fortunate or unfortunate enough to be cleared by the court-martial, his case isn't much better. The commanding officer always is looking out for him as a disagreeable man. He knows instinctively that the officer will make the worst of every little action toward him, and he is always uncomfortable while the contentious officer is on his post.

"So you can see that there is no rest for any one who has been before a court-martial, whether he wins or not. He is a marked man and one to be afraid of, and his service from that time on must be done under difficulties.

"It is nothing to the discredit of his superiors that they are likely to fear or to dislike him. They just can't help it. There isn't anything that can happen to a man that is worse than being brought before a court-martial."

With an "E."

Justice Brewer of the supreme court, on circuit was once taking testimony in a cause brought in an Ohio court.

One of the witnesses called to the stand gave his name as J. Curtis Greene. Mr. Greene's condescending manner did not appeal to the court's sense of the fitness of things. Finally, Judge Brewer's patience being sorely tried, he asked:

"What did you say your name was?"

"J. Curtis Greene, with an 'e,'" replied the witness.

"What does the 'J' stand for?" was the next question.

"Julius."

"Proceed with the testimony of Mr. Julius C. Greene with an 'e!'" commanded the judge.—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

Speculation's Ups and Downs.

To a reporter who recently consulted him about his many charities, Charles M. Schwab gave some good advice on speculating.

"Ignorant as you are of the stock market," said Mr. Schwab, "you would be more than foolish to speculate. You would have to rely on other's advice, and you know what other people's advice come to. For instance:

"'You bought that stock on Smith's advice, didn't you?' said one man to another.

"'Yes,' said the second man. 'Smith gave me five excellent reasons why it had to go up.'

"'And what has he got to say now?'

"'He now gives me five excellent reasons why it had to go down.'"

Will Winter at Advent Bay.

A Norwegian woman physician, Dr. Julia Bang-Klinck, will be one of the first persons to spend a winter at Advent bay, Spitzbergen. No one has been brave enough to face a winter in that place until the present year, when two mining companies decided to keep at work on the coal mines. They advertised for two doctors, and Dr. Bang-Klinck and her husband, also a physician, responded and were accepted. The mining colony will consist of about 100 persons, including seven women.

Doan's Kidney Pills bring the quickest of relief from backache and kidney troubles. Is that relief lasting? Let Mrs. James M. Long, of 113 Augusta St., Staunton, Va., tell you. On January 31st, 1903, Mrs. Long wrote: "Doan's Kidney Pills have cured me" (of pain in the back, urinary troubles, bearing down sensations, etc.) On June 20th, 1907, four and one-half years later, she said: "I haven't had kidney trouble since. I repeat my testimony."

SHE COULD NOT WALK

For Months—Burning Humor on Ankles —Oplates Alone Brought Sleep —Eczema Yielded to Cuticura.

"I had eczema for over two years. I had two physicians, but they only gave me relief for a short time and I cannot enumerate the ointments and lotions I used to no purpose. My ankles were one mass of sores. The itching and burning were so intense that I could not sleep. I could not walk for nearly four months. One day my husband said I had better try the Cuticura Remedies. After using them three times I had the best night's rest in months unless I took an opiate. I used one set of Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills, and my ankles healed in a short time. It is now a year since I used Cuticura, and there has been no return of the eczema. CARE OF THE KITCHEN.

Clean Walls Are an Essential to Sanitary Cooking.

It is not only important to know how to cook, but it is equally important to know where to cook. Cooking in a dirty kitchen can never produce good food. The idea is simply preposterous; yet kitchen walls are left for months—sometimes for years without cleansing.

In the first place the kitchen wall should have a light tint that the merest fleck of dirt can be seen; that the sheerest cobweb can be brushed away; that the tiniest water bug can be discerned. It is all folly expecting clean food in a kitchen with dirty walls.

Never put a wall coating on a kitchen wall that is mixed with hot water or that has glue in it, or sour milk in it if mixed with cold water. Oils walls made from horses' hoofs colored also with cheap colorings do not indicate good housekeeping. The glue is constantly flecking off, falling into the food and the idea of food flavored with glue made from horses' hoofs is not appetizing.

Kitchen walls to be thoroughly satisfactory should be alabastized the same as every other wall in the house. They should be coated regularly in the spring and fall of each year with a light tint.

The care of the pantry requires constant attention. The walls should be brushed over every year, the dishes removed from the shelves which should be thoroughly wiped with hot water. If there are ant holes or any other insects in the pantries a thick putty of the wall coating can be made and all the ant holes, even small mice holes can be filled with it which will protect the pantry from the incursions of disagreeable insects and mice.

The Simple Life.

Abe, a light mulatto, called upon a minister for whom he had formerly worked.

"Yo' know, boss, I'se gwine be married nex' week," he admitted haltingly, according to Lippincott's Magazine. "I'se gwine to marry Miss May Felicity Johnson, an' May she say she wants ter be married jus' like white folks." "All right, Abe, I'll marry you if you want," the minister replied. "How much you gwine charge?" "It will cost you $5 to be married like white folks." Abe scratched his head. "Guess we'll hab ter be married like colored folks, then," he said. "You see, boss, we's goin' to housekeepin', an' I ain't got but $8."

Millions in Oats and Barley.

Nothing will pay you better for 1908 than to sow a plenty of big yielding oats and barley with oats at 40c to 50c a bu. (Salzer's new Emperor William Oats averaged 50 bu. per acre more than any other variety in 1907) would pay immensely while Salzer's Silver King Barley which proved itself the biggest yielder at the Wisconsin Agricultural Station during 1907 if you had planted 50 acres would have given you in 1907 just $3,500.00 on 50 acres. It is an enormous yielder.

Treadmill Still in Use.

The barbarous custom of using convicts in treadmills is still practiced in some English prisons, declares Popular Mechanics, and an interesting picture shows the convicts at this trying task. BOONE CO. RECORDER.
W. L. RIDDELL, Publisher.

A bitter attack on the rules and power of the Speaker has been in the National House by Mr. Nelson, of Wisconsin, Republican, who says the power of the House was merged into the Speaker.

In a speech of an hour and a half in length, Senator Beveridge appealed to Congress to appoint a non-partisan commission to revise the tariff, which he declared would conform to modern and business ideas on that subject.

Mr. Kimball, of Kentucky has introduced a bill in Congress providing that carriers of interstate commerce must not receive for transportation tobacco cargoes and snuff until affidavit has been made that the consignment is not the product of a trust.

It is estimated that if the Missouri corn crop this year was loaded into ordinary farm wagons, holding thirty bushels each, it would require eight million wagons. If these wagons were driven on a road as closely as it would be safe to follow one team with another, it would make a train twice around the world.

Hon. Clifford E. Nadaud, of Covington, in an interview in last Saturday's Kentucky Post, says that he will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress this fall. When he enters the race he will begin at once a whirlwind campaign. The official announcement reached the RECORDER just in time to be too late for this issue.

The Franklin county grand jury returned four indictments against the American Tobacco Company, charging it with establishing and maintaining a trust, pool or combine for the purpose of controlling the price of tobacco. The indictments contain every allegation possible to be made in connection with the business of the trust.

The Government will hold an examination for teachers in the Philippine Islands, on March 11th and 12th, at Lexington, Louisville and Paducah. Should any of the Boone county teachers desire a position as a Philipine pedagogue at $100 per month ($1,200 a year) they should go to Lexington and take the examination, which is about the same as that required of teachers in this State.

It is claimed by some that the real object of the recent sensational message to Congress by President Roosevelt was to eliminate Vice-President Fairbanks, of Indiana, from the contest for the Republican nomination for President. The Republican committee in Ohio erased Senator Foraker, and the President probably thinks he can dispose of one candidate, in Secretary Taft's behalf.

After careful calculation the owners of North German Lloyd line of steamers announce that in their opinion more than $110,000,000 was taken out of this country during the past year by immigrants who have returned to their native shores. The number that have returned during the year is 550,045, and they have paid out for passage money returning $15,000,000. The number of immigrants arriving during the past year was 1,361,384. They are estimated to have brought into the country something like $27,000,000.

In reporting the killing of Jas. Hargis, last Wednesday by his son, the Cincinnati papers were crowded for room for their immense head lines and pictures of the murdered man and others with which they saw proper to surround him. None of the details of James Hargis' sensational life were omitted, while in an obscure place in the same papers was announced in six or eight lines of small types under very modest head lines, the count of a son shooting his father in Florida. Hargis lived in Kentucky, you know.

Senator A. J. Oliver, of Allen county, has introduced a bill to prevent betting on race horses at any race track in Kentucky, and imposing a fine of $200 for each offense. He also introduced a bill to repeal the act creating the State Racing Commission. The bills came without notice and created surprise, inasmuch as the thoroughbred horse business is one of the largest industries in Kentucky, though not in the section from which Senator Oliver comes. It is believed that the bills will die in the hands of the committees.

Not to be Dreaded as It Once Was.

A disease that some think is not smallpox although so pronounced by several very popular physicians, has appeared in several neighborhoods in this county in the last two months. Some who had it were quite sick for a few days, but there have been no deaths resulting. Small-pox is not the very dangerous disease it use to be regarded, and the death rate is very small. Years ago it was regarded as very contagious and almost certain to result in death. When a case did appear in a community business was about suspended and everybody was badly frightened; but this is not the case now. Its first appearance in a community causes a shock which soon wears off and people go about their affairs as usual, avoiding actual contact with the disease, the severity of which has been reduced to almost a minimum by science, although many repudiate its claims that it has suceeded in reducing the dreadful disease to a light and less dangerous form. There is one thing certain and that is small-pox is not to be dreaded as it once was.

Good Roads and Good Schools Build Up a Community.

The turnpike fever that broke out in this county a couple of years ago, in what then appeared to be in a virulent form, has, in a great measure, subsided. At first it appeared that nearly every neighborhood in the county would engage in building turnpikes, but that commendable spirit of enterprise has subsided, and the Verona neighborhood is the only locality in which the road work is progressing. The people in that particular part of the county had been annoyed by bad roads until with them endurance had ceased to be a virtue, and they have improved their system of roads very much in the last three years, and the end of the work in that direction is not yet. By the way Verona has one of the best rural schools in this part of the State, from the institution of which that part of the county has advanced steadily until now it is not surpassed by anyother section in the matter of refinement, culture, morality and prosperity. The people up there are progressive, and, while not extravagant, are reaching out for the pleasures and comforts in life to which their surroundings entitle them. When the work of macadamizing the roads that are designated for that purpose is completed, the Verona people can point with pride to the very great advance their part of the county has made in the last decade, and that locality will be a good object lesson to the less enterprising localities in the county.

A bill has been passed by Congress increasing the pensions of widows of old soldiers from $8 to $12 per month. This will add a large amount to the present payroll, of which the following will give you some idea:

"Under the act of June 27th, 1890, there are 183,671 civil-war widows, minors, and helpless minors getting $8 per month who will get an increase under this bill of $48 per year, or $8,816,208. There are 2,486 widows pensioned under the general law, at $8 per month also, who will get $4 per month more than they now get, or $48 per year each, equal to $119,328; there are 6,880 Mexican war widows drawing $8 per month who will now get $12, or $330,240; of the Indian wars, there are 3,081 widows getting $8 per month who will now get each $48 per year more, or $147,888; of the Regular Establishment of the Army there are 172 widows who will, under this bill, get $48 per year more each, an aggregate sum of $8,256; there are 153 widows of the Spanish war who will also each get $48 more per year, or $7,344; or an aggregate of $9,429,264.

"Widows who have heretofore been denied pensions under the act of 1890 because of an income of $250 per annum will all be pensioned under this bill, and each one will be entitled to $144 per year. There are probably 18,000 of these, and these pensions will amount to $2,592,000. The number of widows are likely to increase something like 5,000, and this will swell the budget to $720,000 more, thus adding a grand aggregate to the pension appropriation of $12,741,000."

President Roosevelt has suspended Charles a Stillings, the Public Printer, and appointed William S. Rossiter temporarily to fill the duties of that office. The action, is explained, officially, is to facilitate the investigation being made of the Government printing office by Congress.

A. S. of E. News.

Louisville papers and the Louisville Tobacco Warehouse Company are up in arms against Hon. W. C. McChord's tobacco bill recently introduced in the House of Representatives. The bill effects buyers and dealers in tobacco. They claim it will ruin the Louisville market.

The pooled tobacco in Grant county will be shipped to the Farmers' and Shippers' Warehouse in Cincinnati, for storage. The Warehouse has agreed to advance the amount that has already been paid by the warehouses on the tobacco sent to them for storage, and agree to hold it until a sale is made by the S. of E.

A petition is being circulated in Owen county, and being universally signed, asking the legislature of the State to pass a law placing a license of $50 per acre for each and every acre of tobacco grown in the year 1908. A petition of similar character is being circulated in all the counties of the Burley District.—News Herald.

Monday's Kentucky Post says: "The Kenton Burley Society held a meeting at Independence Saturday afternoon for the purpose of arranging the handling and sale of the 1907 crop of pooled tobacco. By a unanimous vote it was decided to receive sealed bids for the tobacco until 1 a. m. Saturday, Feb. 22. Bids must be sent to Frank Loomis, at Independence."

The Boone County Board of control held a well attended meeting at Richwood, last Saturday, at which some very important business was transacted. Those who are in a position to know reported the Pool progressing in a very satisfactory manner, and that it is believed that in the next few weeks a very considerable lot of the pooled tobacco will be sold. At the meeting, last Saturday, locations for warehouses and the warehousemen were selected as follows:

Belleview—W. B. Arnold, H. D. Brady.
Beaver—J. C. Hughes.
Richwood—J. C. Hughes.
Union—J. W. Kennedy.
Verona—W. M. Whitson.
Walton—William Tillman.

The Carrollton News says. "It has been reported in Trimble county that the grand jury of Carroll county refused to indict parties who had sold their pooled tobacco, That report is unfounded but on the other hand there had been but one agreement violated in Carroll county at the time the grand jury met, and that party had been tried by the county judge and held over to the grand jury in the sum of $100. The grand jury returned a true bill against the party and his bond was raised to $250. The equity people in every vicinity are keeping a close lookout and report every violation of contract and the Society has instructed their attorneys to not only bring suit to recover damages for violation of contracts, but also to cause warrants for their arrest and to prosecute them before the county judge and in the circuit court."

REV. LAFAYETTE JOHNSON

Was Pastor of Twenty-Six Churches and Had Baptized More Than 1000 Converts.

ANOTHER GOOD MAN HAS GONE.

REV. LAFAYETTE JOHNSON.

Death called away Rev. Lafayette Johnson at his home near Walton, this county, on the 1st inst., aged 69 years, 5 months and 19 days. He was confined to his bed only thirty days of cancer of the liver and stomach.

Rev. Johnson was born and reared on the farm where he died. He entered Georgetown College in 1850, united with New Bethel church at Verona in 1856, was licensed to preach in January, 1858, and was called to the pastorate of New Bethel church in March, 1862. He had been the pastor of 26 Baptist churches, had baptized more than 1,000 converts, preached thousands of funeral sermons and married 532 couples. He was a most earnest, thoughtful, entertaining speaker, and one of the finest old men that ever lived. He became moderator of the Ten Mile Baptist Association in 1869, and with the exception of three years he was continued as moderator up to and including the year of his death. Rev. Johnson was active in all of his work and no man had a larger circle of sincere friends. He was an ardent, faithful member of the Masonic fraternity and was a leading spirit at all of its public gatherings. It is said that the number of miles he drove and rode on horse back during his 51 years of pastoral work would have encircled the earth more than twice. He rode one horse (Old Selim) almost daily more than 25 years on all kinds of roads and in all kinds of weather. In the fullest measure he followed the words and example of our blessed Savior. "Whoso will be master shall be a servant of the others." He was truly a servant, filled all of his appointments promptly and came to every call of the grief stricken. No home was too humble or too poor for him to enter and share in their hospitality, their grief or sorrows and administer words of advice and comfort.

He was a great scholar, a profound student and thoroughly up in many branches of science, astronomy, geology, entomology and botany. He came from Irish ancestry, that noble race who have contributed so greatly to our best citizenship, and he had the eloquence and the gift of oratory equal to the great Emmet of Ireland.

His sermons were truly great and many sparkled with apt illustrations drawn from the Bible or from nature, and there was always a beautiful verse of poetry that fit in just at the right place to blend the whole into blissful joy to the Christian soul. Had he broken away from his country environments and sought distant fields in his early ministry he would have ranked with the great divines, or pulpit orators of his time. But he preferred to labor and die amid the people he loved, in the hill country of Northern Kentucky.

Only a few days before his death he said to a friend, "I believe the end is near at hand, I am only waiting my Master's call. These two weeks of prayer and reflection have been worth more than years of study. I have such seasons of joy and refreshing. Jesus is always present, and I would love to preach the gospel a few years longer and fill my sermons with the christian love and zeal I am now experiencing."

Propped up in bed two days before he passed away he wrote:

"At home, January, 29th, 1908.

Dear Brethren at Concord:—Think I am getting better, but am very weak. Cannot be with you in February. I think and pray about you every day. I may be with you in March. But you had best call another pastor. The presence of my blessed Savior is with me all the way. Remember in your prayers your pastor. L. JOHNSON.

The deceased leaves a widow and several children to mourn his death. The funeral took place from the home at 11 a. m. on the 10th inst., Rev. Wm. Sheadolds of Campbellsburg conducting the services.

Everybody is talking automobile route from Burlington to Covington. It is generally believed that it will pay.

Ben Rue, of Cleves, Ohio, in renewing his subscription, writes like one whom the recent stringency in the money market did not disturb much.

So far this winter the health of the people in Burlington has been exceedingly good. Quite a number have had the grip but it was in a light form.

Hear it said that the creamery fever is developing in this locality. Let it develop. A good creamery properly operated is an advantage to any community.

The change in the weather, last Wednesday night, cut out the fear of another February flood in the Ohio river, for which there were very fine prospects all day Wednesday.

A Christmas and a New Year's card combined, was received at this office, last Wednesday, from Walter H. Lassing, who is at Guam, L. I. The card contains a picture of the supply ship which he is on.

A few of those to whom the RECORDER sent statements recently have not responded. Their names will have to be stricken from the mailing list in the next few weeks if the request is not heeded.

Burlington had a couple of representatives at the ball at Florence, last Thursday night. They report a large collection of gay young people present, and a delightful time for all.

The individual members of the old bachelor element of local society seem to be in much better spirits in the last few weeks. Probably the matrimonial skies are brightening.

Some of the ice that was housed last week was not of as good quality as those who handled it desired, but they were afraid to take the chances of there being a better crop at any time during this or next month.

J. S. Noell, of Midway, sent B. W. Adams, one day last week, a fat, juicy coon, which oiled the hinges to his jaws so thoroughly that he has been unable to do naught but smile ever since he ate of it. Bluffe "do enjoy" good cooked coon.

In a letter concerning the renewal of his subscription, J. D. Gaines, one of Boone county's most excellent products, who, several years ago, cast his fortune with the good people of Texarkana, Texas, sends his kindest regards to all his Boone county friends. Mr. Gaines has done well in Texas, all here are glad to know.

The train of wagons conveying Ben Crisler's personal effects to his new home near McVille, passed through Burlington last Thursday morning. During the last day's sojourn at his old home all communication with the outer world was cut off by high water. Ben prefers having sand in his eyes to carrying water about in his boots.

Hubert Conner, who has been on a huckster route for 17 years, made a brief call at this office last Thursday afternoon. In all these long years the weather has seldom, if ever been so bad as to cause him to miss a trip. If the produce in the way of poultry, eggs, &c., he has hauled was all in one pile it would make a mountain of immense proportion.

Neighborhood Favorite.

Mrs. E. D. Charles, of Harbor, Maine, speaking of Electric Bitters, says: "It is a neighborhood favorite here with us." It deserves to be a favorite everywhere. It gives quick relief in dyspepsia, liver complaint, kidney derangement, malnutrition, nervousness, weakness and general debility. Its action on the blood, as a thorough purifier makes it especially useful as a spring medicine. This grand alterative tonic is sold under guarantee at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger. 50c.

The above good picture of the late H. Clay White, of Williamstown, which, through the courtesy of the Williamstown Courier, we are permitted to use, reached this office too late for use along with the obituary.

When the fiscal court levied a property tax for the purpose of assisting to the extent of $500 a mile in the construction of turnpike roads, many thought it was paving the way to county bankruptcy, but so far the mileage to which the county has been called upon to contribute is insignificant, and there is nothing now that indicates that a large number of miles will ever be constructed in any one year.

This is the season of the year when dogs are very apt to develop a ravenous appetite for mutton, and kill and injure many sheep. It is more than probable that the dog law will be repealed before the legislature adjourns, in which event there will be no provisions for paying for sheep dogs kill, consequently it behooves flockowners to watch closely their sheep, always having a gun close at hand in case a dog is discovered in the sheep pasture.

The proposition to establish a high school in Burlington appeals to every business in the town. If it is a success the school will not have an influence for the better in Burlington alone but in the country for miles around, and will attract attention to the county from abroad that nothing else would. The time has come when a county seat without a good school is just about off of the map, and cannot expect to be of much importance until it shows an interest in educational matters.

The Jumping off Place.

"Consumption had me in its grasp; and I had almost reached the jumping off place when I was advised to try Dr. King's New Discovery, and I want to say right now, it saved my life. Improvement began with the first bottle, and after taking one dozen bottles I was a well and happy man again," says George Moore, of Grimesland, N. C. As a remedy for coughs and colds and healer of weak, sore lungs and for preventing pneumonia New Discovery is supreme. 50c and $1.00 at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger. Trial bottle free.

February has become the worst of the winter months in this climate. Up to the first of February this winter the "oldest inhabitant" could not recall as nice a winter, and some had begun to believe that there would be no let up in the nice, pleasant weather, but the ground hog month demoralized things badly before it was a week old, and bad weather enough for several months was crowded into the first ten days. Hereafter don't begin to think you are out of the woods in the matter of bad weather until February is gone and almost forgotten, as, like a mule, it makes trouble when one is not expecting it nor is prepared for it. Keep your coal bin well supplied and your winter apparel hanging on a convenient hook as old Boreas has contracted a habit of getting very frisky in the second month of the year.

The water courses, Woolper and Gunpowder, were on a high, last Wednesday, and the rural mail carriers out of Burlington could not cross them. Willie Hughes, carrier on route No. 1, went as far as Plattsburg, when he was compelled to backtrack, while Elmer Conley, carrier on route No. 2, went as far as the old Weaver mill site on Gunpowder creek, when he retraced his steps, it being the first trip he has missed since the route was established. Both these carriers are good men and can be relied on to cover their routes unless prevented by some unsurmountable obstruction. They have been known to cross the large creeks on their routes several times when they would have been excusable for balking when they came to them, but anxious to serve the box owners they took chances that Uncle Sam does not exact of his employes.

William Kirkpatrick, of Hopeful neighborhood, was in town, Saturday, having with him his graphophone to entertain the boys.

Your attention is called to the sale of Robert Littrell, near Walton, on next Saturday. He has a considerable list of livestock to dispose of. Mr. Littrell will move to Beaver in a few days after his sale.

Willie Hughes, carrier on Burlington rural route No. 1, has a position for 105 days commencing last Saturday, as weigher of mails on the Q. & C. between Cincinnati and Chattanooga. His father will attend to his rural route during his absence.

Those who expect to handle horses and jacks in this county should send in copy for their printing as soon as possible. When all put off placing their orders until the season begins, some are necessarily delayed longer than is pleasant to them.

The Consolidated Telephone Co. has perfected arrangements by which Erlanger can be reached from this part of the county without the message passing through the exchange at Beaver, which expedites business very much and relieves the switch at Beaver of considerable work.

Every person on a rural mail route ought to have printed stationery, and they can get it at the RECORDER'S office, 100 nice envelopes with return address, and 100 sheets good paper with card printed thereon, all for $1. Send in your order and see how well you will be pleased with the outfit.

John Clore, of Hebron, who kept the German Coach horse, Plutarch, last year, delivered him to the company on the day of the annual election, in most excellent condition—about 250 pounds heavier than when he took him. Mr. Clore's theory is, get a horse very fat and it will require less food to keep it.

Cold weather does not discriminate between sacred and ordinary water in this latitude, and will congeal a bottle of the former with as little ceremony as it observes when it embraces the common aqua; at least it dispatched, at this office, a flask containing a sample from the river Jordan, in its usual expeditious manner, it is painful to relate.

Benjamin Crisler, of Gunpowder neighborhood, expected to move, last week, to his recently purchased farm near McVille, but the bad weather compelled him to call off the move until the elements settled. He ought to have known that his departure from the neighborhood where he has spent so many years and been such a prominent factor, both socially and politically, would cause an upheaval of some kind.

Some of the Indiana and Ohio farmers are endeavoring to turn the tobacco situation in Kentucky to their advantage by inducing the Kentucky tobacco raising tenants to move to these States where they are promised all the land they desire to cultivate in tobacco this year. An advertisement has reached Burlington which calls for from 50 to 100 men. Not many years ago it was claimed that the soil in Indiana and Ohio was not adapted to tobacco, but in the last few years it has been cultivated extensively in the counties bordering on the Ohio river, and it is to some of these the land owners hope to create an exodus of tenants from Kentucky, and develop another tobacco area, but as the tenants are largely in sympathy with the proposition to cultivate no tobacco this year, it is hardly probable that any very great number of Kentucky tobacco growers will emigrate to Indiana and Ohio tobacco territory.

Coughs of Children

Especially night coughs. Nature needs a little help to quiet the irritation, control the inflammation, check the progress of the disease. Our advice is—give the children Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Ask your doctor if this is his advice also. He knows best. Do as he says.

What About Lawyers?

A contributor to "The Pilgrim's Scrip" in the American Magazine says: "At each turn in the complicated finance of business the dim but definite trail of a lawyer may be seen. Each investigation brings out clearly that at some point in deals or contracts or arrangements that evade or break laws one or more lawyers were in active operation devising ways and means to give these operations a specious appearance of legality, or cover up their real meaning. In some cases, as in the Standard Oil investigation, distinguished lawyers boast before the open court of their ingenuity in defeating the purpose of the laws of the United States. In the Metropolitan investigation you will find that every one of those schemes that have deceived or robbed the stockholders and the public was invented by a great lawyer, and for a huge fee. Abe Hummel, the criminal lawyer, was disbarred for wrongful practices. What is the Bar association going to do about these others? We have found that it is not the low criminals in politics (those who buy the privilege to cater to vice) who are the real corruptors. It is the men of power, who have larger game and by whose sufferance the lower ones live, who are defeating the aim and spirit of democratic government. We are getting after them by fines, and sending some to prison. But what about the lawyers who help them? I don't mean the great mass of honorable lawyers. I mean the big and unhonorable lawyers. Their studies of justice and equity give them particular knowledge and a special perception to the matters of human relations involved. They cannot plead custom and inherited methods as their clients do. They know.

If Camille Flammarion's discoveries resulting from experiments with colored light prove to be all he claims, then the science of gardening may be revolutionized. With certain vegetables, as lettuce, growing under red light 15 times as fast as without it, with ripe fruit kept from decay under blue light for 20 days and strawberry plants retarded for that time, then allowed to blossom, there is no limit to the modifications and changes possible in plant and vegetable growth and their profits greatly increased. At the same time it is not well for them to be too sanguine until the discoveries have been thoroughly tested. It is to be remembered that blue light had no such curative effect on the nervous diseases of human beings as it was announced many years ago on scientific authority that it would have; nor has the Finsen red light produced the results first promised for it in the cure of cutaneous diseases. But with the hint given by Flammarion tests with plants may be easily made.

Because the daily news is about human beings and is collected and edited by human beings, it is rich to whoever reads it with a philosophical eye. The New York Globe puts into one paragraph events selected from two days of "news," and concludes that human nature has not lost its capacity for originality. These are some of the "events": "A Russian who had lost his sweetheart, and answered 'Freda' to every question put to him, was on that account arrested as a burglar. An automobilist, to save a child, ran his automobile into a pile of bricks, thereby endangering the lives of two who were driving with him. A mother found her son trying to hang himself, and used the rope to give him a thrashing. Thieves ran away with a Thanksgiving turkey; the owner, a woman of 50, mounted a bicycle, gave chase and recovered the bird." The trivial events of the human drama make interesting vaudelle.

The coin collector is always alert. Within a day or two of the announcement that the government had stopped coining the new Saint-Gaudens double-eagles the coins were selling at a premium of six dollars apiece, and a few days later this bonus had advanced to $10, so that each twenty-dollar gold piece was held at $30. Meanwhile the collectors carefully enter in their records the history of the coin and how many were minted, for the guidance of those who come after them. Twenty-dollar gold pieces have always been hard coins to collect. The premium imposes an added and discouraging burden.

A Chicago judge has ruled that it is as much the father's duty to walk the floor at night with the baby as the mother's. The average man is content to allow his wife to act as the court of last resort on such matters.

There is in St Louis a lady who says she always gives her favorite poet a substantial check on Christmas. She is probably the only lady extant whose favorite poet is still in a position to find checks useful.

LAID IN ROYAL TOMB

FUNERAL IS IMPRESSIVE

Lisbon.—The simple but impressive funeral services Saturday were the final act in the bloody tragedy of the royal family. All the arrangements for the solemn march through the city and the ceremonies at the Church of San Vincente were carried out.

Although it is the ancient custom in Portugal for the new sovereign to walk behind the coffin of the dead monarch, as King Carlos did when his father was buried, neither of the queens nor the boy king was able to endure this trying ordeal. Additional troops were brought into Lisbon to accompany the cortege and line the route of march.

Many Floral Tributes.

The last of the special foreign missions to attend the funerals arrived in Lisbon Friday night and hundreds of floral tributes were received at the palace. Practically every government was represented. Charles Page Bryan, the American minister, sent two wreaths, one to King Manuel, with expressions of the most profound sorrow of President Roosevelt and the American people, and the other to Queen Amelie, conveying the heartfelt regrets of the American nation. The bodies of the king and the crown prince were viewed by the members of the diplomatic corps Friday afternoon as they lay in the royal chapel.

Every hour during the day masses were said at the altars in the palace chapel and, according to tradition, priests prayed before the caskets sprinkled them with holy water and burned incense. The principal mass of the day was celebrated by the Papal Nuncio. It was attended by King Manuel and Queen Amelie and the members of the diplomatic corps in uniform and the gentlemen and ladies of the court.

Franco at Bordeaux.

Bordeaux.—Senhor Franco arrived here Friday. The former premier of Portugal brought a large amount of baggage with him. A group of newspaper men awaited him at the station, but when they stepped up he waved them away with a gesture of weariness and ignored the questions they asked him. He walked quickly to his hotel.

The face of the man is haggard and he appears to be pre-occupied. He looks constantly to the right and to the left, as if he felt he should be prepared to forestall some impending physical danger.

Senhor Franco told the manager of the hotel that he would remain over night, as he wished to change his Portuguese money into French money, having none of the latter. He did not say where he purposed going Saturday. The hotel was guarded all night by the police.

ICE DEALERS SENT TO JAIL.

Three Prominent Toledo Men Given Six Months.

Toledo, O. — Roland Beard and Compton Leuman of the Hygeia Ice Company and Joseph Miller, manager of the Toledo Ice and Coal Company, were Tuesday sentenced to six months in the county jail and to pay costs of prosecution by Judge Kinkade for conspiracy in restraint of trade.

These men were found guilty last July and at that time Judge Kinkade sentenced each of them to six months in the workhouse and to pay $2,500 fine. The case was appealed and a few days ago the supreme court handed down a decision declaring the convicted men could be sent to jail, but not to the workhouse. They were remanded to the common pleas court for resentence and while the fine was not assessed the workhouse sentence was changed to the county jail.

No further effort will be made in behalf of the defendants. They at once began their term of sentence. All the men are of prominent Toledo families.

BOY TRAMPS HOLD MEETING

EXCLUDED BY HOBOES, THE LADS HAVE OWN CONVENTION.

"Kids" from Various Cities Tell Their Experiences and Give Advice to Others.

St. Louis. — Boy tramps who were drawn here by the national convention of the unemployed, now in session, and who were not permitted in the councils, which were limited to "hoboes," held a meeting Friday at which addresses were made by men of reputation among the wanderers.

"Kansas City Kid" was the guest of honor, because his "moniker" (monogram) is on more water tanks than that of any other traveler, and short speeches, brimful of advice, were delivered by other well-known tramps.

"New Haven Kid" contrasted conditions in the east and west and said his experience had been that a tramp is more liable to arrest in the east than the west. "Kid Murphy" of Springfield, Ill., advised against the use of "white line" (alcohol and water), saying it caused many hold-ups. "Jersey Red," who recently returned from Africa, advised tramps to keep away from the sea, because they had to work hard on ships. "Chi Kid Vi," with pathos in his voice, told of 22 arrests in two months and advised the boys never to get off trains in front of stations, and recited the advantages of a "good front."

"Gen." J. S. Coxey urged the tramps to settle down that they might be voters by the time his bill came up in congress.

Rev. John Ellis and Dr. Reitman, who styles himself "King of Tramps," also spoke, urging the tramps to become "hoboes" and seek after work.

YARMOUTH MARRIAGE ANNULLED

Alice Thaw Freed from Earl by British Divorce Court.

London.—Sir Birrell Barnes, president of the divorce court Wednesday granted the countess of Yarmouth, who was Miss Alice Thaw, of Pittsburg, a decree nullifying her marriage to the earl of Yarmouth. The case was heard in private. At the time fixed for the commencement of the proceedings every one not actually engaged on the case was excluded from the court room. The case was practically undefended, and the hearing lasted for only half an hour. The countess, attired in a fashionable black gown, was present, but the earl of Yarmouth was not in court.

The earl of Yarmouth did not defend the case, his lawyer satisfying himself with pointing out that the evidence of the doctor removed any stigma placed upon the earl by the evidence of the plaintiff and that there was no ground upon which the countess could have sued for divorce. The judge pronounced his decree, annulling the marriage without comment. In the ordinary course of events it will be made absolute in six months. No mention was made of a marriage settlement, and it was learned from an authoritative source that, contrary to certain published statements, the question of revising the settlement has not been discussed by the principals or their solicitors and that it is not likely to be discussed. The brevity of the proceedings came as a surprise to everybody except those engaged on the case.

Woman Attorney Wins Case.

St. Paul, Minn.—Miss Elsie Williams, the first woman attorney who ever pleaded before the supreme court of Minnesota, won her case Friday when the supreme court affirmed the judgment of the Ramsey county district court in the proceedings for contempt brought against Robert C. Holbert. The case involved a judgment won for the defendant in an action brought by the receiver appointed in supplementary proceedings. Holbert was charged with contempt, but the lower court dismissed the proceedings.

DENIES THAT HE RAN AWAY.

C. W. Morse Interviewed on Board the Campania.

Queenstown.—A correspondent of the Associated Press Friday night boarded the Cunard line steamer Campania and found Charles W Morse of New York in the smoking room enjoying a game of cards.

Without a moment's hesitation Mr Morse granted an interview to the correspondent.

He was shown extracts from London papers referring to him as having fled from his creditors, etc. Mr Morse said there was absolutely nothing in these reports, saying they were "New York sensationals." He added that he had sent cable dispatches to New York concerning his position and that he would rectify matters when he returned there after about ten days.

CHARLES W. MORSE.

HITCHCOCK TAFT'S MANAGER.

First Assistant Postmaster General Will Resign Soon.

Washington. — Announcement was made Friday of the approaching retirement from the postal service of Frank H. Hitchcock, first assistant postmaster general. Mr. Hitchcock will assume the management of the campaign of Secretary Taft for the Republican nomination to the presidency.

The exact date of the retirement has not been determined definitely, but it probably will be about February 15.

Mr. Hitchcock will be succeeded as first assistant postmaster general by Dr. Charles P. Grandfield, who, for a little more than two years, has been chief of the bureau over which Mr Hitchcock presides. Dr. Grandfield has been actively identified with the postal service for about 20 years and is widely known and highly esteemed, personally and officially.

May Move Thaw to Poughkeepsie.

Fishkill Landing. — With the purpose of seeking an asylum more congenial to Harry Thaw than Matteawan state hospital, where he is now under observation, Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw and Daniel O'Reilly, one of Thaw's counsel, will inspect the insane asylum in Poughkeepsie next Monday. Mrs. Thaw and Mr. O'Reilly visited Thaw Friday, when the contemplated visit to Poughkeepsie was discussed.

Copenhagen.—Owing to recent heavy withdrawals the Copenhagen Freeholders' bank has temporarily suspended payments. The bank's capital is about $5,000,000.

SON SLAYS JUDGE HARGIS

NOTORIOUS KENTUCKY FEUDIST KILLED AFTER QUARREL.

Victim Long Prominent in Politics and Had Been Accused of Complicity in Many Murders.

Jackson, Ky.—Former County Judge James Hargis, for many years member of the state Democratic executive committee, accused of complicity in many murders and a prominent figure in the feuds which have disrupted Breathitt county for several years, was shot and instantly killed in his general store here about 3:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon by his son, Beach Hargis.

The son fired five shots in rapid succession at his father, who fell dead while his clerks were waiting on customers.

The exact cause of the murder has not been learned, but it is supposed to have been the result of differences which have existed between father and son for some time. The two men are reported to have had a severe quarrel several months ago, when the father, it is alleged, was compelled to resort to violence to restrain his son.

Young Hargis, it is said, has been drinking heavily of late. He came into the store late in the afternoon and was apparently under the influence of liquor. Judge Hargis, it is said, spoke to his son about his drinking and a quarrel resulted. Father and son stepped behind a counter in the store, when the son, after only a few minutes' conversation, drew a revolver and fired five shots. Four took effect, the noted mountain character falling dead. The young woman stenographer and the customers in the store rushed for the doors and fled in fright.

Young Hargis was arrested by the town marshal and Grover Blanton and placed in jail. He was raving like a maniac and the officers were compelled to drag him to jail.

Judge Hargis had been for years a prominent figure in Kentucky in political and criminal circles. He had figured in the courts in the mountains for years on account of the murders of Dr. Cox, Attorney Marcum and James Cockrill.

NIGHT RIDERS TERRORIZE.

Destroy Tennessee Barns and Wound Several Persons.

Adams, Tenn. — Night riders, well armed and mounted, visited the farms of Hugh C. Lawrence and Wash T. Vicker, within three miles of this place, destroyed the barns on both farms, together with 20,000 pounds of tobacco, shot and wounded Lawrence and his son Bradley Lawrence, and whipped a negro named Motlow unmercifully.

The riders first visited the farm of Lawrence. He and his son were in the barn loading their tobacco on wagons and heard the night riders coming. They came out of the barn and started toward the house, and when within 15 or 20 yards of the house they met ten or a dozen of the riders and at once opened fire on them. They returned the fire, wounding Lawrence in the cheek and hand, and his son in the leg.

The raiders retreated at the Lawrences' first fire, but rallied with some ten or fifteen reenforcements and renewed the attack, firing 70 or 80 shots through the windows of his house, where he and son had retreated after emptying their weapons. The Lawrences returned the fire, but no casualties occurred. Mrs. Lawrence, who was in the house, narrowly escaped being struck by the flying bullets.

Cald MacLean Is Released.

Tangier.—Cald Sir Harry MacLean, commander of the sultan's bodyguard and next to the sultan the most influential man in Morocco, has arrived here under an escort from the Bandit Raisuli, who has held him under bondage for the past seven months.

He was brought here in accordance with the agreement which the British government finally succeeded in making with Raisuli for his release, in return for which Great Britain will pay $100,000 to Raisuli and guarantee him protection and immunity from arrest.

Country in Grip of Storm.

Chicago.—A sleetstorm which turned to rain Wednesday seriously affected telegraphic communication between Chicago and many outside cities, especially in the west. St. Louis, Omaha and Kansas City were entirely cut off from the east during the early hours by a sleetstorm which surrounded St. Louis and extended into Iowa. In Chicago the storm affected much of the transportation in rush hours. Electric railroads were the principal sufferers.

Public Printer Suspended.

Washington.—President Roosevelt Wednesday temporarily suspended as public printer Charles A. Stillings and appointed William S Rossiter temporarily to fill the duties of that office. The action, as explained officially, is to facilitate the investigation now being made of the government printing office by congress.

St. Louis Man Found Dead.

San Diego, Cal.—S. A. Moody of St. Louis was found dead Friday morning in his room at the Hotel Richmond by his sister, Mrs. L. G. Stachan. Mr. Moody was 60 years old and was a pioneer resident of Webster Grove, a suburb of St. Louis.

Another Missouri County "Dry."

Richmond, Mo.—Bay county voted in favor of local option Friday by a majority of 1,975 out of a total of 2,950. Sixty-seven of the 114 counties in Missouri are now "dry."

Women Not in Demand.

Mr. Arnold Shanklin, just returned from Panama, says that men who go to Panama seem to think a wife one of the first necessities, but generally they are provided with sweethearts, who either come to them properly chaperoned or they go back to the states for them. The government builds nice six-room houses for the married men, and there is a very pleasant social set being formed. He did not seem to agree with Miss Helen Varick Boswell that old maids or bachelor girls are wanted there, the inference being that the right sort of men are either married or about to be when they go to Panama.

Gloomy Outlook.

Long Winded Orator (lowering his voice to an impressive whisper)—"Have you ever, O, my friends, allowed yourselves to wonder where you will be and what you will be doing when another century shall have rolled around?"

Wearied Auditor (in an equally impressive whisper)—"Yes—we'll still be here waiting for you to finish your speech!"

PURE FOOD.

No Food Commissioner of Any State Has Ever Attacked the Absolute Purity of Grape-Nuts.

Every analysis undertaken shows this food to be made strictly of Wheat and Barley, treated by our processes to partially transform the starch parts into a form of Sugar, and therefore much easier to digest.

Our claim that it is a "Food for Brain and Nerve Centres" is based upon the fact that certain parts of Wheat and Barley (which we use) contain Nature's brain and nerve building ingredients, viz.: Phosphate of Potash, and the way we prepare the food makes it easy to digest and assimilate.

Dr. Geo. W. Carey in his book on "The Biochemic System of Medicine" says:

"When the medical profession fully understands the nature and range of the phosphate of potassium, insane asylums will no longer be needed.

"The gray matter of the brain is controlled entirely by the inorganic cell-salt, potassium phosphate.

"This salt unites with albumen, and by the addition of oxygen creates nerve-fluid, or the gray matter of the brain.

"Of course, there is a trace of other salts and other organic matter in nerve-fluid, but potassium phosphate is the chief factor, and has the power within itself to attract, by its own law of affinity, all things needed to manufacture the elixir of life. Therefore, when nervous symptoms arise, due to the fact that the nerve-fluid has been exhausted from any cause, the phosphate of potassium is the only true remedy, because nothing else can possibly supply the deficiency.

"The ills arising from too rapidly consuming the gray matter of the brain cannot be overestimated.

"Phosphate of Potash, is to my mind, the most wonderful curative agent ever discovered by man, and the blessings it has already conferred on the race are many. But 'what shall the harvest be' when physicians everywhere fully understand the part this wonderful salt plays in the processes of life? It will do as much as can be done through physiology to make a heaven on earth.

"Let the overworked business man take it and go home good-tempered. Let the weary wife, nerves unstrung from attending to sick children or entertaining company, take it and note how quickly the equilibrium will be restored and calm and reason assort her throne. No 'provings' are required here. We find this potassium salt largely predominates in nerve-fluid, and that a deficiency produces well-defined symptoms. The beginning and end of the matter is to supply the lacking principle, and in molecular form, exactly as nature furnishes it in vegetables, fruits and grain. To supply deficiencies—this is the only law of cure."

Please observe that Phosphate of Potash is not properly of the drug-shop variety but is best prepared by "Old Mother Nature" and stored in the grains ready for use by mankind. Those who have been helped to better health by the use of Grape-Nuts are legion.

"There's a Reason."

BRAIN POWER

Increased by Proper Feeding.

A lady writer who not only has done good literary work, but reared a family, found in Grape-Nuts the ideal food for brain work and to develop healthy children. She writes:

"I am an enthusiastic proclaimer of Grape-Nuts as a regular diet. I formerly had no appetite in the morning and for 3 years while nursing my four children, had insufficient nourishment for them.

"Unable to eat breakfast I felt faint later, and would go to the pantry and eat cold chops, sausage, cookies, doughnuts or anything I happened to find. Being a writer, at times my head felt heavy and my brain asleep.

"When I read of Grape-Nuts I began eating it every morning, also gave it to the children, including my 10 months old baby, who soon grew as fat as a little pig, good natured and contented.

"I wrote evenings and feeling the need of sustained brain power, began eating a small saucer of Grape-Nuts with milk, instead of my usual indigestible hot pudding, pie, or cake for dessert at night.

"I grew plump, nerves strong, and when I wrote my brain was active and clear; indeed, the dull head pain never returned."

FOLLOWING STRANGE GODS

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

Scripture Authority—1 Kings 11: 4-12.

SERMONETTE

Solomon followed strange gods because it seemed the only way of securing domestic peace and happiness. He broke with God in order that he might win the smiles and favor of the beautiful women of his harem.

It is not hard to find men falling before the same temptation to-day. Nations may are pleasers of themselves and their friends, rather than God.

Following after the Lord, as did David his father, would have been a more difficult road for Solomon to have traveled, just as the road of righteousness to-day appears for the present time to be rough and unpleasant.

Every earthly joy and every earthly friendship which is won by the sacrifice of loyalty and devotion to God is a form of idolatry which is destructive of true piety and goodness.

The broad-mindedness of Solomon which made a place for the gods of the wives he had taken to himself from the nations about is akin to the broad-mindedness of many in the world to-day who seek to fraternize the followers of Christian and non-Christian religions.

But the broad-mindedness that takes in everything but God and his truth, is not broad-mindedness at all, but the rankest kind of narrow-mindedness, for it is letting the things of time shut out the things of eternity; it is permitting the imaginings of the human heart to take the place of the everlasting verities of God.

Doubtless Solomon flattered himself upon the clever manner in which he was reconciling all of the varied interests of his household and his kingdom, but when we read the sequel to the story of his misstep and behold the disintegration of the kingdom and the scattering of God's people we can only exclaim, what folly and wickedness.

The fathers-in-law and the brothers-in-law of Solomon—and he must have had a host of them, for 700 of the fairest of the princesses of the heathen nations about were numbered among his wives—doubtless thought Solomon a jolly good fellow, and felt pretty much at home in the liberal atmosphere Solomon had created in Israel. I can hear some of them congratulating him because he was not narrow and bigoted like his father David, and was willing to see good in the gods of other nations.

Solomon thus made friends with the world, but he lost the friendship of God.

Which would you rather have? "Know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? Whosoever, therefore, will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God." And Jesus said: "Woe unto you, when all men shall speak well of you!"

THE STORY.

HAD the prophet Nathan been alive perchance King Solomon would not have transgressed the law of God so grievously and gone after the gods whom the fair wives of his harem worshiped. Nathan had always held a strong influence over his royal master, and up to the time of his death had maintained the spiritual conditions of the kingdom at a comparatively high level, but when Nathan was gone, other influences were soon at work to turn the heart of the king in other directions than that of the worship and service of the true God.

Chief among these influences was that of the many beautiful women whom King Solomon had taken to wife among the nations about. More and more was it apparent that in the absence of the strong influence of Nathan the power of the women over the king was becoming stronger and stronger. In fact, in the course of time as King Solomon got along in years it became a recognized fact that the quickest way to secure a favor from him was to obtain it through the intermediation of one of his favorite wives.

It is not strange, therefore, that one of the marked changes which should have taken place had to do with the religious condition of the people, for not one of the heathen princesses who had been taken to wife by Solomon but had brought with her her gods, and with the ascendancy of their influence over Solomon came the request that high places be built for these gods where public worship might be held. And when the favorite women had all been thus provided for, there came the clamor from the other women that their gods be honored in a similar way, and that high places be built in which they might worship.

Ahijah the prophet of God had long been watching the trend of events, and his mind was deeply troubled. Time and again he had sought audience with the king and had spoken against the growing idolatry, but the king had put the matter away as of light concern, saying that it was but natural that these princesses should wish to serve the gods whom they had known and served in their own lands.

"But," Ahijah had urged, "these idolatrous practices will not long be confined to these foreign princesses, the wives of my lord the king, for the people, beholding, will be drawn into similar practices."

But the king only laughed at the prophet's fears, declaring that he and his people knew that there was but one God and he the God of the people of Israel; and that the worship of strange gods by the princesses would not make any difference with the people of Israel.

Thus time had gone on, and one by one the high places had increased, until now all the strange gods had been honored: There were high places and beautiful groves to Ashtoreth, to Milcom, to Chemosh, to the terrible Moloch, and to all the other gods, so that Jerusalem and the surrounding country was dotted with these places.

Ahijah watched all this with increasing concern and heart-ache. What more could he say than he had said? What more could he do to check the idolatrous tendency of the people?

Filled with these thoughts he felt impelled one day to go forth and visit those high places. The one in particular toward which he directed his footsteps was that erected to the god Chemosh, the abomination of the people of Moab. It had been built on the hill opposite to Jerusalem and in plain view of the temple which years before Solomon had taken such delight in building to his God.

"Oh, can it be possible!" he exclaimed, "that Solomon has thus dared to defy and dishonor his God? Has he no regard for the God who made him what he is and hath given him all the great prosperity which hath marked his reign? No, it cannot be that Solomon knows of this latest iniquity. It must be that some one of the women more presuming than the others has caused this work to be wrought without the knowledge of the king. I will see him at once." And turning around hastily Ahijah retraced his steps to the city, and went direct to the palace. As he drew near to the great gateway it swung open and the king himself appeared surrounded by a brilliant company of people, in the midst of whom he noted some of the royal women. They turned as they came out of the gate and took the road leading towards the temple.

"Were it not for the presence of the women I should think that Solomon were going to worship," Ahijah muttered to himself as he drew into the shadow of the high wall. "I will follow and see whither the company is journeying. Perchance I will find an opportunity to speak with the king."

And so Ahijah followed, but as the procession drew near to the temple it took the road which turned to the left and went towards the gate that led down into the valley and towards the hill opposite.

"Not going to the temple, that is certain," muttered Ahijah, as he turned and followed.

Out through the gate of the city proceeded the procession, and on down into the valley. When it started to ascend the hill on the opposite side and draw near the place of festivity where the ceremonies were to be held in honor of the god of Chemosh, Ahijah, no longer in doubt now as to the intended destiny of the king, hastened by a side-path to the center of the beautiful grove, and ascending the high place on which the offerings were made to the heathen god he drew his mantle about him, shrouding his face in its depths, and waited.

First came the dancing maidens, the little silver bells with which they were adorned mingling their music with the voices which filled the soft afternoon air. So enrapt were they with their dance and song, and so fascinated was the royal company with the gay sight, that none at first noticed the silent, dark form standing before the great image.

Then one of the fair maidens, lifting her eyes, saw the prophet and gave a cry of astonishment and fear, in which all the others joined as their attention was drawn to the motionless figure standing there. For one brief moment they stood and then fled like frightened birds fleeing before the hawk.

During the silence which followed, King Solomon, by some invisible power which he seemed unable to resist, drew near while the rest of the company fell back. Then the voice of the prophet broke the stillness, with measured word, clear and stern:

"Thus saith the Lord, 'Forasmuch as this is done of thee, oh, King Solomon, and thou hast not kept thy covenant and my statutes, which I have commanded thee, I will surely rend the kingdom from thee, and will give it to thy servant. Notwithstanding in thy days I will not do it, for David thy father's sake; but I will rend it out of the hand of thy son.'"

Immovable as stone Solomon stood, hearing, seeing, knowing nothing save that God by his servant, the prophet Ahijah, had spoken an awful word of judgment upon him and his house. And while he thus stood the prophet passed down the hill and disappeared in the distance.

"He is gone?" at last questioningly spoke the king, looking up to the place where the prophet had stood. "But his words shall abide," he muttered with awesome voice as he, too, turned and retraced his steps to the palace.

TO DECEIVE VOTER

REPUBLICAN PROMISES NOT MADE IN GOOD FAITH.

Pledges to Reform Tariff "After the Election" Are as Valueless as Past Action Taken Against the Trusts.

The department of justice is reported to be about to file a suit to dissolve the combine between the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific railroads. It is now some years since Senator Knox, when attorney general, succeeded in dissolving the partnership between the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads, but for any advantage the public secured from that decision it might as well never have been made. In theory the decision was supposed to again produce competition between the railroads, but in fact, as far as rates are concerned, the combine still holds good. Similar lack of practical results may be expected if the combine of the Harriman railroads is decided by the supreme court as illegal.

What is the use of expending all the energy of the department of justice on a case that if is known in advance will produce no relief to the public? Not a dollar has been saved to the people by these spectacular suits for the large amount expended in prosecuting them. It bothers the railroad managers, but does not prevent them from charging "all the traffic will bear." The administration appears to think it is necessary to do something to show it is the great modern trust-busting machine.

If the Republican leaders wish to curb the lawlessness of the railroads, why they do not include the railroad magnates, such as Harriman, who are the real conspirators that have defied the law? With Harriman in stripes the balance of the law breakers would hasten to mend their ways.

Meanwhile the real trusts that have a virtual monopoly, such as the steel trust, which has plundered the people of millions and is still plundering them, goes unwhipped of justice. It is selling its products much cheaper to foreigners than to our own people. The Republican tariff protects it in so doing and the Republican leaders refuse to even consider tariff reform.

The department of commerce and labor has the evidence of conspiracy in restraint of trade against the steel trust, and if such evidence has not been turned over by President Roosevelt to his attorney general, it must be that political and partisan advantage has held his hand.

The Republican leaders declare they will revise the tariff after election and will so promise in their national platform. Can the voters be fooled again by promises to reform? With the hands of the pickpocket in the pocket of his victim would an honest man fail of aid and wait until he caught the thief in the act the second — or the thousandth — time? Would not such delay in preventing such thefts indicate there was either timidity or collusion between him and the plunderer?

The Republican leaders have the evidence against the trusts. Congress has appropriated millions of the people's money to obtain the evidence and to pay for their prosecution. They acknowledge the tariff has fostered and protects the trusts, else why promise to reform it "after election?" If the Republican leaders had not participated in the plundering of the people by the trusts and corporations and expected further campaign contributions from the same sources, would they wait until "after election?" It would be more reasonable to believe they would, for the sake of the political advantage that real reform will undoubtedly give them, at once set the machinery of the law in motion and not adjourn congress until the tariff which shelters the trusts was radically revised.

The "Dukes" and the Tariff.

The Chicago Journal says that the "Republican grand dukes" may think that they have bit on a device to satisfy the people by a bill for a heavy tax on those that deal in futures on grain and stocks that with it time may be passed until summer is come and it shall be too late to do anything. It then says:

"This effort to distract popular attention from the question of prime importance, namely, revision of the tariff to stop the exactions of rubber trusts, is shrewdly planned. But Republican grand dukes are in error if they think the people will be fooled by it. . . . Despite attempts to sidetrack the tariff issue it will be the foremost subject of debate in the next campaign. If the Republican party avoids it while the Democrats pledge themselves to remedy the great abuses that have grown up, the people are likely to be found on the Democratic side. The country is tired of being robbed by tariff protected industries, which charge Americans high prices while selling their goods abroad in competition with the products of 'pauper foreign labor' after paying the cost of freight across the Atlantic ocean."

When it is announced semiofficially that a Republican congress has the decks cleared for action in a campaign year, it is not thought necessary to explain that the clearing process consisted in removing everything below deck except the blank cartridges whose subsequent explosions attract public attention without alarming campaign contributors.

STEEL TRUST GROWS BOLD.

Openly Sells Goods Abroad Cheaper Than to Home Consumers.

A special dispatch from Pittsburg to the New York World says: "Tin plate consumers of the country have raised a howl because the United States Steel corporation has sold to Welsh tin plate makers 100,000 tons of sheet and tin plate bars, $10 cheaper than they are quoting manufacturers in the United States. While the corporation is charging the American tin makers $29 per ton, it is laying down the same product in Swansea at $21.90. The cost of transporting the bars to Wales is about $4.10 per ton, so that the actual price received f. o. b. Pittsburg is $17.80 per ton, as against $29 per ton quoted to American mills in the Pittsburg district."

The Industrial World of Pittsburg, an iron and steel publication founded on perpetuate tariff protection for those industries, commenting editorially on this export of tin plate bars, declares "these transactions deserve the severest condemnation, and that nothing can do more to discredit the protective system than such operations. The tariff on such material is high, yet it is only $6.72. Did not the Steel corporation tie the foreign buyers up tightly, and did not the latter know that if they resold, their shipments would be stopped very promptly or they could load these bars back on to the cars and ship them to the United States at a profit after paying transportation charges. The cheapness of keeping mills going and employing labor through these exports is an insult to the intelligence of the American public."

Our trust busting administration has persisted in taking no steps to punish the gigantic steel trust. This exposure of its plundering of the American people by making them pay "boom" prices for its products in this time of panic and selling abroad at an enormous discount should open the eyes of even the most partisan Republican to the iniquities of the tariff. Nor should it be forgotten that although there is a mass of evidence collected by the department of commerce and labor against the steel trust, the president has not seen fit to publish it and it is openly said that he has ordered it suppressed. Does President Roosevelt regard the steel trust as a good trust, or is he under obligations to Steel Trust Magnates Morgan and Carnegie for liberal campaign contributions to Republican national campaign funds? And the further question would seem to be timely: Does this Republican congress intend to stand pat on the tariff steel schedules with this evidence of tariff monopoly and tariff plundering exposed for their consideration?

Unconstitutional Taxation.

The government derives money from taxation. It does not create money, else taxation would be useless. The right of taxation can be used only in aid of a public object; that is, an object within the purpose for which governments are established. It cannot, therefore, be exercised in aid of a private enterprise, whether that be a church, a political party, a bank or a shoe shop. Many decisions supporting this proposition are cited on page 431 of United States supreme court reports, volume 175. On the same page is found the proposition, supported by many authorities, that a literal compliance with the mandatory provisions of the Constitution, whether affirmative or negative, is a condition precedent to the validity of any law laying taxes on the property of the people, and that attempts to evade such constitutional provisions constitute violations of them. Hence the Roosevelt-Bryan plan of congress appropriating the necessary campaign funds for the political parties would seem to be unconstitutional.

Derelict Republican Leaders.

The Methodist and Baptist preachers are opposed to Speaker Cannon being nominated by the Republicans for president, because of his profanity. Even with the odor of cocktails about him they prefer Fairbanks, who does not swear in public. It is a question whether the cusswords of Uncle Joe are worse than Lincoln and even Washington indulged in, and the preachers should remember that his homely, vigorous speech is needed to impress the Republican members of congress with what will happen to them if they kick over the Republican traces. To manage the bunch of cattle that Uncle Joe has to daily round up, with their fallacies, whims and political sins to answer for, is enough to make an angel weep and a righteous man, much more Uncle Joe, cuss early and often.

The Fly in the Ointment.

An aggregate of natural wealth in the United States far in excess of that in all the European countries combined would inevitably cause a glow of pride to suffuse the country from ocean to ocean in the absence of those reservations of enthusiasm which must be inevitably counted on as incidental to the unfair prices of the necessaries of life in America and the hardships which the people suffer from that wholly unnecessary cause.

Who Is to Blame?

Some Republicans are blaming President Roosevelt for the panic, which is a change from the general Republican program of blaming it on the Democrats. But we fully expect to hear when the presidential campaign is under way that fear of Democratic success was responsible for the "flurry," and that it would have been a real panic but for the wisdom of Republican statesmen and their prosperity-producing policies.

What Is Going On in Different Sections of Kentucky.

COUNTY UNIT BILL.

It Is Said, Will Be Used to Elect Bradley or Aid Anti-Beckham Democrat.

Frankfort, Ky.—It is reported in certain quarters that the end of the senatorial fight is in sight, and it will come about through the agency of the county unit local option bill.

According to the plan outlined the county unit bill will be taken from the committee on religion and morals and recommended to the committee on Kentucky statutes. This will be a victory for the liquor men, and later the bill will be killed and in exchange for the help of the republicans in killing it the anti-Beckham democrats will vote for Bradley.

If this fails to elect him Bradley will, according to the story, withdraw from the race and let the republicans unite on some anti-Beckham democrat and elect him.

This can not be brought about for ten days or two weeks, but that is the best information that can be secured on the situation.

Another informal ballot for United States senator was made necessary because each house of the legislature adjourned just before noon in respect to the memory of Wm. Goebel, who died eight years ago.

Only 38 members answered present and no formal ballot was taken.

TO BAR RACE TRACK BETTING.

Act To Abolish State Racing Commission Also Introduced by Oliver.

Frankfort, Ky.—Senator A. J. Oliver, of Allen county, introduced a bill to prevent betting on race horses at any track in Kentucky, and imposing a fine of $200 for each offense. Senator Oliver also introduced a bill to repeal the act creating the state racing commission. The bills came without notice and created surprise, inasmuch as the thoroughbred horse business is one of the largest industries in Kentucky, though not in the section from which Senator Oliver comes. It is believed that the bills will die in the hands of the committees. It is regarded as doubtful if Senator Oliver himself will seek to force the passage of the bills, but he desires to place himself on record as being against betting on races. The bill to prevent betting on races is sweeping. It not only prohibits betting, but provides that any person or corporation owning and controlling race tracks, if convicted of permitting betting on their property, shall be fined not less than $500 for the first offense and not less than $1,000 for each offense thereafter.

Licking Rolling Mill Burns.

Covington, Ky.—Fire which broke out in the early morning gutted the Licking Rolling mill, Twelfth street and Licking river. W. J. Droege estimates the damage as $200,000, partly insured. The Licking Rolling mill was one of the largest industrial ventures operated in the state of Kentucky and usually employed about 400 men, manufacturing bar iron. The origin is unknown.

Electrocution Bill Passes.

Frankfort, Ky.—In the senate Mr. McNutt's bill providing that future executions in the state shall be by electrocution and take place inside the state prison at Frankfort, was passed, also the Newman bill regulating the weight of packages or sacks of flour and meal and requiring the weight to be printed on the sacks.

Forecasted By a Dream.

Glasgow, Ky.—The 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Eorge Parrish, was burned to death at their home, near Walnut Hill. Mrs. Parrish, mother of the child, says she was warned of the horrible fate of her babe about three weeks ago in a dream, and that her baby was burned to death precisely as she dreamed it would be.

To Stop Tax War.

Louisville, Ky.—To put an end to tax litigation it is said that a bill will soon be put before the legislature transferring the entire title of the Louisville Water Co. to the city. At present the city owns but the controlling stock, and the company has been compelled to pay city, county and state taxes.

Heir to Vast Fortune.

Lexington, Ky.—Ex-Mayor H. T. Duncan has been notified that he is one of several heirs to a Scotland fortune estimated at $14,000,000. Mrs. Angie Putnum, Salem, Mass., has organized a movement to engage legal counsel to investigate the property and asks Duncan's co-operation.

Applegate Again Tipped.

Covington, Ky.—It is said that Gov. Willson was ready to make the appointment of L. T. Applegate as the commonwealth attorney to succeed Maurice Galvin. It is claimed the office was offered to Attorney Charles Walker, who declined it.

Broke Up Church Meeting.

Somerset, Ky.—Charles Thompson, of Rockcastle county, was shot twice by Jordan Hatcher at a meeting at Friendship church, causing the meeting to break up in a panic. The trouble was over a woman. Thompson can not recover. Hatcher was arrested.

Bosworth Bill Passes Senate.

Frankfort, Ky.—The senate passed the Bosworth bill to vote on an amendment to the constitution which will permit state aid to build public roads and allow the counties to increase the tax vote for public roads.

DEMENTED GIRL

Who Sought to Drown, Was Frozen to Death in the Icy Creek.

Frankfort, Ky.—Becoming suddenly demented, Miss Sallie Ruth Wilson, aged 28, daughter of J. S. Wilson, a prosperous farmer, rushed from her residence near here in her night clothes in the early morning and jumped into a creek. She remained in the water waist high until she was frozen to death. She would have been drowned but the ice prevented her from sinking far enough into the water. Her body was bruised and her hands lacerated by the ice in her desperate struggles to free herself from her pinioned position after she had come to her senses and realized her fate.

Her aged father and mother, half clad, groped in the darkness to locate her. "I am smothering," she screamed to her mother as she rushed out of the house and, fearing that she intended to commit suicide, they hurried after her.

After searching for a half hour the parents found their daughter in a sitting posture embedded in the ice. She has been brooding of late over the suicide of her brother, H. A. Wilson, two years ago.

COUNTY UNIT BILL.

Disposition of Measure Said to Be Involved in Senatorial Fight.

Frankfort, Ky.—If W. O. Bradley is not elected to the senate by the present legislature, it is said that it will be because of a rule of the house which requires a two-thirds vote to take a bill or report out of the hands of a committee.

Under this rule the contested election committees can not be compelled to report, and, therefore, no democrat can be unseated if the committees decline to report, even if a bare majority of the house are willing to vote to unseat.

The same rule will apply to the county unit local option bill if it ever reaches a committee that is unfavorable to it.

The committee on religion and morals, which now has the bill, announced that it would not report the bill until next week, and then a fight will be made to recommit the bill to the statutes committee.

It is positively asserted that Bradley will get no democratic votes until this bill is defeated, hence there will be no senator elected until the county unit measure is disposed of for keeps.

Under Ku-Klux Law.

Paducah, Ky.—Under the old Ku-Klux law Martin Farley and Tom Childs, young farmers of Marshall county, were held to the grand jury at Benton on the charge of "whitecapping." The accused, it is alleged, whipped Steve Whitfield, a negro, who worked on the farm of Zeh Hollaad. It is charged that they belong to a gang organized to drive the negroes out of Marshall county.

Phones Ordered Out.

Paducah, Ky.—The aldermen followed the action of the councilmen in ordering the East Tennessee Telephone Co.'s telephones out of the city buildings. Notice was served on the company at midnight. Underwriters assert that risks will now be greater, and anticipate a raise in insurance rates because 90 per cent. of the fire alarms are sent in by telephone.

Night Riders Cut Telephone Wires.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—A small body of night riders operated in Western Christian county. Telephone wires were cut in several places to prevent an alarm being given. Lucian Means, a farmer, is reported to have been whipped for having sold tobacco outside of the association.

Heir to $30,000.

Louisville, Ky.—James Gardiner, a policeman, has just received word from St. Louis that he was sole beneficiary to an estate valued at $30,000, which was left to him by his aunt, Mrs. Bridget Garvey.

Given the Limit.

Harrodsburg, Ky.—Charles Reed, who shot and wounded Chief of Police Smith some weeks ago, confessed and was given the limit, five years in the penitentiary. One of the officer's eyes was shot out.

Troops to Depart.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—Company D, Kentucky State Guard, is to be relieved from guard duty here by a detail of 14 men from Company H, of Middlesboro, under command of Maj. George W. Albrecht.

Said to Have Aided Convict.

Frankfort, Ky.—E. P. Ashcraft, a former convict, was indicted by the Franklin grand jury on the charge of aiding in the escape of Bert Wing.

Fifty More Are Idle.

Covington, Ky.—Fifty more men were laid off in the Q. & C. shops at Ludlow, which practically leaves but few men in the shops. It was said that the same rule would go into effect in the shops located at Somerset, Ky.

Veteran Minister Dies.

Marrowbone, Ky.—Elder Drury H. Lollar, a nonogenarian of Blacks' Ferry, and one of the wealthiest citizens of this county, died at his home after an illness of many months, due to his extreme age.

H. W. Rouse, a tiller in the Gunpowder hills, was in town one day last week driving his $500 team of blacks. They are beauts.

James E. Smith delivered to William Kirkpatrick, Monday, 44 20 pound hogs at $3 85 cents per hundred pounds. Mr. Smith says these hogs would have brought him more money last fall.

There have been several cases of smallpox in this county this winter, the existence of which was kept such a secret that the public, generally, knew nothing about them until after the patients had recovered.

In this issue will be found the advertisement of the sale of a large quantity of personal property belonging to the estate of the late Daniel Bedinger, of Richwood, on the 27th inst. Examine the list and you may find many articles that you want.

Lonnie Acra called at the RECORDER office Monday morning and reported five of H. L. Tanner's children and two of Albert Beemon's in bed with measles. He says about twenty others have recovered from it, while there are a great many to have it yet in that neighborhood.

Johnson Rogers, who had a bad case of appendicitis at his home out on the Florence pike, has about recovered. His two boys who were quite sick of colds, last week, have recovered. Mr. Rogers has had five attacks of appendicitis. He attributes the trouble to being thrown by a mule several years ago.

R. C. Youell, who moved from Virginia in the 40's to the farm now owned and occupied by C. E. Rector, about a mile south of Burlington, and moved to Miesouri about 50 years ago, died at Santa Fe, that State, on the 7th inst. His wife died about one month before. Many of the older readers of the RECORDER remember Mr. Youell.

William Arnold, one of the Equity warehouse men at Bellevue, in speaking of the effort to cut out the 1908 crop of tobacco, last Saturday upon his return from the meeting at Richwood, remarked that 100 per cent of the crop would be cut out in his neighborhood. A large acreage of tobacco is generally raised in that part of the county, but the opposition to a 1908 crop has been growing ever since it was proposed to cut it out.

Special from Walton:

Mr. J. D. Dcubman moved here from Crittenden a few days since, and will be quite an acquisition to the local business element. He is a first-class auctioneer and will be pleased to respond to all demands for his services in that capacity; but this is merely a side line as he will have charge of the large brick yard which will be put in operation here on the site of the late Snider cannery as soon as the weather will permit. This brick yard is expected to soon develop into one of the principal industries of Walton.

Seven of the local shootists had a 25 bird contest last Saturday afternoon, at which Rex Berkshire surprised himself and all his companions by hitting 25 straight. Last fall he was away down in the list, and his sudden change of form is a surprise. The party who sprung the trap could not get the pigeons out of his range. Rex says, "I will shoot no more until my record is beaten." Following is the individual scores out of a possible 25: Rex Berkshire 25, Jas. Slayback 19, Bert Rouse 17, Earl Smith 15, Albert Conner 15, Kirb Tanner 14, Russell Smith 13. There will be another shoot next Saturday afternoon. Everybody is invited.

For Sale—Three fresh milch cows. Apply to Butler Carpenter, Florence.

Nothing has been done, recently, towards pushing along the improvement of the Woolper turnpike. As no tobacco is to be grown this year, those who are to be benefitted by putting that road in condition to entitle it to the assistance of an appropriation, by the fiscal court, will never find a better time in which to do the work. It will be easy to secure the necessary labor, and those who have agreed to do specified amounts of work will have ample time in which to comply with their agreement. In a few months next summer the road can be put in good condition and when completed those who have done the work will not miss the time they put in. The crossing at Plattsburg is reported to be getting worse, that is more dangerous, all the time, and travel has been diverted from the crossing proper to anywhere the travel thinks safest. Put on your working clothes, men, and get the work under way.

No More Groundhog for Him.

Frank Hammon, who resides down on Gunpowder creek where the ground hog has been recognized, from time immemorial, as the most reliable of all weather prophets, says his hogship is a fraud. Mr. Hammon use to have implicit confidence in the ground hog, but when he caught one m...dering about his premises, one day last week, when, according to tradition, it should have been in its subterranean habitation there to remain six weeks from the second of this month, his faith vanished. He says there is no question but what the groundhog saw its shadow on the second of February, but as it failed to return to seclusion for six weeks, it lost its standing as a weather prognosticator. The specimen Mr. H. captured was in fine flesh and yielded a considerable quantity of excellent oil that can be put to good use many times during the year. Ground hog predictions don't go with Mr. H. any more.

Look Out For Him.

A smooth individual has been victimizing the farmers in some parts of Kentucky during the last few weeks and the Federal authorities have begun to search for him. The Agricultural Department is especially anxious that the man be apprehended, as he is representing himself to be a representative of that department. According to reports, the man has been operating extensively and has succeeded in swindling many farmers. A simple plan is issued by this fellow to victimize the farmers. He represents himself as an immigration agent connected with the Department of Agriculture, which fact indicates that he is ignorant of the government service, for the Department of Agriculture has nothing to do with immigration. He spends several days in each locality gathering information for the use of the department, he claims, all of the time enjoying the hospitality of the farmers. He carries a camera and pretends to take many pictures of each farm. In view of the courtesies shown him, the impostor, when he takes his departure, agrees to furnish to each farmer many of the views he has photographed. All he asks is two or three dollars from each to pay the actual cost of reproduction of the photograph. The farmer is made to believe that the picture will be published in a report being gotten out by the Department of Agriculture, and many of them jump at the opportunity to get the original photographs for a few dollars. It is said that the impostor has victimized hundreds of farmers, having collected large sums of money for pictures that have never been delivered. As a matter of fact, the Department of Agriculture has no agent in the South at this time, and the man is guilty not only of cheating and swindling, but also of violating the Federal statutes making it a crime to pretend to be a government agent.

The Courier is informed that Rev. Wm. McMillan has accepted a call to the Baptist church at Burlington, Ky., and will shortly move from West Virginia to Boone county to enter upon his duties in a new field. It is probable he will reside in Walton but wherever he locates the people of the community in which he lives will find him and his family exemplary citizens. —Williamstown Courier.

Lewis, the third child of John Sandford by his second wife, died of grippe and heart trouble at the home of his father in Covington, last Wednesday and was buried at Highland last Friday. The deceased was about twenty years of age, and an industrious young man who was aiming to accomplish something in this world.

Henry Clore, who resides out on the East Bend road, was in town, one day last week, considerably discouraged on account of the very poor progress his small grain has made. He was having the stalks in his wheat field broken, but is fearful that his wheat will not be worth cutting.

It seems that the ground hog and the weather clerk have had some misunderstanding. One day we have genuine hog weather and the next day it is an altogether different article from that which his hogship has promised us.

The crossing of Woolper at Plattsburg has been washed out until it is one of the worst creek crossings in the county. A foot rise or a slight freez—Yes it a very dangerous undertaking to cross there, and there have been several very narrow escapes there during high water, and ice within the last year. The mail carriers on Burlington route No. 1 and the Petersburg route have to cross at that point, and, undoubtedly, this crossing will be the cause of these routes being discontinued if it is not properly bridged. It is up to the citizens of this neighborhood and the patrons of these two rural routes to put their shoulders to the wheel and all lift together. Don't be afraid of lifting too hard, and it will be surprising to see how soon we can have this dangerous crossing bridged, and relieve the central part of Boone county of one of the worst drawbacks that it has ever known. It will cost about $2,500 to properly bridge this crossing. In its present condition you can not cross without putting your life and property in danger, and the people for miles on each side are daily in danger of losing their daily mail, which no intelligent people can afford to do without. This is a proposition that should be thoroughly considered by everyone, and when the subscription paper is presented don't get nervous and forget to loosen your purse strings, for that is what counts.

ENEMIES IN THE WAY

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1908, by the Author, W. S. Edson.)

Scripture Authority—1 Kings 11: 14-25.

SERMONETTE.

"And the Lord stirred up an adversary unto Solomon." Man is consciously or unconsciously working out the purposes and plans of God. The good are the positive forces; the evil the negative forces; the one is constructive, the other destructive. In co-operation with the good and in spite of the evil God is working out his will in the world. Even the wrath of man is made to praise God.

The phrase which we have quoted above is a singular one and presents a mystery concerning God's ways which offers a difficulty to some people. But this difficulty disappears when we realize that it is a declaration from God's point of view.

From God's point of view his is the master hand which directs each move on the chess board of human life, so that the evil forces are but working out their own defeat and aiding in the final triumph which is to be his.

From the human point of view only the surface facts are apparent, and it would seem as though events transpired Independent of God's will and in spite of his best purposes.

There is a sense in which man may be independent of God, and choose a way which is contrary to God's will, but he who knows the end from the beginning sees a thousand and one ways in which the very energies of evil may be harnessed to the working out of the Divine will.

So in these troubles which arose to threaten Solomon and endanger his kingdom we find that it was God who was operating to the punishment of Israel and her king because of their sin and wickedness.

But God used the human forces as his rod of chastisement, and events followed only their natural development. Seeds had been sown in the past which in the course of the years germinated and then bore fruit as the iniquity of Solomon provided the favorable soil and conditions.

And yet it was the Lord who stirred up these adversaries against Solomon, and while Hadad the Edomite and Rezon the son of Eliadah and the other adversaries conspired against Solomon and sought to accomplish their own selfish aims and work out their own revenge, they were but executing the judgment of God to the purging of his people from their sins and the bringing to pass of the ultimate triumph of his righteousness in the earth.

What a long process it is and how untiring and faithful God is. To the finite mind it sometimes seems almost a hopeless struggle. As we contemplate the powers of evil and the weakness and sin of those who profess to be God's people playing into the hands of the evil forces, it looks as though everything was going wrong, but we need to get the vision of David which enabled him to exclaim hopefully and joyfully: "I had fainted unless I had believed to see the goodness of the Lord in the land of the living."

THE STORY.

WHAT distress and unrest the guilty heart knows as the occasional rumblings of present trouble tell of the gathering storm. How often on a summer's day when the sky has been bright and the air filled with the songs of birds and all seemed so full of joy and peace, there has come the speck of a cloud in the distance, there has flashed out for an instant the fiery tongue of the lightning, and the low faint rumble of thunder has come to the ear, all telling of a gathering storm, but as one has turned his face upward towards the sun and again has listened to the songs of the birds, the thought of the coming storm has been forgotten in the delight which is found in the beauty and the brightness of the moment. Then again comes the lightning flash a little more vivid than before and the voice of the thunder becomes more insistent, and again with startled vision one sees that the cloud speck has grown. But it seems so far away after all, and it is so bright and cheery all about that one persuades himself that the storm will not come thither, and so again the cloud and the lightning and the thunder are forgotten as one becomes absorbed in the pleasure of the moment.

So was it with Solomon. The riches and splendors of his kingdom were unsurpassed by any of the nations about, and as the years had come and gone the king had given himself up more and more to the ease and delights and luxuries with which he was surrounded. Step by step he had yielded to the enervating influences of palace and harem, and more and more had he come to live on that sensual plane where the pleasure of the moment is of more concern than any reward which self-denial might claim in the future.

Pleasure is enervating, and offers productive soil in which the seeds of trouble may grow. Solomon with his growing love for the ease and pleasures of life became more and more petulant and exacting with those upon whom rested the administration of the affairs of the kingdom. There was a constantly increasing extravagance in maintaining the royal household, for with the multiplying of the high places to the gods of the many princesses of the harem, had come the luxuriance and voluptuousness attendant upon the ceremonies and festivities. This placed an additional burden upon the people, for from them must be raised the increasing amounts needed by the king. The collectors of the tribute were forced to be more exacting, and all manner of corrupt methods were countenanced so long as the required amount was forthcoming. This must naturally lead to discontent on the part of the people and undercurrents of murmuring began to be heard upon every hand.

Whether these murmurings of discontent reached the ears of the king or not certain it is that they spread to the surrounding nations so that Hadad the Edomite heard of it in Egypt whither he had fled years before to escape the unrelenting vengeance which Joab, the captain of David's army, had inflicted upon his father's house and his father's people.

And way to the north to the city of Damascus came tidings of these things and were as sweet music in the ears of Rezon, the son of Eliadah, for said he:

"Now, perchance I will be able to repay Solomon for all the evil which his father David did unto my master Hadadezer when he destroyed Zobah and killed the people thereof!"

Secretly, therefore, Rezon sent emissaries into the land of Israel, and they found no difficulty in reaching to the very heart of the royal city of Jerusalem, for the open relations which Solomon had established with all the nations about had made of Jerusalem a perfect thoroughfare for those of other lands, and as one after another the high places were set up and the gods of all the nations about were openly honored and served, these foreigners came to feel quite at home. Thus it was that the spies of Rezon found it an easy task to remain at Jerusalem and to follow the trend of affairs, and enable their king to make incursions into the northern part of the kingdom. And when the army of Israel was sent to intercept and punish these marauding bands, these same spies in Jerusalem were able to keep Rezon informed of every move of the advancing army.

Thus it was that Rezon became a sharp thorn in the flesh to Solomon, and brought to him days and nights of anxiety and distress. And well it would have been if these periods of trouble had driven the king from his sinful pleasures and the following of the strange gods back to the true God; but, instead, Solomon sought to drive away his troubled thoughts and to stifle his uneasy conscience by plunging yet deeper into the whirl of festivities and pleasures which marked this period of his reign. Not a day but what some one of the many, many high places was the scene of a gorgeous and gay assemblage, and often there were half a dozen festival occasions in full play simultaneously, and to these idolatrous celebrations Solomon suffered himself to be drawn by his wives.

So it came to pass that the sins of Solomon offered the opportunity to his enemies of troubling the kingdom and bringing distress upon the people. And while Rezon served as a menacing hand at the north, Hadad returning from Egypt, where he had won great prestige and power with Pharaoh, having married the sister of the wife of Pharaoh, came into the south country and was not long in stirring up trouble for the king there.

"Who is this Hadad that would dare to narrow the borders of Israel?" demanded the king one day, petulantly, as report reached his ears of the increasing power of a band of men who had come into the south country and were extending their influence over the people there.

And when the king was told that he was the son of the Edomite king whom Joab the captain of his father's army had slain, he was troubled, and when he learned further, that he had just come from Egypt and was in special favor with Pharaoh, the powerful ruler of Egypt, he feared greatly saying:

"Shall we indeed suffer the loss of our kingdom to the south?" Now is coming to pass that which the prophet Ahijah declared should be."

"Yea, but did not he say that it should not be during thy days, but during the days of thy son when he should come to the throne?" asked one of Solomon's advisers, reassuringly.

"Verily I believe thou art right," exclaimed the king, with a sigh of relief, and at that moment a courtier announced the departure of the company for the festivities to the god Chemosh, and King Solomon arose and went with them.

Once a Corporal, Now a Minister.

M. Praschek, who now enters the Austrian cabinet as minister in the place of Count Auersperg, is a farmer in a small way who derives a portion of his income from the retail sale of the milk of his cows, having a farm of about 60 acres.

He put in three years in the army, not as an officer, but as a bugler, and figured as such in the reserve forces of the army with the rank of corporal.

STRANGE ETIQUETTE IN CHINA.

One's Own Possessions Always Referred to in Derogatory Terms.

"The mandarin shocked me," said the missionary, "the first time I dined with him, by referring to his wife as 'his good-for-nothing marital mistake!'

"'But,' I interposed, 'it is said that your lady is brilliant, beautiful and kind.'

"He smiled awkwardly and changed the subject. However, with the course of bamboo sprouts he mentioned his wife again, calling her this time his 'stupid hand-the-clothes.'

"'I am sorry your marriage is an unhappy one,' said I.

"With an embarrassed air he began to discourse on the high-binders. Every now and then, though, his wife's name came up, and he called her in quick succession his 'thorn in the flesh,' his 'punishment for youthful sin,' his 'hideous and lunatic spouse,' and his 'vile one of the inner room.'

"I spoke up impatiently.

"'Be more careful,' I said, 'regarding the lady. There are two sides to every story, and I must tell you that your unmanly abuse inclines me very favorably towards your poor wife.'

"He threw down his chop-sticks impatiently, scattering shark's fin and soy over the table.

"'Don't you understand,' he cried, 'that all this is etiquette, pure etiquette? The Chinese host by the laws of etiquette must speak of his own possessions as unworthy and vile—even of his wife he must speak so, though she be a full moon for beauty and a Chang Kivi, or sacred cow, for wisdom. I have no fault to find with my wife; quite to the contrary; I only deride her in order to show proper Chinese courtesy to you. And now, I beg, don't interrupt again.'"

The missionary smiled ruefully.

"It was a bad break for me to make," he said. "The man was a powerful mandarin. But it is truly most shocking, at the beginning, to hear these men abuse their women folk."

Lieutenant Does His Own Cooking.

An army lieutenant writes with reference to the proposed increase in pay: "I have changed station four times within the past nine months (no expense, of course), starting from the Philippines and ending here—the last ditch. I am post quartermaster, commissary, and a few other things of lesser importance, but not negligible. My wife is ill; I am cooking three meals a day with my own hands; I can't afford to hire a cook, as they are $40 a month here, which is nearly a third of my own salary. Painters and plasterers get five and six dollars a day for eight hours' work. Does the richest nation under the sun expect an officer of the army to do his own cooking and housework? Can he do it and attend to his various official duties? I can't, even by working 16 hours a day instead of eight. Now, what is a man to do? Hire a cook, live a little less like a tramp, and let his notes go to protest, or do his own cooking and let his duties suffer? Maybe I should resign my commission and look for a job of painting and plastering, but I will not. There are plenty of other officers, too, who are in just as bad circumstances as I am."—Army and Navy Journal.

A Tragic Resemblance.

"I believe I would rather be downright ugly than have a face that reminds every Tom, Dick and Harry of some one he knows or has known," said a comely southern girl to her companion across the tea table. "Only yesterday I had a most embarrassing experience, and it isn't the first I've had because I look like some one else," she went on. "I got into a subway train at the Grand Central station and took a cross seat opposite a woman. She looked at me and started perceptibly; then she leaned closer to me and looked squarely in my face and her own turned very pale. Suddenly she put her muff to her eyes and sobbed until the tears rolled down over her coat. I was so uncomfortable and at such a loss what to do that I got up at the nearest station and waited for another train. I supposo I was the image of some lost daughter or sister."—New York Press.

Pasteurize the Milk.

Nathan Straus sends a message to American mothers to the effect that raw milk is not good for children, the scientific men of the world having agreed upon the fact. Milk should be pasteurized and the mother can do this herself in her own kitchen. The international congress at Brussels warned against raw milk, because of the danger from tuberculosis. It is not the poor alone who need instruction upon the subject, as many of the babies of the rich suffer from the effects of raw milk, but Americans are said to know more on the subject than people of other countries.

In Husband's Memory.

Mrs. Custer has bought 16 lots in Broxville, and to perpetuate the memory of her husband, Gen. Custer, will build a large memorial home. Aged literary women will be admitted into it, and it will no doubt be a very beautiful place, as it is pleasantly situated, many artists and literary persons now residing near the proposed site.

Formalities.

"No intelligent person pays any attention to ghosts," said the dogmatic person.

"Perhaps not," answered Miss Cayenne, "unless the ghost has been able to secure an introduction from some psychic research society."

HUMAN NERVE CELLS

SPINE ALONE CONTROLS ABOUT THREE BILLION.

Dr. Alfred Wenzel's Lecture Before the Mug-House Members Said to Have Set Many Brains a-Working.

Dr. Alfred Wenzel delivered a short lecture before the members of the Mug-House club, which set many brains a-working. His remarks opened brain cells that had been hermetically sealed for years. We are supposed to have 600,000,000 nerve cells in the brain alone. Each cell is an archive in which some impression is stored away for safe-keeping.

We have dictionaries to-day which contain half a million words; yet the average vocabulary of an educated man is less than 5,000 words. Scientists are the ablest linguists, because they are manufacturers of words and phrases. Now, you are a smart man. You have 600,000,000 little nerve cells in your caput. Of these you may make 600,000 useful in the course of a long life. The rest—599,400,000—are of no especial value. Sometimes they get filled with water. Sometimes they dry up. Your brain becomes a dismantled plant.

The most wonderful of all mechanisms is the spine, which is designed principally for the protection of the spinal cord, or marrow—an integral part of the brain. The chiropractor believes that each of the 26 joints in your backbone positively controls by means of nerves (attached to the spinal cord) some particular part of your body. It is estimated that there are 3,000,000 nerve cells under such control. Osteopathy is based on the principle that circulation is the essence of life; chiropractic is based on restoration of nerve action.

If the spinal column is displaced and a single vertebrae presses on the cord it produces paralysis of the parts below the pressure point. If it is displaced at the neck so as to press upon or injure the cord, it generally causes instant death. If the joints, or vertebrae, are put in place by the chiropractic thrust before circulation is stopped, recovery is possible.

The following statement by Dr. Wenzel made members of the Mug-House club gasp: A young boy about 11 suffered from paralysis of the right arm. He could not lift it to the horizontal to save his life, and the member was otherwise useless. His parents had spent much money to have him cured, but in vain. Prof. —— undertook to effect a partial cure, and the demonstration in chiropractic was made before a large class. The boy was asked to hold a thermometer in each hand, and the temperatures were found to be seven degrees apart. The good arm, of course, was the warmer, because of its better circulation.

Prof. —— said: "Now, gentlemen, when I have discovered the dorsal vertebrae whose nerve controls this boy's right arm, I shall give it the chiropractic thrust; you will please to note the result." After fingering a moment along the boy's spine the thrust was given. No pain accompanied it. In a few seconds the thermometer in the paralyzed hand registered the same temperature as that in the left. And —in a few weeks the boy could use his right arm as well as his left; life had been restored to it by a very slight adjustment of a single joint of the backbone.

Evil in Eating Hot Foods.

There is no doubt that most people ruin their teeth and digestive system by taking food at too high a temperature. One can not get into a hot bath if it is over 112 degrees; 105 degrees is dangerous, and even 100 degrees is warm. But from experiments made it appears that we eat meat at 115 degrees temperature, beans at 132 degrees, potatoes at 150 degrees. The average temperature of tea is 135 degrees, and it may be sipped, but can not be swallowed in large quantities, if it exceeds 142 degrees.

PERUNA EDITORIAL NO. I.

Dr. Hartman is now offering Peruna to the public as a regular pharmaceutical product. It is just as ethical as any compound put up for the medical profession. No straining of medical ethics can find any fault with it. THE PRINCIPAL ACTIVE INGREDIENTS are prominently incorporated in the label on the bottle, that the people may know that the claims made for Peruna have a true justification.

The only departure we shall make from medical ethics in the conduct of Peruna affairs in the future, is the fact that we shall continue to advertise and sell our product TO THE PEOPLE.

If we would agree to sell to doctors only, to advertise for doctors only, then the medical fraternity would be obliged to recognize Peruna as being entirely within their approval.

BUT WE SHALL NOT DO THIS.

We shall continue to offer Peruna to the people. We shall continue to convey to the people our claims for Peruna as a household remedy. We shall continue to supply the people with free literature, teaching them how to use our medicine, teaching them how to avoid disease, teaching them many things of benefit to the home. We shall continue to do this, whether the medical profession like it or not.

We are proposing from this time on to take the public into our confidence. Notwithstanding that some imitators and substitutors will be attempting to put up something which they consider just as good as Peruna, we are going to draw aside the veil of secrecy and allow any one who chooses to know exactly OF WHAT PERUNA IS COMPOSED.

This ought to disarm all honest criticism. We expect, however, that criticism will continue. On some pretext or other those who are envious of the success of Peruna will continue to find fault. But we are determined to give such people no just complaint. PERUNA IS A GREAT MEDICINE.

People Who Object to Liquid Medicines Can Now Secure Peruna Tablets.

It has become a household word in millions of homes. Our faith in the remedy is stronger than ever. Every year we expect to establish new plants in foreign lands until the people of all the world are supplied with this valuable household remedy.

WE CLAIM PERUNA TO BE A CATARRH REMEDY. Buy a bottle and try it. If it helps you, be honest and acknowledge that it has helped you.

If you want us to we will publish your statement exactly as you furnish it to us. We will add no words, take away no words. If you wish us to we will publish your portrait in connection with it. We will not do this without your written request, without your entire consent.

Peruna has cured thousands of people of chronic catarrh, in many phases and locations. At least, that is what the people say to us, through unsolicited testimonials. Peruna will cure many thousand more, in spite of fabricated slanders to the contrary.

WE GUARANTEE EVERY BOTTLE OF PERUNA TO CONTAIN THE INGREDIENTS PRINTED ON THE LABEL.

We guarantee that every testimonial we use is absolutely true—in the exact language of the testifier.

We guarantee that every photograph published is the photograph of the person whose name it bears, that every word of every testimonial was authorized by the hand that signed it.

We are determined to beat our opponents by being fairer than they are, by dealing squarer than they dare to. We are determined to meet falsehood with truth, duplicity with candor, insincerity with sincerity.

We know that the users of Peruna will appreciate our stand. We believe that the dealers in Peruna will applaud our course. We expect even our opponents will be obliged to acknowledge finally that Peruna is not only an honest and useful remedy, but one of the GREATEST HOUSEHOLD MEDICINES ON THE CONTINENT.

Some men wear good clothes because they can't afford not to.

"Society," says the Lady's Pictorial, "is looking for a novel form of entertainment. Let hostesses issue invitations bearing the request that every lady shall bring her pet aversion." The only obstacle we see in regard to our contemporary's proposal is that so many ladies would have a difficulty in getting their husbands to come along.—Punch.

SUFFERING IS WIDESPREAD

SICK ONES COULD NOT ESCAPE WHEN THE RISING WATERS FLOODED THE HOMES.

MILES OF TERRITORY IS SUBMERGED

Live Stock Perished in Considerable Numbers and Many Reports of Persons Having Narrow Escapes in an Endeavor to Save Property Received

Pittsburg, Feb. 17.—After reaching 30.7 feet at noon Sunday and remaining at that stage for three hours, the high water in the rivers is now slowly receding. The danger mark in this city is 22 feet. The damage and suffering caused by the annual flood is widespread. As far as is known, there has been no loss of human life, and this is attributed to the early warnings of the local United States weather bureau.

Live stock has perished in considerable numbers, and there are many reports of persons having narrow escapes in an endeavor to save their property. Miles of territory in Greater Pittsburg and vicinity is submerged, and it will be some time before the water will be back in the channels of the rivers and numerous small streams.

Thousands of business houses in the down-town portion of Pittsburg are attempting to clear the cellars of their buildings of water.

Every few feet along the sidewalk are men pumping the water, and hundreds of these little streams can be seen spouting into the streets. Electric light plants in these buildings and other valuable machinery is practically a total loss.

The actual monetary damage can not be ascertained at this time, but from all accounts it will run up to several million dollars. The suffering caused by the high water is intense. Thousands of persons are living in the upper floors of their homes, using skiffs as a means of transportation. The lower portions of their homes are filled with water.

In many instances the household goods were not removed, owing to a lack of time, and chairs, tables, pianos and bric-a-brac are floating about the rooms.

To add to the suffering of the victims the weather grew cold Sunday and snow fell. The gas connections at the houses have been disarranged and in their present condition life is made miserable for the unfortunates.

Charitable institutions, making use of many skiffs and rafts, have been busily engaged throughout all Saturday night and Sunday serving hot coffee and food to the families, most of whom are poor.

FIGHT ON A TUG BOAT

Resulted in the Drowning of Two Mariners.

New York, Feb. 17.—A Newport (R. I.) dispatch to the Times says:

The son of Congressman Halver Steenerson, of Minnesota, a private in the marine corps stationed at the training station, and a companion, thought to be Private John M. McIntesh, of the same corps, were drowned in Narraganset Bay.

Their drowning followed a fight on board the tug Annie R. Wood, of Providence, Capt. F. W. Rich.

The police arrested Nell I. Olson, a Dane employed on the dredger Urban. Olsen, a companion named Charles Kruger, Steenerson and McIntosh had been drinking together all day. They decided to go to Ft. Grabie and contributed the fare on the tug across the bay.

There was a dispute between Olsen and Steenerson as to the ability of the United States to whip Denmark.

Steenerson either fell or was pushed into the water from the steps of the pilot house. Where McIntesh disappeared to or when no one knows.

Stole $60,000 Gem.

Berlin, Feb. 17.—A pearl necklace and pin of extraordinary beauty, valued at $60,000, have been stolen from the Countess Von Wartensleben. The countess is the wife of Gen. Alexander Von Wartensleben, of the cavalry, who is a warm friend of the emperor. The necklace is composed of exceptionally large pearls, the string measuring five feet in length.

Cashier Held Up.

Charlotte, S. C., Feb. 17.—While one masked robber held up the cashier in true wild western style, his two companions looted the vault of the bank at Granite Falls, N. C., and secured all the cash in the institution, $2,700, forced the cashier to enter the vault, and, after locking him in, made good their escape.

Two Cases of Yellow Jack.

Galveston, Tex., Feb. 17.—On the steamer Crispin, which arrived in the roads, three miles out from Galveston Sunday at noon from Para, Brazil there were two cases of yellow fever. The two men affected are Third Engineer Davis and Third Officer Pritchard.

To Entertain Reed.

New York, Feb. 17.—Ambassador Whitelaw Reid, who sails next Thursday for England, after spending a furlough of two months in this country, will be entertained Wednesday night at a dinner given by the Pilgrims.

VOLUMES MIGHT BE WRITTEN

Of the Success That Awaits the Farmer in Western Canada.

The story of wheat farming in Western Canada (that portion of Canada lying north of Dakota and Montana) has been frequently told, but it will stand a lot of telling, and still retain its touch of interest. During the year just closed 277,376 persons made their homes in Canada as compared with 215,912 for the year 1906, an increase of 61,464. Those from the United States numbered 56,551. A writer in "Industry" recently said: "To-day the "Dominion of Canada is witnessing a "mightier movement of population "than ever stimulated a Biblical writ"er to pen a chapter of Scripture." The same writer says: "From the Rhine "and the Rhone river valleys; from "the port cities of Germany and the "farms of the Fatherland, from the "peasant soil of Russia; and out from "the grimy Lancashire and over-popu"lated Yorkshire, the discontented "and ambitious of every clime are "seeking to take advantage of the "opportunities afforded by the fertile "soil and exhilarating climate of the "Empire of the North."

Continuing the same writer says: "While a million human beings throng "the shores of the United States every "year, the smaller number arriving in "Canada come with a more well-de"fined purpose." The question has been asked why do these people come to Canada? The available land between the Mississippi and the Pacific has been exhausted, and the farmers within that territory find that their sons have to seek newer climes. Canada offers one hundred and sixty acres of land free to each. This land yields from 20 to 40 bushels of wheat to the acre. In Southern Alberta, the winter wheat belt of Canada, as high as 60 bushels per acre have been harvested. Less yields than the one mentioned have netted the farmer as much as $35 per acre. There are no words that tell the tale so effectively as those of the farmer himself, the man who has ploughed the fields, sowed the grain, and with folded hands rests while nature, bounteous in that country, in less than three months, placed at his disposal hundreds of acres of ripened grain, now waiting the arrival of the reaper, and therefore we reproduce the following letter.

Any agent of the Canadian government will be pleased to give information regarding the district mentioned or any of any other that may be desired.

E. T. Holmes, Esq.,
Canadian Government Agent,
St. Paul, Minn.

Dear Sir:—

In 1905 I located on a claim about 30 miles from the town of Wadena, on the Canadian Northern Railroad, have lived on my claim most of the time since. I consider this to be one of the best districts in the country for grain growing. In 1906 wheat averaged from 30 to 51 bushels per acre on some of my neighbors' farms, within 4 miles of my claim. Oats go from 75 to 100 bushels. It is also a good country for stock. Where I am there is plenty of fuel. Homesteads nearly all taken the settlement being largely Germans, and Americans, all well-to-do. I left Wadena in February, 1907, returning April 25, so that I missed part of the winter, which the old settlers tell me was one of the worst they ever saw, but there was no suffering, as the people are pretty well fixed, and there are no blizzards in that country, at least there never has been known to be one. Wild land sells at from $10 to $15; closer to town it is higher.

In the summer we have all sorts of wild fruits very plentiful, and I never saw better vegetables, and game is so plentiful a man need not starve for want of something to eat. Plenty of good water too. You need not hesitate to recommend this district, but the homesteads are nearly all taken, most of the homesteaders are living right on their claims.

(Signed), FRANK MORREY,
Kelvington, Sask

As He Understood It.

A youngster who has been living with his grandmother in Nutley, N. J., was brought to the city for a visit a short time ago, and while here was taken to the theater for the first time in his life. In one of the scenes a butler comes on the stage and announces, "My lord, the carriage waits."

When the little fellow returned to his grandmother's home he started in at once to describe to her the play he had seen.

"And then, Granny," he said, in his excited description, a big man with gold buttons on his coat came on the stage and said: 'My God, there's a hack outside.'"—N. Y. Times.

"Then she's not visible," rejoined the policeman, and the march to the patrol box began.

Out of the Usual.

"Guess where I've been," said a man at the noonday lunch counter. "It is a city where in at least two churches they have little cuspidors which match the decorations of the church in the corners of the pews. In the vestibule of one of the large churches hangs a sign to this effect: 'No Spitting Allowed Inside the Church, Throw Away Your Tobacco as You Enter the Vestibule.' This a fact. I can prove it!"

Couldn't Set Her Back.

American ladies, when in England, are the occasion of many jokes, good, bad and indifferent. Here is a recent one, which has for its scene the magnificence of Windsor castle.

Fair American—How lucky! Is your mother in?—Human Life.

It Was a Stage Brand.

Gertrude, aged four, had been to the matinee. Later she tried to describe the play to a grown-up friend.

"They drank wine," said Gertrude, "and then they all went out."

"Well," said the friend, expectantly, "and what happened next?"

Gertrude worked her small brain hard.

"I guess," she said, "they spit it out."

Nadaud Announces For Congress.

HON. CLIFFORD E. NADAUD.

For the third time Col. Clifford E. Nadaud, of Covington, Attorney, offers himself to the Democracy of the Sixth District of Kentucky for Congress. His authorized announcement will be found in another column of this issue.

He requests us to say he will remain in the contest loyal, honorable and steadfast in his candidacy until nominated or defeated. He will make a more thorough canvass of the Sixth District than he made in his last two races, and hopes to communicate with every voter in the eight counties, either in person or by letter. No young Democrat is more deserving of honors at his party's hands than Colonel Nadaud. In former campaigns he has been tireless in his efforts for Democracy's cause.

Since his first race for the Democratic nomination for Congress Col. Nadaud has broadened in his views and experiences. He was examined in the Court of Judge John M. Lassing, and admitted to the practice of law at Burlington, Boone County, in the spring of 1903, and since then he has been a world wide traveler, and in the great capitols of the world has come in contact with, and won the friendship and respect of many of the world's great men.

Should he be honored with a nomination and election to Congress by the Democrats of the Sixth District, backed by a knowledge of law, and of world wide experience, he will be fortified and equipped for a brilliant career, and one useful to his constituents.

He has been a close student of the great questions coming before Congress, and is especially well informed on the issues discussed by the Nation's Democratic leaders. Whether in personal victory or defeat, he will be found faithfully working for Democracy in the thick of the gigantic national battle to be fought at the polls next November.

Such is the unselfish devotion of Col. Nadaud. He proved this claim of his friends at the moment of his defeat by Hon. D. Linn Gooch and Hon. Joseph L. Rhinock in his last races, for in that hour he was the first to tender his services to his successful opponents.

Col. Nadaud wishes us to say that he does not propose to try to build his foundation for a seat in Federal Congress upon the ruins of any man's personal or political reputation, but to conduct his campaign out in the open, without abuse of any man, giving each who may oppose him at all times and under all circumstances, fair play and a square deal, and if defeated, to as loyally work for his successful opponent as he would wish to be supported if successful.

As in his former races, Col. Nadaud pledges his best efforts to the people of the Sixth District if they should choose him as their public servant. He says he will be energetic, fair and honest if trusted to the responsibility of a seat in Congress, promising to consult the whole people of the District as to their wishes before acting on important general or local legislation. He will endeavor to extend the rural free delivery to every desired section of the District, work for larger appropriations for the improvement of the Ohio, Licking and Kentucky rivers, and all rivers dependent upon them in any way. See that the deserving pension applicants in the District get their just dues, inaugurate a plan of public buildings for the larger towns in the District, and be found at all times alert and working for his constituents of the Sixth Kentucky District.

Virgil McKnight, a member of the lower house in the General Assembly from Mason county, died suddenly of asthma at Frankfort, last Sunday night. He was one of the Democratic members who refused to vote for Beckham for United States Senator. His death may redound to the advantage of Gov. Bradley.

A bill has been introduced in the Legislature which, should it become a law, will make the carrying of concealed deadly weapons, a felony. An effort to exact a law of that kind has been made at the session of several Legislatures during the past ten years, but it never has commanded much strength.

The employes of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Co., who receive monthly pay of $150 or over, have been informed of a big cut in their salary. The smaller fry will receive attention later on. It is claimed that the big falling off in business makes the reduction necessary.

The searchlights to be fitted to the British battle ships now being built are of extraordinary power. The Glasgow Evening News, in a description it gives of them, says it would be possible to read a newspaper by the light of one at a distance of about 18 miles.

When Secretary Taft's presidential boom was first launched his picture that appeared in the newspapers represented him a fine looking specimen of humanity, but in the last few weeks his pictures have become horrible.

It begins to look like Hon. W. J. Bryan will be nominated for the Presidency by the Democrats by acclamation. The convention will be only a formal proceeding.

Local option legislation is annoying some of the members of the General Assembly until it is said they can not eat, nor rest at night.

The Legislature is doing very little, but probably the less it does the better it will be for the State.

The bomb fiend has bobbed up in Noblesville, Indiana. He is a specie of "night-rider."

Safe blowers are getting active again in rural districts.

Jameson H. Aylor.

In the death of Jameson H. Aylor, of Hebron, which was mentioned last week, another worthy old gentleman has passed to his reward. He was a native of this county, where he spent his long, useful life and reared a large family, the members of which, now living, are among the county's best citizens. Mr. Aylor died at the ripe age of 80 years, 11 months and 16 days. His wife was Miss Sarah Jane Hicks, a native of Hebron neighborhood, to whom he was married on April 5, 1849. He lived 55 years on the farm where he died. His wife survives him.

Mr. Aylor's life was devoted to agricultural pursuits, and many hundreds of tons of garden and field products were hauled by him to the Cincinnati market, years ago, and by his close attention to this business and a careful investment of the proceeds of his labor he accumulated a considerable amount of this world's goods, and at the time of his death he owned several hundred acres of good land in the vicinity of Hebron.

He was a son of William Aylor, a pioneer in Boone county, who did much towards the county's early development as an agricultural district, at the same time rearing a family of nine sons and two daughters, several of whom have lived beyond the three score and ten years.

Jameson H. Aylor was a plain every-day man, who stood high among those who knew him. His judgment was good and often sought by his neighbors when in doubt about any matter, and his taking off will create a vacancy that cannot be supplied.

The funeral service was conducted at Hebron church by Rev. Ayers, Universalist, of Cincinnati, last Wednesday, in the presence of a very large crowd of friends who, in life, loved and honored, and in death, lamented the good man, whose remains were tenderly consigned to their last earthly resting place in the beautiful city of the dead at Hebron.

The years, full of usefulness, came to him, and he died after a life well spent, mourned by all who knew him, and entered into a well deserved rest, leaving behind him a legacy of good will and good deeds which will long survive.

The Dog Tax.

Previous to the enactment of the present dog law which applies to every county in the State, there existed a local law, applicable to Boone county alone, which provided for the payment of sheep killed by dogs out of a fund produced by taxing the dogs in the county. This money never left the county, and was payed to those entitled immediately upon their claims being allowed by the court, but the general dog tax repealed this local law and provides that all the money derived from the dog tax be paid over to the Auditor of Public Accounts at Frankfort, who holds it as a State Sheep Fund. A suit was brought in one of the counties to test the constitutionality of the dog law. That suit is pending yet, and the Auditor declines to receive from the Sheriffs in the State any of the dog tax until that suit is disposed of finally. Should it be held by the Court of Appeals that the law is constitutional, the Auditor will receive the dog tax and pay it out on the many sheep claims according to what each claimant is entitled, but how long before the case will be decided no one has an idea. In the event the law is held unconstitutional the claims for sheep killed by dogs will not be paid. The Boone county dog law had been working nicely for many years and its repeal has created considerable confusion on the part of those who have claims for sheep killed.

The RECORDER has made arrangements with Mr. D. B. Wallace, of Walton, whereby he will have charge of its Walton department. Mr. Wallace is naturally a newspaper man, and for many years was the owner and editor of the Warsaw Independent, than which there is not a better county paper in Kentucky. He will make the Walton department bright, newsy and interesting, and the people of Walton and vicinity can assist him materially by sending or handing to him any item of news they may have. The Walton news appears on the eighth page.

Keeping Open House.

Everybody is welcome when we feel good; and we feel that way only when our digestive organs are working properly. Dr. King's New Life Pills regulate the action of stomach, liver and bowels so perfectly one can't feel good when he uses these pills. 25c at Bentler's Drug Store, Erlanger, Ky.

EDWARD GAINES.

Ripe in years, Mr. Edward Gaines passed away at his home in Petersburg precinct, on the 10th inst., loved and honored by all who knew him. He was born March 13th, 1829, consequently his age was 78 years, 10 months and 27 days. His parents were Richard and Judieth Gaines, and he was one of a family of four sons, John G., Benjamin R., A. G. and Edward, and two sisters, Polly Smith and Elizabeth Crisler, each of whom lived many years beyond their majority. Benjamin is the only survivor of the above named children. He had one half brother, Gabriel T. Gaines and two half sisters, Mrs. Eliza J. Rouse and Mrs. Susan A. Clore. The two half sisters died several years ago.

Mr. Gaines received his education in the public schools of the county, and began his business career as a country merchant, having at different times had a store in Bullittsville, Burlington and Petersburg. In March 1849 he and Miss Ann Elizabeth Cloud, daughter of William and Sarah Cloud, were married. To them were born eight children, five of whom reached their majority, the others dying in infancy. Three sons, Sidney, who is practicing law in Burlington and James and Stephen, who occupy the old homestead, survive. Mrs. Gaines died November 4th, 1895. Mr. Gaines had occupied the farm where he died, since 1855, but for many years his two sons, James and Stephen, have been in charge, and he made his home with the latter, who occupied the residence in which the family grew up. Mr. Gaines was an industrious, frugal farmer, who provided himself and his family with the comforts of life, the example he set in this particular as well as in every other, being worth of emulation. He enjoyed company, and nothing afforded him greater pleasure then to entertain his friends, and it was truly a pleasure to be a guest at his home. As a testimonial to his worth as a friend, neighbor and citizen nothing could have been more emphatic than the immense throng that followed the remains to their last earthly resting place on the 12th inst., by the side of his wife, in the Petersburg cemetery. Mr. Gaines was a member of a generation that will soon have passed from the scenes of this life, and he is one of those of whom it can be said truly, that the world is better because of his having lived in it.

Local News.

FOR CONGRESS.

HON. CLIFFORD E. NADAUD, of of Kenton county, is a candidate for Congress from the Sixth Kentucky District, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

Some good pneumonia weather last week.

Several peals of thunder, last Friday morning.

Three or four black snakes were killed in this neighborhood, last week.

Saturday is Washington's birthday and both local banks will be closed.

Hogan and Conner each received considerable tobacco, last week, paying as high as $12 for some.

Every indication points to the fact that sheep will continue to be very profitable on the farm where there is good management of them.

Frank Mullins, who lives down on Gunpowder, was in town, one day last week, in fine spirits, having made a sale of tobacco for $12 and $9.

The local comic valentine trade was unusually good this year, and, in many instances, the senders enjoyed the joke considerably more than did the receivers.

Considerable tobacco passed down the Lexington pike last week on its way to the Covington and Cincinnati markets. It came from Grant and Owen counties.

A female patron of the Burlington postoffice took a half-bushel basket to the office last Friday in which to carry home her valentines. She got enough with which to stock a store.

Herbert Kirkpatrick took his winter's purchase of furs to the city, last Friday, and converted it into cash. He says that the money stringency this winter played havoc with the market.

The Petersburg Canning Company is preparing for a big run this year, and are having contracts printed, which are so plain that there can be no misunderstanding of their conditions.

High water prevented the people on Burlington rural route 2 from receiving mail last Friday, while Mr. Hughes was able to serve route No. 1 as far only as the crossing of Woolper creek at Plattsburg.

Petitions are being circulated in several neighborhoods in the county, asking the county judge to order a vote on the local option question. The vote, if taken, will be for the county as a whole, making the entire territory dry, if local option carries.

T. B. Aylor, of Limaburg neighborhood, has advertised a sale for the 27th inst. Mr. Aylor is preparing to leave the farm on which he was born and raised, and where his children were born and raised until they started out in life for themselves.

The Consolidated Telephone Co., has under consideration plans for extending and improving very considerably its service in the southern end of the county in the next few months. An exchange at Walton is one of the improvements that is contemplated.

The turnpike that was built down the East Bend road about this time last year is not on duty, and that thoroughfare is inclined to get unusually bad this spring. When airships and yachts come in use the yacht will be a very popular rural conveyance about this time of the year.

If the ducks are kept in the barn yard with other fowls put their grain foods in a pan or other suitable vessel, and pour water on the grain until it is covered an inch deep. By such arrangement the hens cannot rob the ducks, while the latter eat with greater ease by having their food under water.

W. H. Clayton, of Hebron, this county, was programmed for a speech on "Horticulture and the Outlook for Orcharding in Kentucky," at the session of the Kentucky State Farmer's Institute which began its third annual meeting at Frankfort, yesterday. He was to speak yesterday, and it is safe to say that he entertained the Institute for the 40 minutes assigned him.

Neighborhood Favorite.

Mrs. E. D. Charles, of Harbor, Maine, speaking of Electric Bitters, says: "It is a neighborhood favorite here with us." It deserves to be a favorite everywhere. It gives quick relief in dyspepsia, liver complaint, kidney derangement, malnutrition, nervousness, weakness and general debility. Its action on the blood, as a thorough purifier makes it especially useful as a spring medicine. This grand alterative tonic is sold under guarantee at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger. 50c.

A FEW HOURS IN WALTON.

It was about 7 o'clock last Thursday, when the RECORDER's auto. pulled out for Walton, the county's metropolis. The road was heavy and travel laborious. The first stop was at James Cary's, above Florence, where the weather was discussed fully and the tobacco situation incidentally. Mr. Cary is engaged extensively in the dairy business, and is one of the hustling business men in his community.

Upon approaching the first toll gate near Devon Station a head was discovered protruding from the window of the toll house. The face had a youthful appearance, but upon a nearer approach it was recognized as that of Thomas Huron, the popular gate keeper. His tired look prompted the question, "What is the matter, Tom, you look sleepy," when he answered, "I am; I was up nearly all last night collecting toll from a train of Grant and Owen county tobacco haulers that passed here enroute for the city."

Just after Richwood was past, A. J. Thomas and John Goodridge's hail was recognized, and a few minutes were spent very pleasantly with them.

Walton was reached about 10:30 and the conveyance was put up at Scott Chambers' hotel de horse. Chambers is sole proprietor of the undertaking and livery business formerly owned by him and B. B. Allphin. Alva Bruce, another product of this end of the county is his assistant. A few minutes had to be passed with Scott, and while there two sprightly, bright-eyed little girls appeared on the scene, and proceeded to enjoy a generous supply of candy. They were Mr. Chambers' little daughters of whom he is justly proud, and they are evidentally devoted to their father.

Of course it was impossible to pass the business house of Owen Watts and James Allen without taking a look in. Here, besides, the genial proprietors, were found Mr. John R. Craven, Dr. Cleek and one other, whose name is not now remembered. This quintet was engaged in the heated discussion of a question in regard to which the RECORDER would not dare to express an opinion even if it had one. Mr. Watts, it will be remembered, is a native of the "north end," who, after having served one term most satisfactorily as county assessor, located in Walton, where he has achieved success both fn business and matrimonially, and has a wife who is an exceptionally fine lady. Mr. Allen is a Big Boner, one of a host of clever men whom that part of the county has furnished the world. It was when leaving this place that the worst break of the day was made. The question, "where are you going?" was asked, and when the answer, "going to Walton," came, the traditional hornets' nest was not a circumstance, and when the line of demarcation (the L. & N. R. R.) was crossed Mr. Allen was yet saying things, while he who fled imagined that Mr. Watts was standing in the door making ugly faces.

Sleet Yarnell's shaving parlor had an inviting look and it could not be passed without a trial of his skill as a tonsorial artist. He handles a subject in a most satisfactory manner and always improves both his looks and feelings before allowing him to leave his chair.

A tour of the business portion of the town was now in order. At T. F. Curley's drygoods store and Edwards' hardware store—proprietors absent. Jones has a large grocery that is an ornament to the town. It does a very large business. Northcutt is doing a good business at his store in the opera house building. It is in this building that the only drug store in Walton is located. It belongs to A. W. Smith, a "north ender," who always has a pleasant smile for his customers, and a hearty hand shake and several extra smiles for a caller from Burlington or vicinity. Mrs. Smith was not at the store, Thursday, but she has made herself so useful there that Mr. Smith could not dispense with her services. It was while at the drug store that Theodore Chambers appeared on the scene. Mr. Chambers located in Walton prior to its present boom and his worth as a mechanic (plasterer) was well established before the excessive demand for his services developed. He plastered 17 or 18 large buildings in Walton, last year, and anticipates equally as much work in 1908.

Dropping in at the Equitable Bank and Trust Co., D. B. Wallace extended a hearty welcome, and was pleased to show the complete and conveniently arranged up-to-date bank building, with the most modern equipment for the protection of the patron's money. Nothing was overlooked in the remodeling of the building which was transing formed from an ordinary looking structure into a handsome banking house. No better man than Mr. Wallace could have been selected to look after the interest of the bank, which he is doing in a most satisfactory manner to all. He is making good in every particular as the results of his untiring efforts show.

Attorney John L. Vest, who is Vice-President of the bank and Attorney J. G. Tomlin have their law office in the bank building and are as comfortably located as they could desire. Mr. Vest was assisting to put some gold lettering on the front door to the bank, while Mr. Tomlin was in the office investigating some knotty legal problem, but each of these gentlemen found time to make a friend glad that he had called on them. Presley, son of Dr. Sam Adams, does the stenographic and type writing work for the bank and the legal firm, and is kept busy. He has a nice room in the building and his father was with him Thursday. Dr. Sam is always glad to meet an old acquaintance and his hand clasp is significant of the abundance of the milk of humankindness in his heart.

Having refreshed the inner man at the very popular Phoenix Hotel in a most satisfactorily manner, a call was made at the Walton Deposit Bank and Trust Co. This is now considered an old bank in Boone county, and long since acquired the reputation of being one of North Kentucky's substantial financial institution, which its conservative business methods will retain for it. Dr. D. M. Bagby, President; Robert Green, Cashier, and Geo. Ransler, one of the directors, were present, and with them a half hour or so was spent in the most pleasant manner. Dr. Bagby is one of the town's oldest citizens and has always been prominent in its affairs and the unquestioned integrity of the doctor, Mr. Green and the individual directors, made the Walton Deposit Bank possible and a success from the day it first opened its doors for business. The bank building has recently been considerably enlarged and presents a much better appearance than that of the original structure.

Of A. M. Edwards, Henry Diers and other prominent business men only a glimpse was caught. Everett Aylor, of Limaburg, who became a citizen of Walton several months ago will take charge of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Smith's farm near Verona this spring. Sam C. Johnson, an erstwhile south end politician dropped into town afternoon. He was considerably disabled in his right hand, having been kicked on it a few days before by a horse. He reported that good wite of his as recovering from a severe spell of illness.

The time to leave town having arrived exit was made along the opposite side of the street from Watts & Allen's to Chambers' stable from which point no time was lost in departing.

The day was unpleasant but the sojourn in Walton was enjoyed.

Women Speculators in Wall Street.

The number of women speculators is amazingly large—much larger than even the ordinary Wall street habitue would imagine. It is not commonly known, but it is a fact that many brokerage houses maintain private rooms for their women customers, with more often than not, private entrances. There are several reasons for this. One is that many women who speculate do so secretly, without the knowledge of their family, their relatives or their friends. On this account they desire privacy, desire to move and have their Wall street being unknown. Another reason, says W. R. Givens, in the World To-Day, is that the broker himself desires it, principally, be it confessed, because he is anxious that if there be any "scenes" they shall be private ones, "far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife"—and sight. For truth compels the statement that women are poorer losers than men. It is the testimony of conservative brokers that a woman gambler is much more of a gambler than a man—much more, that is, in absorbing tenaciousness and almost vindictiveness. She seems to be carried out of and beyond herself to a degree that becomes uncomfortably disquieting when she loses. Even when she is a winner and, as I have said, the proportion of winners to losers among women is about one to twenty, there seems to be in her satisfaction a kind of maliciousness that is not good to see.

Before the Central American conference dissolved it added to its long list of memorable achievements the adoption of a measure that, if carried into effect, will do more, even, than the arbitration agreements to insure peace in the five republics. Revolutions are the bane of those countries, and they are too often successful because they are aided by citizens of an adjoining republic. Ambitious revolutionaries who have failed are safe as soon as they have passed into another country. The man who has succeeded in overturning a government and has announced himself as dictator or president is immediately recognized by the governments of the neighboring states. Now all this is to be changed. Revolution is to be discouraged, and one republic is not to be even neutral when a revolt breaks out in an adjoining country, but is to be actively hostile. No republic is to recognize as president of another republic any man who has not reached the position by the ordinary method of a regular election.

One of the reasons why "collecting" appeals to so many persons, of such different temperament and position, is undoubtedly the element of chance in it—the possibility of coming unexpectedly upon some great treasure. The matter is well illustrated by the story of a postage stamp which has just been added to a famous western collection. The stamp is what is known as a "postmaster's provisional," and was issued in Alexandria, Va., in 1847. Three or four copies of the same stamp, printed on buff paper, were already known, but this one is printed on blue, and is unique. The stamp was on an old letter which had been preserved merely for family associations. The owner of it chanced to show it to a New York collector, who was honest enough to tell her that it was of considerable value. Another collector, an old friend of the family, offered $200 for it; but the family lawyer succeeded in selling it for $4,000. Packages of old letters sometimes, although not often, become magic purses.

That decision of Lord Curzon, lately viceroy of India, to enter the house of lords because his physician says he cannot stand the strenuous duties of membership in the popular branch of the British parliament is something that cuts both ways. Interpreted in the way which most will be inclined to accept, it means that life in the lords is "easy," so far as political effort is concerned, and when a man goes there it is rather for rest than for work. It will not be remarkable if those who are so strongly opposed to the maintenance of life house of lords as a legislative body and check upon the house of commons shall find an effective argument in this incident. If the upper house is so useless why tolerate it? A good many Englishmen will probably reason after that fashion.

The "white plague" is no respecter of position or power. The alarming report comes from Japan that the heir to the throne has developed consumption and that a famous European specialist has been sent for to treat him.

M. Metchnikoff, the scientist, says people who want to live long should drink milk and refrain from worrying. And yet, after all we have read about milk, it is difficult to see how anyone can drink it and not worry.

TORNADOES IN SOUTH

TYLER, TEX., DEVASTATED BY TERRIFIC WINDSTORM.

SEVERAL PERSONS DEAD

Towns of Mossville, Soso and Service, in Mississippi, Are Blown Away and Many Killed.

Tyler, Tex.—Tyler was swept by the most disastrous tornado in its history Friday morning about four o'clock. Coming up from the southwest, the storm swept over the main residence section of the city, leaving a trail of death and devastation.

The known dead in Tyler number four, C. A. Francis, agent of the Dallas News, wife and child about one year old, and a negro named Moses Lee, 80 years of age.

Francis was about 28 years of age and occupied a high place in the esteem of his fellow-townsmen. His dead body was found 100 yards from his wrecked home, and the body of his child was found in the street. Mrs. Frances was in the wreckage of the building.

Six Seriously Injured.

Six persons were seriously injured. They were Irwin Franklin, Mrs. Franklin and their four children. One of the children is expected to die. They were caught in the wreckage of their homes. Twelve buildings were wrecked and in the confusion which exists it is difficult to compile an accurate list of the casualties.

Wires are down in all directions from Tyler and, while reports from farmers who are hastening in to as certain the extent of the damage are to the effect that farmhouses all around Tyler were blown down, it is impossible to ascertain the loss of life or to approximate the extent of the disaster. It is known, however, that the tornado swept everything clean for a distance of five miles.

Mississippi Towns Destroyed.

Meridian, Miss.—Three small Mississippi towns were practically demolished by a tornado Friday. Reports of the number killed range from six to ten, with the smaller number probably correct.

Mossville, Service and Soso are the towns destroyed. They are all in Jones county and all are very small, being merely a handful of scattered dwellings. L. S. Morrison, a resident of Mossville, who came here after the storm, said he was outdoors during the blow and was compelled to grasp a wire fence to keep from being blown away. He said the dead at Mossville are Alec Windham and wife, negroes. Near the town, he said, four white persons had been killed, a man and wife and their two children, whose names he did not learn. Near Service one child of Ike Holloway is reported dead and also an unknown negro.

BIG AUTO RACE BEGINS.

Six Cars Leave New York for the Run to Paris.

New York.—The six automobiles contesting in the New York-to-Paris race started from Times square, Forty-second street and Broadway, Wednesday cheered by a throng of several thousand people. Accompanied by more than 200 motors of all descriptions the racing machines made their way up Broadway and Riverside drive to the city limits, where they turned north on the road to Albany.

From that city the route to San Francisco, which is the objective point of the first stage of the trip, lies across New York state to Buffalo, thence through Cleveland and Toledo to Chicago, to Omaha, Cheyenne, Ogden, Reno, Goldfield, San Luis Obispo and San Francisco. Mayor McClellan was to have given the word to start, but was delayed, and Colgate Hoyt of the Automobile Club of America took his place.

All traffic in the neighborhood of Times square was stopped a half hour before the start. Automobiles clogged the intersecting streets and lined the route for many blocks up Broadway. No such aggregation of machines has been seen in or about New York since the last Vanderbilt cup race was run. A band in the official grandstand played the anthems of the nations as the cars lined up for the start. A pistol shot sent the contestants away amid the cheering of the people.

Cervera's Rescuer Dies.

Boston.—George H. Norman of Brookline and Newport, prominent in society and as a polo player, who distinguished himself especially when, as an officer on the gunboat Gloucester during the Spanish-American war, he took Admiral Cervera of the Spanish fleet off the burning flagship Infanta Maria Teresa, died Thursday night at the Corey Hill hospital in Brookline. Mr. Norman went to the hospital two weeks ago to undergo an operation. He was operated upon twice, after which pneumonia developed.

Ship Wrecked; Ten Men Lost.

Portland, Ore.—The American ship Emily Reed went ashore at an early hour Friday morning at the mouth of the Nehalem river on the Oregon coast and broke in two. Ten of the crew were drowned.

THE DELUGE.

SOLDIERS SENT TO ALASKA

TROOPS TO QUELL STRIKE RIOTS IN FAIRBANKS.

Riotous Crowds Congregate on the Streets and Capture Nonunion Men as They Arrive.

Washington.—By direction of the president, Acting Secretary Oliver Thursday ordered a company of infantry from Fort Gibbon, in Alaska, to Fairbanks, in that territory, to preserve order during the mining strike in that section. This action was taken upon representation from the United States court in Alaska to the attorney general that the presence of federal troops was needed.

Telegrams from Fairbanks to the attorney general claim that open air mass meetings are being held by the striking miners and that threats of violence have been made. The marshal has been directed by the attorney general to use all the force at his command to arrest law-breakers and to prevent intimidation. The military is expected to give the marshal moral support and also to take action should the disorder prove too great for any force he may be able to secure.

The distance from Fort Gibbon to Fairbanks is 155 miles and the troops will be carried by sleds over that route, which is said to be a very good one. If there is urgent necessity for the presence of the soldiers at Fairbanks they can get there in four or five days, but under ordinary conditions the trip takes six or seven days. Fairbanks is in the center of a mining country with a population of 7,000 or 8,000.

Persons in Washington familiar with the conditions existing at Fairbanks say the trouble is the outcome of a strike a year or more ago for higher wages and shorter hours for the miners.

Fairbanks, Alaska.—United States Marshal Perry has sworn in 250 special deputies for the protection of life and property against riotous mobs of strikers who are congregated on the streets. These mobs have been attempting to capture recent arrivals here with a view to deporting them. The marshal's force has dispersed the rioters and guarantees protection to all men in camp. All saloons are closed.

CHILEANS GREET THE FLEET.

American Battleships Reviewed in Bay of Valparaiso.

Valparaiso, Chile.—The great American fleet of 16 battleships, under the command of Rear Admiral Evans, passed Valparaiso Friday afternoon and continued on its voyage northward for Callao, Peru, the next stopping place.

All Valparaiso and thousands of persons from other cities in Chile witnessed the passing of the fleet. President Montt and the other high officials of the republic went out from shore to greet the battleships, and almost the entire Chilean navy exchanged salutes with them as they swung around Curaumilla Point and into Valparaiso bay in single file, headed by the Chilean cruiser Chacabuco and five Chilean torpedo boat destroyers. The day was perfect and the spectacle of the fleet stretched in a great semi circle as seen from the high hills around the bay was magnificent.

President Montt and other Chilean officials embarked on the training ship Gen. Baquedano and took a position well out in the harbor. Around the Baquedano the vessels swung at a speed of four knots, firing the presidential salute as they passed in review. It was one hour from the time the head of the fleet entered the bay until the last vessel had passed the president's ship and turned toward the open sea. Then the Baquedano lifted anchor and escorted the fleet well out of the bay and on its way to the north.

It was a view such as has never before been seen in Valparaiso bay, and one that will long be remembered by the people of Chile who came miles to see it.

NEW AMERICAN SKI RECORD.

Duluth, Minn. — Following a day's postponement on account of soft weather, the fourth annual tournament of the National Ski Association of America was wound up here Thursday afternoon on Chester Creek Hill.

The large crowd that had gathered with the expectation of seeing a new American record established, was getting ready to return home disappointed, when John Wannobo, a director of the local club, hung up a special prize for the rider that could beat 110 feet. A number of them tried it, but all fell short. Then John E. Venson came tearing down the mammoth slide, shot through the air and landed 116 feet away from the scaffold.

GIRL'S LOVE USED AS BAIT

MOTHER'S PART IN BARGAINING FOR COL. SNELL'S GOLD.

Ardent Epistles, Said to Have Been Written by Minister's Wife, Read at Trial.

Clinton, Ill. — The pitiful, miserable story of a woman's sordid desire for money was revealed in all of its revolting phases in the famous Snell will case Wednesday. It was the story of a wife—alleged to be a minister's wife—who bartered her soul for gold and sold into bondage her 15-year-old daughter.

Mute witnesses of an alleged contract made between Mrs. Lura Hamilton, wife of Rev. E. A. Hamilton, and the tottering old millionaire, Col. Thomas Snell, in the shape of letters declared to have been written by Mrs. Hamilton, were introduced and admitted as evidence in Judge Cochran's court. The letters were unsigned, but they were introduced as Mrs. Hamilton's by the attorneys, who declared there will be no trouble in proving their authenticity.

"But must love you. I will see to it that she is your little sweetheart. Send me money and she shall be yours and do anything you want," wrote the woman, and from all evidence the 85-year-old lover ran after both mother and daughter and supplied them with money to buy houses and lots and finery, with which to bedeck themselves.

"I love you. You are my own sweetheart. I have loved you since I was a girl of 20 years. What a fool I was not to tell you then. I have suffered agonies for 25 years for love of you," wrote this woman of 47 years.

Whether Rev. Mr. Hamilton knew the contents of the letters alleged to have been written by his wife is a mooted question. It appears from letters which have been introduced in the case that he was fully aware of it. The writer said:

"My husband says that I can go anywhere with you. He loves you. He will trust me to your care. I can take a trip to Chicago with you, and I am crazy to go. My husband has given his full permission."

Clinton, Ill. — Charles Cline, assistant postmaster of Clinton since 1891, refused to give the names of school girls with whom millionaire Col. Thomas Snell corresponded, in the will case Thursday.

He admitted that he knew the names of most of the girls, ranging in age from 12 to 18 years, for whom the eccentric old man rented private boxes in the Clinton post office that they might send to and receive letters from Col. Snell, but said most of them were from the best Clinton families and had now grown to womanhood.

The witness told how the aged millionaire wrote love notes daily to numbers of schoolgirls, in which he inclosed from $5 to $20 in bills. He would govern the amounts returned to the writers according to the number of terms of endearment and suggestive declarations.

JANESVILLE WOMAN MURDERED.

Hotel Employe Found in Her Room with Her Throat Cut.

Janesville, Wis.—Mrs. Martha Anderson was found dead, lying on a cot in her room Thursday with her throat cut from ear to ear. Investigations by the police indicate she was murdered.

They found that the screens of the outer door had been torn away as if some one had used that means of getting into the house, the glass in the inner door broken and the door to the woman's room open.

The woman who lives downstairs said she heard voices and then shortly after groans and she called the police. The room was found to be covered with blood. Mrs. Anderson was lying on a cot with her throat cut and the windpipe severed. A razor was found lying on some clothes behind her on the floor. Her two children, who do not make their home with her, but live in the city, said that their mother had a razor, but that the one found on the floor was not hers. Mrs. Anderson worked in a local hotel and had always had a good reputation.

This is the third death mystery in Janesville. Two other women, Mrs. Madeline Clayton and Miss Helen Malone, were found dead in the river near the same spot. The mystery of their deaths have never been cleared up.

New Orleans.—Seventy-two men, representatives of all the classes of labor employed on the New Orleans river front, and who compose a union known as the Dock and Cotton council, were indicted by the United States grand jury Friday on the charge of conspiring to restrain trade in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. The indictments followed the refusal of the Dock and Cotton council to permit the Coal Wheelers' union to coal the steamer Habil, which cleared here several days ago for Puerto Cortez.

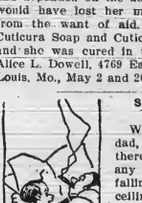
One to Three at Whist.

The late Senator Hoar was extremely fond of whist, which he played with remarkable skill.

A friend says that the only time he ever knew the usually placid and genial man from Masachusetts to be absolutely impatient was when on one occasion at whist the senator had an unusually stupid partner. Notwithstanding this handicap, the pair were winning right along even against good players.



In the middle of one game, some one paused behind the senator's chair and asked, "Well, senator, how are you getting on?"

"Very well, indeed," was the reply "in view of the fact that I have three adversaries."—Sunday Magazine.

BABY CRIED AND SCRATCHED

All the Time—Covered with Torturing Eczema—Doctor Said Sores Would Last for Years—Perfect Cure by Cuticura.

"My baby niece was suffering from that terrible torture, eczema. It was all over her body but the worst was on her face and hands. She cried and scratched all the time and could not sleep night or day from the scratching. I had her under the doctor's care for a year and a half and he seemed to do her no good. I took her to the best doctor in the city and he said that she would have the sores until she was six years old. But if I had depended on the doctor my baby would have lost her mind and died from the want of aid. But I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and she was cured in three months. Alice L. Dowell, 4769 Easton Ave., St. Louis, Mo., May 2 and 20, 1907."

SAFE TIP.

Willie — Say, dad, I'll bet you there won't be any more plaster falling off the ceiling under the nursery.

Dad — Why, Billy?

Willie — 'Cause they ain't no more left. We bumped it all off yesterday.

Helped Him.

A physician out west was sent for to attend a small boy who was ill. He left a prescription and went away.

Returning a few days later, he found the boy better.

"Yes, doctor," said the boy's mother, "the prescription did him a world of good. I left it beside him, where he could hold it in his hand most of the time, and he can almost read it now. You didn't mean for him to swallow the paper, did you, doctor?"—Harper's Weekly.

At the Church Fair.

He paused at the booth where the prettiest girls were in charge.

They greeted him with winning smiles.

"Can you change a ten?" he anxiously inquired.

"We have no change," they chorused.

"And I have no ten," he reluctantly murmured.

Then he moved away.

COFFEE DRINKING

A Doctor Says It Weakens the Heart.

"In my opinion," says a well known German physician, "no one can truthfully say that coffee agrees with him, as it has long since been proven that caffeine, contained in coffee, is an injurious, poisonous substance which weakens and degenerates the heart muscles.

"For this reason the regular use of coffee, soon or late, causes a condition of undernourishment, which leads to various kinds of organic disease.

"Convinced of this fact, I have often sought for some healthful beverage to use instead of coffee. At last I found the thing desired in Postum. Having had occasion to forbid people using coffee, whose hearts were affected, I have recommended Postum as a beverage, since it is free from all injurious or exciting substances. I know this from results in my own family, and among patients.

"Hundreds of persons who now use Postum in place of coffee, are greatly benefited thereby." "There's a Reason."

What Is Going On in Different Sections of Kentucky.

UNEARTHED AT LAST.

Federal Officers Dig Up Despain Copper Still, Famed For Its Liquor.

Louisville, Ky.—Searches of over a year and a half have finally unearthed the famous copper "still" belonging to Forester Skeggs, of Larue county, the moonshiner. Deputy United States Marshals Cundiff and Parrot dug it up in the rear of Skeggs' corn patch and seized the local collector of internal revenue at once. He sent a deputy, who will destroy the still, which is worth $200 and holds about 200 gallons.

The Despain family, of Larue county, owned it for 100 years. The great-grandfather of Despain, now a nonagenarian, brought it from Virginia, and it passed through the family, renowned for the amount and the flavor of its liquor. Skeggs heard of it and wanted it. Despain cut it up into little pieces and buried it.

A young moonshiner named John Bell dug it up and sold it to Skeggs, who patched it and used it, firmly believing that it was a talisman. From that time his downfall began, and finally he was arrested near Cloverdale, Ind., a month ago, though he refused to tell the hiding place of the still.

BIG FINE.

Tobacco Trust May Have to Pay $100,000,806—Greater Than Standard.

Lexington, Ky.—The $29,000,000 fine assessed against the Standard Oil Co. may be completely overshadowed if plans set on foot here materialize. Five agents of the American Tobacco Co. have been indicted separately upon one count for violations of the anti-trust laws of the state. It is claimed that 4,000 separate indictments are possible against each of five agents, making a total of 20,000 counts which, if they held good, would amount to a total fine of $100,000,000, or even if the minimum fine was assessed, the total fine would amount to $10,000,000.

May Defeat Prohibition.

Frankfort, Ky.—The Donaldson bill, one of the most important measures to come before the general assembly, providing for an amendment to the constitution to change the system of taxation in the state, passed the senate. It is possible that the bill will serve another purpose, as it may prevent the passage of other bills providing for an amendment to the constitution, including the one designed to give the people an opportunity to vote whether Kentucky will become a dry state. Only two amendments can be passed at a session, and the good-roads measure has been passed providing for an amendment.

Belvidere Dead.

Lexington, Ky.—While being exercised under saddle by his groom at Capt. Breckinridge Viley's Stonewall stud, in Woodford county, the noted thoroughbred stallion Belvidere, sire of the champion Salvidere, dropped dead. Belvidere was the property of James Galway, of New York, and was 24 years old. He was by imp. Billet, out of the noted mare Jacouet, by Leamington.

Poolroom Operators Indicted.

Newport, Ky.—A jury in the Circuit court found George Ehrlick and Anthony Bonero guilty on an indictment charging them with operating a poolroom and assessed a fine of $500 and costs against Ehrlick and $100 and costs against Bonero. Attorney C. L. Raison at once filed a motion and grounds for a new trial.

Favor Tuberculosis Hospital.

Frankfort, Ky.—The Senate Committee decided to report favorably the bill appropriating $75,000 for the erection of a tuberculosis hospital, the location to be selected by a commission appointed by the governor, and $30,000 annually for maintaining the institution. Lexington wants the hospital.

Coal Field Development.

Whitesburg, Ky.—The Interstate Coal Co., with a capital stock of $500,000, has been organized here by George L. Carter and other millionaires, who recently acquired some 30,000 acres of Elkhorn and Boone's Fork coal and timber lands.

Kentucky Judge Is Named.

Frankfort, Ky.—Acting Gov. Cox appointed J. B. Adams, commonwealth's attorney of the judicial district in which Jackson is located, judge of the circuit court to succeed the late Judge Robert Riddle.

Trials Are Again Postponed.

Lexington, Ky.—In the circuit court the case of William Britton and Elbert Hargis, charged with complicity in the murder of Dr. B. D. Cox at Jackson, Breathitt county, was continued to April term of court.

Postmaster Arrested.

Henderson, Ky.—Charles Hoskins, postmaster at Smith's Mills, Henderson county, was arrested by federal officers, charged with being short $70.71. Hoskins was a recent Republican candidate for the state legislature.

For Stealing a Watch.

Lexington, Ky.—John Johnson, in Circuit Court, pleaded guilty to breaking into the house of A. C. Kausner and stealing a watch valued at $30. The jury fixed his punishment at 10 years in the penitentiary.

BLUNDER OF ONE REPUBLICAN

Who Voted for Beckham Broke the Monotony, But Deadlock Continues.

Frankfort, Ky.—With the exception of a mistake made by Representative William S. Markoff, of Louisville, a republican, who unintentionally cast his vote for Beckham instead of Bradley, the joint ballot proceeded as monotonously as it has for the last three weeks.

For the first time since the beginning of the balloting the joint session was opened with prayer.

Representative W. F. Klair, of Lexington, voted for Col. John R. Allen, and the other five anti-Beckham democrats voted for Senator J. Wheeler Campbell, of Paducah. Senator Campbell voted for Henry Watterson. The vote stood: Beckham, 59; Bradley, 58; Campbell, 5; Watterson, 1; Allen, 1.

Since the beginning of the present session of the general assembly large crowds have gathered in the legislative halls and have, in a measure, interfered with the progress of the work of the assembly. This condition led to the adoption of a resolution excluding all persons not included in the following list: Members of the legislature, the governor, members of the state government, United States senators, congressmen, members of the last legislature, seven newspaper correspondents and the employes of the house and senate. This resolution was unanimously adopted.

LIVELY CONTEST

Between Supporters and Opponents of County Unit Bill Materialized.

Frankfort, Ky.—That the Waggoner county unit bill, which provides for the uniform extension of temperance in every county in the state, is the measure that is blocking legislation at this session was demonstrated in a decisive manner. The prediction of a lively contest between the supporters of the bill and its opponents materialized immediately after the joint session was dissolved, and Representative George S. Wilson moved that, when the House adjourned, it be to meet again to hear the report of the Committee on Public Morals on the county unit bill. He asserted with much vigor that charges and counter-charges were being made in the press and on the streets that the Republican leaders had entered into a deal to deliver 40 votes to the opponents of the unit bill in return for four votes to unseat a Democratic member. He said he hoped these charges were not true, and believed that they were not, because he did not think that 40 Republicans could be found in the House who would violate the platform of their state convention, binding them to the support of this bill. He said, however, that the Republicans would be afforded the opportunity to record themselves for or against.

Ex-Mayor on Trial.

Lexington, Ky.—The trial of former Mayor Henry T. Duncan, indicted in July, 1904, on a charge of criminal libel, is on in the circuit court. The indictment is the outgrowth of an open letter written to the grand jury, then in session, by Duncan and published in a local newspaper, in which L. E. Pence, county bookkeeper, was mentioned.

Trial of Boyd Begins.

London, Ky.—Attorney John W. Tuttle, of Monticello, Wayne county, as special judge of the Laurel Circuit Court, will begin the trial of R. Boyd, indicted for the killing of Attorney James Sparks. He will also hear the civil action brought by the widow of Sparks against Boyd for $30,000 damages.

Appeal to the Government.

Frankfort, Ky.—Owing to the activity of night riders in Franklin county and numerous warnings sent to farmers demanding them not to plant tobacco in 1908, efforts are being made to get the post office department to act. Inspectors are requested to be sent here to run down parties guilty of using the mails for that purpose.

Bennett Resigned.

Mayfield, Ky.—Bob Bennett, a tobacco buyer of this place, found at his door of his home a note warning him to cease buying. With the notice was a bundle of hickory switches and a 44-caliber cartridge. Bennett has been buying tobacco for local agents for the Regie people, but he resigned.

Succeeds Hermany.

Louisville, Ky.—To succeed the late Chas. Hermany the Louisville Water Co. elected S. Bent Russell, of St. Louis. He will become chief engineer and superintendent of the new filter. Russell for 20 years has been in charge of the St. Louis Co. work.

Chinn Wins a Point.

Frankfort, Ky.—Senator J. P. Chinn was notified by his attorneys that Federal Judge Cochran had decided that he had no jurisdiction in the $25,000 suit filed at Harrodsburg by Col. Chinn against a medical company that used his photograph.

Oppose Speed Limit.

STILL DO NOTHING

REPUBLICANS FAIL TO PROTECT PEOPLE'S INTERESTS.

And the Taxpayers, by Their Votes, Seem to Be Willing That Trust Monopoly Be Prolonged—The Political Situation.

As it has been proved beyond contention, both by evidence and admissions, that the tariff has fostered trusts and still protects them from competition, why should the tariff not be reformed, so as no longer to protect the trusts? The answer to this question can only be, that the majority of the American people desire to prolong this trust monopoly when they elect representatives to congress and members of the state legislatures that vote for United States senators to represent their states in the national legislature. From various causes the majority of the voters have decided that they are willing to be plundered by the trusts, although they were opposed to being plundered by the railroads. At least, that is where their preference for Republican policies have brought them to. The people have been fooled once more into believing that a Republican congress would protect their interests under the lead of Roosevelt, the reputed trust and corporation buster. The last congress, after prolonged discussion, was forced by public opinion to pass the railroad rate bill, which was supposed by many would compel the railroads to charge reasonable rates. That was the theory of President Roosevelt and the Republican leaders. The Democratic leaders in congress told the people the law was entirely inadequate to reform abuses, but Mr. Roosevelt turned the tide of real reform by accepting a bogus amendment to the bill, for fear the Democrats should have the credit of aiding the people.

The railroad rate law did do some good things. It abolished the free passes, it compels the railroads to publish their rates, so that every one can know what the rates are and all shippers be on an equal footing. It gave the interstate commerce commission a little more power, but not enough power to make unreasonable rates reasonable. Many of the states, mostly Democratic ones, however, have taken the rate question in hand and lowered passenger rates within the state boundaries against the protest of the railroad managers, who declared that to do so was virtually to confiscate their property. They have appealed to the United States courts for protection, and in all cases the Republican federal judges have decided in favor of the railroads.

With regard to the industrial trusts the situation is still more deplorable, for the federal government has accomplished nothing that has reduced the price of one of the necessities that the trusts produce. It is true President Roosevelt has taken to himself the title of trust-buster, and Senator Knox, when attorney general, did successfully prosecute the combine of the Northern Securities company, but the railroads that composed that combine still charge the same unreasonable rates, and in fact have increased some of them, notably the rates in lumber. With a great flourish of Republican trumpets and a loud blast from the Roosevelt bugle, the paper trust was declared abolished, yet the price of print paper is higher than ever, and there is a demand, from even Republican newspapers, that the tariff tax on paper and wood pulp be abolished. So the net results of all this pretended effort for railroad and trust busting has produced no practical results for the relief of the people.

A Republican congress is in session and virtually doing nothing, and the Republican leaders declare their intention of doing as little as possible, except to pass the appropriation bills and adjourn in time to round up delegates to the Republican national convention, where more promises will be made, with no more intention of keeping them in the future than in the past.

If so many eyes were not blinded by partisanship, and the trusts and corporations did not supply campaign funds, there would be a revolt against this stand-pat program, but such partisanship and corruption, aided by Democratic divisions for the control of the party, may again give the standpatters another lease of power. Was there ever such a political mess offered to the American people when such important matters for their welfare should be demanding their attention?

Beef Combine Finances.

The poor old beef trust that Roosevelt and Garfield investigated and found was only making about a dollar a head on the cattle it killed, seems to have become more prosperous since the Republicans have been trying to control it. At the annual meeting of Swift & Co., held a few days ago, which corporation is said to be part of the beef combine, President Swift said: "The past year has been one of our largest as relates to volume, and profits are quite up to the average." The balance sheet presented showed a surplus of $15,200,000 after paying a dividend of seven per cent. and adding additional property value of over five dollars to each share and charging off to depreciation over $1,600,000.

Still with this showing a Republican congress continues to appropriate the money to pay the expense that the trust should pay of inspection of cattle and meat that Swift & Co. and the other members of the beef combine deal out to the American public.

SEEMS TO NEED INVESTIGATION.

Peculiar Actions of Treasury Authorities During the Panic.

The proposed investigation by the senate of the administration of the United States treasury during the panic will no doubt produce publicity of some extraordinary achievements in the field of finance. It is claimed that the issue of Panama bonds was sold to the banks for less than other people offered to pay, and that in distributing the proceeds and the other available cash in the treasury the south and west did not get their fair share. The law, of course, provides that the bonds, when issued, were to be sold to the highest bidder, and although the depositing in the national banks of the available cash in the treasury is left a good deal to the discretion of the secretary of the treasury, as to amount and the security for the same, yet the law provides that the banks of each section of the country shall get their fair share. These are serious charges, especially if it turns out to be true, that the people have been plundered by their own servants by selling the bonds to national banks at less than they were worth. There is another very serious question that the Republican administration must explain, which is why Panama bonds were sold at all, when there was no need for such issue for the purpose of providing money to build the canal? The books of the United States treasury showed at the time the bonds were sold there was a balance of over $250,000,000 of cash on hand available to pay for canal building, which congress could appropriate for that, or any other purpose. It is true that the receipts of the government under Republican laws have been, for the present fiscal year, less than the running expenses, and as the last congress had been very extravagant in making appropriations, it will be necessary to trench more and more upon the available cash before the fiscal year expires. But the deficit will probably not be more than $50,000,000, which would still leave $200,000,000 surplus cash.

Why, then, did the president order an issue of bonds when the treasury had ample funds to meet the extravagant appropriations? The excuse will probably be that to call upon the banks during the panic for a return of even a few millions to pay the bills of the government would have been very inconvenient for the Wall street bankers, to whom the Roosevelt and former Republican administrations were under great obligations for contributions to campaign funds. It is a comfort to Democrats that Senator Culberson, the new party leader in the senate, has promptly demanded the evidence of all these questionable financial transactions, which on their face will cost the people many more millions of taxation for a generation to come than thero was need for.

That Balance of Trade.

It is surprising to find Secretary Taft reiterating that stale old Republican idea that the United States receives gold in payment for the apparent balance of trade on our foreign commerce. In his speech at Boston he said:

"We are able to settle for the one hundred millions of gold that we withdrew from Europe . . . by the excess of our exports over our imports in the single month of October."

This reasoning is, of course, intended to show how prosperity produced by the tariff follows the footsteps of the Republican party and compels foreign countries to pay tribute to us. But the facts do not warrant the assumption, but entirely disprove it. The official reports of the United States treasury show that our merchants exported an excess of gold, silver and merchandise over their total imports of $7,631,000,000 during the last 70 years. During the past ten years there has been exported $5,008,000,000 more of gold, silver and merchandise than has been imported. As this is greater than the entire visible gold supply of the world now can Mr. Taft, or any other Republican statistician, explain why we have not all the gold in the world in exchange for our enormous excess of exports.

The gold imported during the panic was forced here by bidding more for it, in the free gold market of England, than the Bank of England or anyone else was willing to pay for it. The bankers who imported it made a large profit, for currency here was selling for three per cent. premium, and gold, of course, was quite as valuable as paper money. As the balance of trade is adjusted from time to time, this gold may, and probably will, return to London unless we are able to pay our debts there with wheat, cotton and other merchandise. The disputed question of where the enormous balance of trade goes to and why we do not receive payment in gold for it, which we evidently do not, can probably be explained by the large sum paid annually for ocean freights, interest on our bonds and stocks held in foreign countries and the enormous sum carried abroad annually by the ever-increasing flood of visitors from this country to Europe every summer, not forgetting the money taken by immigrants and what our foreign population send to their relatives abroad.

That we receive from abroad all we are entitled to cannot be disputed, and the attempt of the Republican politicians to show for partisan purposes that we are receiving vastly more is unworthy of those who aspire to be known as statesmen.

"No peace in Ohio" is the way the headlines put it. Though as a matter of principle we favor peace, yet sometimes war brings good results.

The One Hundred and Seventy-Sixth Anniversary of Washington's Birth

George Washington was born on the banks of the Potomac, in Westmoreland county, Virginia, on February 22, 1732.

At the age of 16 he was a good surveyor and at 19 he was adjutant of one of the Virginia militia districts with the rank of major.

At the age of 21 he was selected by Gov. Dinwiddie of Virginia as a "person of distinction," under orders of the British government, to demand an explanation of the French, who were forming settlements in the northwest and in the Mississippi valley.

At the age of 23 he was commissioned as colonel in the British army, and from that time, when as a "soldier of the king" he became distinguished on the field, until he took leave of his officers on November 23, 1783, after having overthrown the royal government, he was the most important factor in the affairs of the new country.

Ending an eventful and successful military career, he retired to his home at Mount Vernon, Va., from which place in 1784 he wrote to Lafayette: "I have become a private citizen on the banks of the Potomac, and under the shadow of my own vine and fig tree, free from the bustle of the camp, . . . I am solacing myself with those tranquil enjoyments of which the soldier who is ever in pursuit of fame, the statesman . . . and the courtier . . . can have little conception."

At the time Washington wrote the quoted words to Lafayette he had no thought that he would be called as the president of the republic, the living reality of which he had created. But so, and on the 30th day of April, 1789, having been elected on the 6th day of the same month, he took the oath of office in New York city, having journeyed to that place from Mount Vernon in his private carriage.

Washington served his country as its first chief executive for a period of eight years—two terms—and declined a third term. No other president since Washington has enjoyed that distinction.

The national government, in connection with the states, has undertaken to do honor to his memory by making his birthday a national holiday and by erecting monuments of marble pointing skyward, but the grandest and most expressive tribute is embraced in the lettering: "First in War, First in Peace, First in the Hearts of His Countrymen," as chiseled on the statue which stands

Washington was a very enthusiastic Mason, and was identified with the lodge in Alexandria, Va., which was chartered in 1783 under the Pennsylvania jurisdiction, but in 1788 it was rechartered as the Alexandria-Washington lodge, No. 22, and Washington was named as worshipful master in the charter.

Christ church, Alexandria, Va., ivy and moss covered, was completed and delivered over to the vestry on February 27, 1773, the construction having been begun January 1, 1767. Col. Washington was one of the first vestrymen of the church, and on the day that it was turned over by the builders he purchased pew No. 5 for the sum of £36 10 shillings, agreeing also to pay an annual rental of £5 for the same.

The church was consecrated by Bishop Claggett of Maryland on June 14, 1814. This ancient and historic edifice is still used as a place of worship. It is kept open every week day, and is annually visited by thousands. A small admission fee is charged for the purpose of defraying the expense of keeping it open to the public. In the rear of and on the south side is an old burial ground, and some very old tablets, antedating the construction of the church, are still standing, and are in a remarkable state of preservation.

The square pew, with open door, on the right of the pulpit and under the balcony, is pew No. 5, which was occupied by Col. Washington when attending services there until the date of his death; he never changed his membership from the church. A silver plate, bearing his autograph, is on the top of the pew door. Originally all the pews in the church were built in a square form, but later, with the exception of the Washington pew, were changed to the present-day style of construction.

On the east wall, under the balcony and to the right of the pulpit, is a memorial tablet placed to the memory of Gen. Washington.

A similar tablet, placed to the memory of Gen. Robert E. Lee, occupies similar space on the wall to the left of the pulpit. Gen. Lee was a vestryman of the church at the commencement of the civil war, and the pew occupied by him is across the aisle from and a little to the rear of the Washington pew. This pew is indicated by a silver plate showing his autograph.

Washington received his commission in 1755, as a colonel in the British army, from Gen. Braddock, in the Carlyle house, at Alexandria, Va. This house was erected in 1732 by John S. Carlyle on the brow of a hill, and its base rests on an old fort built in 1615 by Capt. John Smith on one of the occasions when he came up the Potomac to trade with the Indians. Originally the house was reached by a fine flight of stone steps from a beautiful lawn reaching to Fairfax street and adorned by 16 Lombardy poplars arranged in four parallel rows. The poplars and lawn have long since disappeared, and long ranges of rooms of the present Braddock house occupy their site, and the house is only visible to the public from the eastern or rear side.

It was also in this house that the unfortunate expedition against Fort Duquesne was arranged by Gen. Braddock and the governors of Maryland, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania and Virginia, in 1755.

W. L. Riddell, the popular editor of the RECORDER, was a visitor here Thursday. There is no more welcome visitor to Walton than Mr. Riddell, and the only regret is that he does not come often enough.

J. Mit Baker, the efficient Division Deputy of the U. S. Collector's office at Covington, spent Friday here on business, and enjoyed the pleasure of a visit to his old home at Big Bone Springs, Saturday.

Miss Eula Rensker, of Dry Ridge, spent Saturday and Sunday here with Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Doubman, on her way home from a visit to her brother, Raymond Renaker, cashier of the Peoples' Bank at Glencoe.

Nicholas Blau, of Covington, has bought the farm of Stanley Crouch, near Petersburg, through the agency of W. E. Vest. The farm contains about 100 acres and the selling price is $5,500, being $500 more than Mr. Crouch paid for the land some years ago.

John T. Booth, one of our prominent citizens, who has been in ill health a long time, expired this morning. Funeral Thursday. He was about 50 years old, and esteemed by all. He was a prominent Odd Fellow, by which order the funeral will be conducted.

S. W. Beverly, the efficient station agent of the L. & N. Railroad, at this place, was called by telegram to Campbellsburg, Henry county, last week, to attend the bedside of his father, H. C. Beverly, who is seriously ill of a stomach affliction. Mr. Beverly spent part of this week at his father's bedside.

Dr. Frank Hopkins and wife, of Rabbit Hash, spent part of the past week with her mother, Mrs. Eliza Johns, of Key West, and took the train here, Saturday, for Louisville, where they will visit friends, and Mrs. Hopkins will take special treatment for a severe rheumatic attack from which she has been suffering for several months.

John A. Adams, son of Rev. S. M. Adams, of this place, has sold his merchandise establishment at Key West, Kenton county, to Fred Johns, delivering the property Wednesday, and moving to the farm of the late Mrs. Rebecca Powers near Key West. Mrs. Adams is a daughter of the late Mrs. Powers and being given the farm by will executed by her mother, she prevailed on her husband taking charge of the farm, he being an excellent farmer and a good business man.

Rev. H. C. Dunn, of the Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville, filled the pulpit of the Walton Baptist church Saturday and Sunday in the place of the regular pastor, Rev. Stewart, of Erlanger, who was detained at home on account of the serious illness of his wife. Rev. Dunn is a fluent speaker of polish and information, and his discourses were very interesting, instructive and entertaining. Rev. Dunn is of Scotch ancestry and resides in Virginia, and has the good qualities of that excellent people.

Charles Stansifer, of Key West, Kenton county, was a welcome visitor here the first of the week. Mr. Stansifer formerly resided here. He enlisted in the U. S. Army and went to the Philippine Islands, and, on receiving his discharge, engaged in the general merchandise business, and made a good sum of money, finally selling out and coming home to see his relatives. He is anxious to return to the Philippines, but his mother has prevailed on his remaining where she can have the enjoyment of being with him.

James Allphin, who recently went to Tucson, Arizona, for the benefit of his health, writes that he arrived safely and is delighted with that salubrious country, and states that Mr. and Mrs Frank E. Curley, formerly of Walton, are in fine health and doing well. Mr. Allphin was to have graduated this year from the Louisville Medical College, but being tall and slender and becoming afflicted with a cough, it was feared he was threatened with pulmonary trouble, and to escape the vigors of the winter, went to Arizona, where the mild day climate means much to those inclined to be weakly.

The Walton Brick Company, who recently purchased the real estate and buildings of the old cannery here from the Snider Preserve Co., have had two practical tests made of the clay on the premises out of which they expect to make pressed brick, and the sample bricks made are beyond their expectation in quality and utility. The brick are particularly fine, and already the company has been requested to make a bid on over one million of the brick. It is expected the company will begin work by the latter part of March, and if the brick prove anything like the samples already made, the product of the work will be easily sold in every quarter.

Some of the enterprising citizens of Walton and vicinity, who are interested in the raising of fine saddle horses, have bought the fine four year old saddle stallion, High Vine, from George Hambrick, of Georgetown, for $1,500 cash, and W. Lee Gaines and C. T. Best, of this place, and O. W. Slaughter, of Mt. Zion, went to Georgetown and brought the horse here, where he will make his home. This is a very fine horse and was a leading premium winner at the Erlanger, Florence, Sanders and other fairs. High Vine made the best record of any three-year-old saddle stallion shown last year, winning nine blue ribbons, (firsts) and three reds (seconds), defeating some of the best horses in the State. He will be shown at the principal fairs the coming fall. High Vine was sired by Highland Gaines, a son of the great Highland Denmark. His first dam, Bessie Sabel by Shropshire's Kentucky Squirrel, a sire of several noted show horses, including Judge Cantrill, the greatest saddle gelding ever produced in the State. The second dam by Fayette Denmark. The Walton people organized a stock company with $1,500 of $50 shares, the organization to be known as the High Vine Live Stock Company. W. L. Gaines was elected president; J. G. Tomlin, secretary, and the Equitable Bank treasurer. The following is the list of stockholders: C. L. Griffith, C. E. Lipscomb, J. B. Dixon, J. D. Doubman, T. J. The entertainment at Hebron town hall on the night of the 22d inst. was the best show ever put on in this place by home talent. It was given by Rev. We failed to mention in our notes, last week, the thrilling escape that Charlie Beall, sr., experienced in attempting to cross Elijah's creek at the Taylorsport ford on the 14th inst. He had been to the city with his marketing, having driven to the Port in the morning, leaving his rig at the livery stable. Along in the afternoon he returned and started home. It had been raining the entire day and when he came to the creek he found it much swollen, but thinking he could cross it alright drove in. When near the middle his horse and buggy went down in a hole that had washed out during the day. His horse, in making frantic efforts to escape drowning, broke loose from the vehicle and reached the shore, leaving Charlie in the buggy that was entirely submerged, except the seat, which he perched upon in order from getting wet. He had a basket of groceries in the buggy and it soon disappeared down the angry waters into the Ohio river. Realizing his perilous position mounted on the seat in mid stream, the waters rising rapidly and knowing that it was his great weight that kept the buggy from turning over, was enough to terrify any one beyond conception, but such was not the case with Chas. His gr at presence of mind came to his rescue. He gave the hailing sign of distress, which was answered by Wendell Miller, an old river man, and noted life saver, who came to his rescue. Miller soon took in the situation and rushing to his boat house procured a long rope which he managed to get in reach of Charlie. He managed to fasted the rope to the vehicle some way and by the combined strength of seven men, he was safely cordelled to the shore.

He leaves a wife, Aunt Amanda; one son, Theodore, and 4 grand-children, and Wm. Woodward, whom he raised and was a loving father to. The funeral was one of the largest ever held here. Services were conducted at the home by Rev. Blyth, of the Methodist Church, of which Uncle John was a member for 20 years. He will be missed by the family, in fact by the whole neighborhood. The remains were laid to rest in the Carpenter family cemetery, to await the judgment day, and we only hope that we may have as good record and name to appear before the judgment seat as has our lamented uncle. Speaking of Sunday Schools—I doubt if there is one in Boone county or possibly in the State of Kentucky that has the record of the Florence Christian Sunday School. It has been going all of 46 years. Those who organized it have long since gone to their reward. Many of the pupils have married and moved away and some have died. Sometimes there are a few in numbers and then again there will be an increase for a time, but there are a few of the faithful that believe, that God is and has been with them, and trusting in Him they do not intend it shall go down in their day, at least. We might further say that this Sunday School has been, principally, conducted by a few of the lady members of the church.

A CARD.

The RECORDER is in receipt of the following letter from Mrs. Annie Chandler, denying the charge made by W. R. Miller, and published in the RECORDER of November 13, 1907, that Dr. Ryle took bed clothes from her for her son's doctor bill. The letter is as follows:

To the RECORDER:—Some time ago Wood Miller said in this paper that Dr. Ryle took my bed clothes for his doctor bill.

This is the most ridiculous falsehood Wood Miller ever told.

The Dr. come to see my son Fred every day for over two months. After he died I asked him how much I owed him, and he said I was not able to pay him anything, being left without anyone to help me.

It's a shame for the Dr. after he was so good to me and my son to be slaudered by Wood Miller.

MRS. ANNIE CHANDLER.
Falmouth, Ky.

C. L. Hensley, a native of Ashby Fork neighborhood, this county, who moved to Pulaski county several years ago, remembered the RECORDER with a generous remittance a few days since. He keeps well posted as to the movements of his old acquaintances in this county by means of the paper.

ACROSS THE DESERT

The Funny Things One Sees in Smiling Round the World

By MARSHALL P. WILDER

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

In Oklahoma we were stalled for a day in a town called Shawnee. The supply on our diner gave out and at this town we had our first experience with local restaurants. We went to the "New England Home Restaurant," so-called. We didn't dare sit down, for fear we'd never get loose again. The sandwiches were made of bread at least two and a half inches thick with a piece of cold fried beefsteak between.

We took a chance at the real thing in hot tomales one day. A little boy was selling them at one of the stations. Well, after the first bite, mine fell out of the window. A lean and melancholy dog made a dive for it, gave a sniff and, with a disappointed look, sneaked away, and I didn't blame him. He looked hungry, too.

At one of those little prairie towns that seem to actually leap out of space, they come so suddenly into view, we found our cow in a shed by the station. We made quite a stop here and everyone got out. Several of the passengers wished to follow our custom and buy some milk, and some adventurous ones even essayed the unaccustomed feat of milking her themselves. I was offered the chance to try, but refused, having sore recollections of my first and last attempt to milk.

It was on my uncle's farm up in New York state, and I, wishing to do everything that a real farmer should, desired to enroll milking among my accomplishments. Being of tender years, and with the confidence that usually accompanies that stage of life, I entered the barn for my first lesson with the utmost nonchalance, and gaily humming a dairy tune. I don't remember how I came out, but I think it was by the elevated. When I first looked at the cow she was all peace and contentment, but when she saw me she looked dissatisfied, and I knew there was a kick coming. She stopped chewing her cud and let it run down the loop—then, after a few minutes, she rang it up again, having decided upon her line of action. Later I discovered that I was on the line, and very near the transmitter.

At the aforementioned Shawnee we began to get some entertainment from our misfortunes. A young man from California, one of those serious fellows, with a face like a deacon, but a fund of humor within, wrote out telegrams containing the most airy flights of imagination, and showed them to the anxious and perspiring passengers, who spent their time pretty equally between swearing at the management of the road and making the poor conductor's life miserable.

One of these telegrams was shown to me. It stated that the herd of elephants belonging to Ringling Bros' circus, that was stalled 40 miles away, were to be brought over and take the passengers on their backs across the washouts, where another train would meet them.

Looking around to discover the author of this delicious fiction I was met by a preternaturally solemn glance and a comprehensive wink.

After that we pooled our energies, and when I think of what we made that trainful of passengers believe, not to mention the several other trains we were always meeting, for we were generally stalled seven and eight deep, I am astonished at the credulity of human nature.

We devised one telegram about a number of prairie schooners that were to come over the hills and take us by old Spanish trails far from the washouts. My serious friend showed the message, very secretly, to an excitable little German, who evidently belonged to the Uneeda Child company, for he had about a baker's dozen of small children, and a gentle, childlike faith that was truly touching.

We assured him that the conductor could let only a few in on this exceptional opportunity, as it would be impossible to take all the passengers. It would be necessary to secure tickets in order to get places, and he'd better do it now—and not let the conductor put him off—just insist.

In great excitement the little man flew to the poor, distracted conductor, and asked him mysteriously for tickets for himself and family.

"Tickets—what tickets?" demanded that long-suffering man.

"Ah, you know—you kendt fool me—I know all aboud it, mine frendt," wagging a knowing finger in front of his nose.

"I know that you must be crazy. I don't know anything about any extra tickets."

"Dot's all right. You don't want to led on, hud I haf been told. I wish to ged tigets for dose hrairie vaggons—vat?"

"You're crazy!" bellowed the exasperated conductor, to our unholy joy. "Who'n Sam Hill told you anything about prairie wagons? You're been out in the sun too long, Dutchy; go to bed and put ice on your head."

The monotony of our trip was further varied by the arrival at one station of a lady of the peroxide tint of blonde, who smuggled in a small monkey and a large-sized flask. The monkey was hidden beneath the berth, so she would not have to put him in the baggage car.

The greatest excitement ensued; nightgear and lingerie (I trust I use the right word) were in great evidence. Everyone asked everyone else what the trouble was, but none seemed to know.

Finally the mystery was solved.

The blonde lady pleaded on her knees in very maudlin accents that the hard-hearted conductor would not send her precious pet to the baggage car; but he was obdurate, and poor Chico was banished to the accompaniment of his mistress' sobs.

At El Paso we were stalled all one Sunday; but with the expectation of leaving every moment. A bull fight was on, over in Mexico, just across the river, but we dared not go for fear of being left by our train.

From El Paso we kept north across the arid table lands, the low hills, like crumpled, rusty tin, lying along the horizon. They are treasure houses of copper, these hills, and, every few miles, a mine opening may be seen perched high up on a hillside, a short spur of the railway leading to it.

Crossing the desert between Tucson and Fort Yuma, we ran into a sand storm. The fine sand sifted into every smallest opening and made breathing well-nigh impossible. Fortunately it did not last long. We had only run into a corner of it and were soon out.

The desert showed us several of her capricious moods, for presently we were treated to a most perfect mirage. Apparently a lake or broad river in the desert, with little inlets and rocks mirrored in the most beautiful, cool and wettest looking water imaginable.

Fort Yuma claims the distinction of being the hottest place in the union. A story is told of a soldier who lived there, and died. The night after his death his spirit appeared to some of his comrades at their camp fire. They asked him what he wanted, and he said Hades was so much colder than Yuma he had come back for his blanket.

It certainly lived up to its reputation the day we were there.

A number of Indians were seated by the platform displaying articles of beadwork for sale. They object strenuously to being photographed—thinking the camera has the evil eye, and while it takes their portrait will also steal away their soul.

However, these scruples can be overcome at the rate of 50 cents a scruple. Who says the commercial instinct lurks not in the breast of the Indian?

One old woman, who was said to be a hundred and four years old, covered her head with her blanket when I pointed my camera at her. For her entertainment I did a little sleight-of-hand work, making the pass with a quarter, pretending to swallow it, then picking it off her blanket, finally rubbed it into my trouser leg and made it disappear entirely.

I only succeeded in frightening the poor old creature almost to death. She clasped her hands in fear, made the sign of the cross, crooked her fingers to avert the evil eye, and, pointing to me, put her fingers to her head like horns, indicating that I was a gentleman extremely well-known but of unsavory reputation.

Leaving these interesting remnants of the great race that once owned the land, we continued upon our sadly interrupted journey

PEOPLE TO BLAME

HAVE THOUGHTLESSLY AIDED IN CENTRALIZING INDUSTRIES.

EVILS NOW CLEARLY SEEN

Unequitable Distribution of the Earnings of the People Inevitably Followed—Growth of Small Towns and Communities Retarded.

During the last few months of 1907 the people had a striking example of the effects of too much centralisation. While all over the United States there was prosperity, a few embarrassed concerns in Wall street, New York, brought about a financial stringency that became generally felt. For years the agricultural sections have been sending money by the millions to the great financial centers. Here it was used for the building up of great trusts and combinations, which were greatly overcapitalized. On this watered capitalization the people have been compelled to pay ponderous dividends.

One natural law is that of concentralization, segregation, and in these matters Nature carries on its work well, but unnatural concentration, like other infractions of natural laws, bring quick punishment. The centralization of industries which has been going on since the trust era started has brought about an unequitable distribution of the earnings of the people. It has retarded the growth of towns and communities. It has brought in its wake many evils that affect workers in every field. Yet for these evils the masses of people are to blame. Every man, woman and child who labors and who sends the products of that labor to other places than the home community assists just so much in centralization of business and financial power. Every resident of a rural community who sends his dollars to the large city helps along the trust builders and the centralizers. While the mail-order evil is one that is serious, it is only so as it is a means of centralization of business, and the consequent sapping from communities the wealth that should be retained in them.

The commercial enterprises are the life elements of the rural towns. When these enterprises are destroyed the town deteriorates. With the disappearance of the town goes the home markets, the good schools and the churches and the other public conveniences that the town affords. With the going down of the town, real estate values are depreciated, and depression comes to all the community. How would the farmers fare if the towns were wiped out and only the large cities allowed to exist? What kind of markets would the farmers have for all their produce? How does the average farmer find dealing with city concerns at the present time? When a shipment of eggs is made to the city commission man, does the farmer get as good returns as he does from the home dealers? How about other produce? It is the home markets that afford the growers of produce protection. When the calm thinker who is engaged in agriculture considers all these little matters, he will find that in home patronage lies the keystone of his success. How would the agricultural districts be as living places were there no home towns? But this is what the situation would be if all the people of a community sent to some foreign place for all the goods required.

Home is a word dear to all good citizens. That man lacks patriotism whose inclination it is to oppose the progress of the place where he resides. By making better the home town, we are improving the community of which we are a part. We cannot improve without benefiting ourselves. We cannot give patronage to concerns in the large cities without giving just so much help to the trust builders and the business centralizers. All these things are worthy of the most serious consideration of every citizen.

Adulterated Foodstuffs.

The chemist in charge of the laboratory of the department of agriculture at Chicago has been paying careful attention to the purity of foods. Recently he made a statement that one great spice company annually ground up 600 tons of cocoanut shells and flavored the same with essential oils and then sold the powdered stuff for pure spices. He related about another concern which sold $100,000 worth of spices annually, only five per cent of which were pure. The common articles used for adulteration of spices are sawdust, brick dust, burnt grains, cocoanut shells and other kinds of shells and barks. It is the aim of the United States government to put an end to this adulteration of foods. Since the government has become active in tracing down such frauds a number of unscrupulous grocery houses have been compelled to go out of business.

Reputation Worth Acquiring.

Townspeople owe it to themselves to build up a reputation for hospitality. They should ever welcome the residents of the surrounding country to their town. But hospitality alone will not win. People have their eyes on the mighty dollar, and if in addition to hospitality the town secure a wide reputation as a good market place, where eggs and butter bring a few cents a pound more than in some other town, it will work wonders in drawing patronage to the place.

Clean and well-paved streets indicate the good character of citizens living in a place.

BUILDING UP THE CHARACTER.

A Few Words to the Youth Who Would Make the Most of Life.

It is well that the majority of us value being well thought of. Few young men, anxious to make the most of life, care to have what is commonly known as a "bad reputation." Do you, young man, ever stop to think that there are immutable laws that control the universe and all therein? Do you ever consider that light is only the evidence of a luminous body? That the brilliancy of the diamond is merely the rays reflected from the perfectly crystallized carbon? Reputation is only the reflection from character as it is variously projected upon the screen of public opinion; but reputation is not character, any more than the light is the luminous body, but is merely the effulgence, the result of character.

The imitation diamond for a time may rival in splendor and brilliancy the reflections of light of the genuine gem, but this brilliancy is soon dulled. The same with reputation, which sometimes attaches to character which will not stand the test of time, or the scrutiny of the exacting eye of justice. Week after week we read in the pages of the press of the downfall and disgrace of men high in public estimation, and who, until their duplicity was exposed, were men of most excellent reputation—reputation reflected falsely from an unclean character.

Character is the mold of moral consciousness. It is the outgrowth of the heart carefully nurtured by truth and love and directed by intelligence solely influenced by that which is moral in man. It is by reputation that we are to be judged by those with whom we are thrown in either business or social intercourse. Our own acts are the standard by which we will be either praised or condemned. Our own acts are the indications of the spirit within. Though we may be most excellent in character, sometimes we may be falsely estimated; may acquire through some misunderstood circumstance a reputation undesirable. But character ever counts. It is sure to bring to the front its worth. The diamond may be robbed of its brilliancy for a time by grime and dirt, but it is nevertheless a diamond. Your true worth may be obscured for a time, but it is sure to become known.

Character is the greatest thing the young man has to guard. It is the only sure foundation upon which hopes can be rightly based. He who is true to himself cannot be untrue to others. Would you have character and reputation, you must work, constantly unceasingly, as conscience becomes deadened and degenerate when not exercised, and conscience directs the building of character. There are qualities in man that mark his greatness and his superiority—the moral and the mental, and it is by the exercise of these that greatness and success are gained.

AUTOMOBILES FOR THE FARM.

Tillers of the Soil to Be on Equality with People of Towns.

One of the large companies engaged in the manufacturing of farm machinery proposes placing on the market at an early date an automobile especially designed for farm use. This machine will be sold at a reasonable price, and will be put out in various styles ranging from a runabout to a heavy farm truck, which the farmer can use in transporting his grain and other produce to the markets.

Transportation of farm produce to the railroad stations and the markets is a question of economy. It is estimated that at the present time it costs the farmer about nine cents per hundred pounds to carry his grain a distance of 12 miles to the railroad station or market place. It is expected that the installation of automobiles for hauling purposes will decrease the expense to three or four cents per hundred pounds. The coming of the farm automobile means further improvement of roads. Already the automobile and the rural delivery of mail has worked wonders in the way of stimulating interest in road improvement. Once the farmers become automobile users they will be more energetic workers, in fact, enthusiasts for high-class highways.

Another use of the automobile in agricultural districts is its employment by merchants for delivering goods to patrons in the country. In a number of eastern states enterprising merchants send out their clerks with automobiles in the morning to solicit the orders of the people residing on the nearby farms, and use the automobile for delivering goods in the afternoon. Merchants who have adopted this plan have found it profitable and their business greatly increased, not considering the advertising received by this innovation.

Where Some Citizens Fail in Duty.

Many who have succeeded upon the farms remove to the near-by town to enjoy life, perhaps to give to their children the advantages that the good schools of the place afford. It is too often the case that these people fail to become the model town citizens they should be. While they are desirous of having all the advantages that the town has to offer they are adverse to doing that which means its improvement and upbuilding. These classes are the "moss-backs," the ones who think that they have done their duty toward themselves and their fellow men when they manage to earn sufficient on the farm so that they can cease work. It may be their privilege to quit labor, but they show a poor and lowly spirit when they fail to give the town which they select as a home place the support it should have from one of its citizens.

DO GOOD FOR POOR

PRUSSIAN GOVERNMENT'S CHARITY BUREAU IN BERLIN.

Officers for This Department Chosen with Great Care—Are to Work for the Improvement of Social Conditions.

A national charity bureau exists in Prussia, controlled by the premier. The idea was carried out in concrete form by the provisions of a law passed by the Landtag in April, 1905. Its duties are as follows:

First, to follow the development of charity work and keep the government informed of this development; second, to advise the state of conditions which justify change in existing laws or the passing of new laws, or which suggest change in government methods; third, to draw up opinions and make proposals which will help in framing laws for the benefit of the people; fourth, to take general control of relief stations in case of great calamities. It will also be the duty of the department, first, to establish relations between different charity organizations, suggest improvements in the methods of these organizations and coordinate the forces of the various bodies; second, to follow the progress of charitable work and make an index and collection of all literature relating to the subject; third, to give information and advice in reference to philanthropic endeavor when requested to do so; fourth, to make reports to the state at short intervals in reference to the development and progress of the work in the nation at large; fifth, to draw up opinions and make proposals for the improvement or better organization of the charity propaganda in part or as a whole; sixth, to take charge of the development of the work in any section; seventh, to assist in putting in operation any suggestions or plans which may be made or worked out for the improvement of social conditions.

The bureau is a large one and the officers are chosen with a care justified by its importance. The main body consists of a general assembly, which is composed of members of the Ubarm profession, public bodies and individuals and societies engaged in charitable work. The second division is known as the advisory committee and is composed of 48 members. Of these 30 are elected by the directors and 18 are chosen by the state. Finally, the directors form a group of 24 persons.

Rare Paintings Discovered.

Many rare and valuable paintings have just been discovered in one of the subterranean passages of the State college here. The building was formerly in the possession of the Jesuits, and it is now believed that when they were expelled from the country they walled up the underground catacombs of the building in order that their treasures of art and wealth might be concealed.—Puebla Correspondence Mexican Herald.

A Special Brand.

Brown—I want to thank you again for that cigar you gave me yesterday. I enjoyed it immensely.

Green—I'm glad you liked it. By the way, I have another of the same brand if you care to smoke.

Brown—No, thank you. I didn't smoke the other one. I have a grudge against Jones, so I gave it to him.

Timely Suggestion.

After having been seriously ill for several weeks Mr. Tyte-Phist was declared to be out of danger.

"What's the use of getting well?" he groaned, when the attending physician broke the news to him. "I'll have to pay your bill, and I know it'll be a mighty steep one!"

What of that, my friend?" soothingly spake the doctor. "Think what it costs to die in this town."

Mr. Tyte-Phist reflected a moment. "That's so," he said, his voice growing stronger. "I hadn't thought of that."

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

Rather Neatly Put.

A Baltimore man had until recently a darky in his employ—about as shiftless and worthless a darky, says he, as ever he came across. One day the employer, his patience exhausted, called Sam into his office and told him to look for another job. "Will you give me a letter of recommendation?" asked Sam, piteously. Although he felt that he could not conscientiously comply with this request, the Baltimore man's heart was touched by the appeal. So he sat down to his desk to write a non-committal letter of character for the negro. His effort resulted as follows: "This man, Sam Harkins, has worked for me one week, and I am satisfied."

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.

TURNING VANITY INTO MONEY

By JOHN R. THOMPSON,

Treasurer Cook County, Illinois.

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Why is it that thousands of intelligent men working for salaries or for wages are investing their savings in the stocks of wildcat companies against the advice of friends competent to advise them and in the face of their own better judgment?

The obvious answer is: Because they expect to profit greatly by the investment—to "get rich quick," as the common saying puts it. This is only half the answer, and the other half—often the more powerful—is seldom brought out.

It can be stated in one small word—Vanity.

This is not flattering to the investors who have defied the sober counsel of experienced men of affairs and who have stifled their own natural forebodings and sense of caution, but the fact remains that vanity has, in hundreds of thousands of cases, been the one factor which has turned the tables against reason, judgment and good counsel and emptied the pockets of the wage earner and the salary worker into the coffers of the fake investment shark.

When the bait thrown out is equally attractive to the cupidity and the vanity of human nature the catch is almost certain—and the clearness with which the latter human weakness is understood by the sharpers who lie in wait for the surplus savings of those who do the world's hand work, is evidenced by the fact that the literature sent out to lure the unwary is full of phrases like this:

"Why not become an associate of men who are doing things? We want your influence in your community. The men who are in this enterprise are known in the business world and they desire cooperation of others who are capable of broad and independent judgment, of men like yourself who can see beyond the rim of a silver dollar and appreciate large opportunities, men of constructive abilities who are ready to take a hand in the development of one of the greatest enterprises of the present day. Your advice, influence and cooperation are more valuable to us than your money."

When this appeal is put to a man who has always worked under others, who has never been consulted by a business man, whose opinions on business matters have never been asked by any person outside his own family circle, the temptation to a new and delightful feeling of self-importance is almost inevitable. There is not a clerk bending over a desk or a counter, a mechanic working at his lathe or bench, or a laborer toiling in street or field who has not at times felt that he has had ideas about some feature of business worth considering, who has not harbored a secret longing to have a place and standing among the men who pull the wires which move the machinery of business. When such a man—and his kind is legion—receives one of these artful and insinuating appeals to his vanity he is rarely poised and gifted with common sense above his fellows if he does not feel that at last he has come into his own, that his abilities have finally been appreciated and that the stranger in the business world has understood him better than his associates, his neighbors, his familiar friends and those under whom he works. The flattery of this appeal outweighs its shallow rawness and its obvious and cheap fashioning. But the real cunning of this attack upon his vanity is the fact that it appeals to his "independent judgment" and classes him among the men who see things shrewdly and in a big way and who scorn timidity. If he listens to this argument—and generally he does—he feels a new sense of self-importance and of independence and a corresponding disinclination to listen to the advice of those whose familiarity with business and finance would enable him to steer clear of the rocks of disaster. His judgment is pitted against theirs and he is aroused to a determination to "show them" that his opinion is better than theirs.

This antagonism against the reception of advice from men of experience is the one thing which the investment shark most desires to awaken in the prospective victim, for it will prevent him not only from seeking sound advice but from acting upon it when it is put in his way.

The schemers who have learned how irresistibly the argument of "manage for yourself" appeals to the man who has never had a chance to try his hand at managing a business have not stopped at this point; they have also learned that men in the humbler walks of life are clannish and inclined to think and act together. Along with this they have realized that it is easier and cheaper to hunt their game in flocks and droves than singly. When the sportsman wishes to get a big bag of game and get it quickly he goes after the birds which travel in flocks. So with these gunners who are adepts in the use of decoys and "calls." They arrange their hunts in line with this idea of clannishness, of mass movement and use the ammunition of "act for yourself" so that every shot will be a "pot shot."

Here is an example of how this kind of financial sportsmanship is prosecuted: Some time ago an inventor brought out a machine for the making of print paper from the pith of cornstalks. So far as making an impressive, scientific demonstration was concerned, the device was admirable, but when it came to its ability to compete commercially with wood pulp mills and their products, that was a problem that did not greatly concern the promoters with whom the inventor and patentee became associated. So long as the machine did its demonstration work with convincing plausibility their immediate purpose was fully met. The paper production in which they were most concerned was that upon which the handsome stock certificates of the company were printed.

He immediately turned his guns upon wage workers of the printing and paper trades.

By personal solicitation and printed literature he plied the members of these trades with the argument: "Make this your own industry! Here is the opportunity for you to keep in your own hands the thing which is going to revolutionize the paper business just as the typesetting machine has revolutionized the printers' craft. You can, by coming in now, with a small investment per man, place yourselves in control of an industry which will hold in its grip a product of millions of dollars a year—a product upon which the whole paper and printing world depends for its existence."

This was an argument which every man in the mechanical department of a newspaper or a commercial printing establishment, and every paper mill or paper company, could understand. It met him on his own ground and he began to see visions of himself as one of the "powers" in the very industry in which he was an obscure wage worker. What a turning of the tables there would be when the world awakened to the fact that this great "revolutionizing invention" was controlled by the men at the type case and machines, the printing presses, the stereotyping tables, the pulp vats and the paper warerooms! Then the "last" would become first, the paper industry would be ruled by the men from the bottom of business; the journeyman would be the magnate and would know the feeling of power and authority!

By scores and hundreds the wage workers in these trades rallied to this cry and the leaders among them were "taken care of" in a way which made them feel that they had already come into their own. These bell-wethers of the craft marshaled their followings with a sincere confidence that they were leading the way to a financial Utopia and the promoters rubbed their hands in satisfaction at the rate at which their illuminated stock certificates were demanded by the workers who wanted to become captains of industry and "manage for themselves." Certain "subsidiary" and "allied" companies were organized for the purpose of giving more of these men official position—to distribute to a wider number the thrill that comes from putting a hand on the pilot wheel of "affairs."

The outcome of this revolution to place the trusting wage worker in the control of an industry of his own is fully covered by the suggestion that the farmer is still "plowing under" the dead cornstalks upon which the news of the world was to have been printed. Meantime hundreds of faithful workers in the printing and paper trades are finding it more difficult to "manage" their own personal finances because of the deficit created by the investment which was to "make the industry their own."

The ambition of the wage earner and the man on salary to better his condition, to "make his surplus work for him," to find a broader expression for his individuality and abilities in a business way is both natural and commendable; but he will make a poor start in the line of that ambition if he fails to realize, at the outset, that finance is as much a technical trade as that which the typesetter, the mason, the carpenter, the machinist or the plumber follows, and that it would be no more absurd for the banker or the man of finance to attempt to set a galley of type, by a brick wall or serve at a machinist's lathe without a technical training, an apprenticeship, than for the journeyman in any of these crafts to take a financial operation, no matter how modest, into his own hands, independent of the guiding council of the man who knows the ropes of finance. And the investment in a stock or a bond is a transaction in "finance" in the strict and full sense of the term.

The man of small means, unschooled in the ways of finance, might just as safely hand his pocket money or his savings bank account over to an utter stranger who promises to meet him at a certain place, at some future time, and give him something valuable in return, as to put his money into the stocks and alleged securities which are being foisted upon the public today by the beating of publicity drums and the blare of promotion trumpets. One of these transactions does not require a whit greater stretch of credulity than the other.

Let the man who has an ambition to manage his small savings keep steadily in mind the fact that the concern whose literature or solicitors attempt to influence him against seeking the advice of men familiar with the ins and outs of finance is an enemy to his welfare and unable to stand the light of investigation. The man or the company having something to sell which is sound and worthy has no need to make an underhand appeal to prejudice and vanity in an effort to prevent you from seeking counsel from those of experience.

IMMIGRATION FROM SOUTH EXPECTED

U. S. FARMERS ARE RECOGNIZING SPLENDID OPPORTUNITIES OFFERED BY WESTERN CANADA.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 9, 1908.—Present indications are that the Canadian Northwest will draw an exceptionally heavy movement of new settlers from the United States this year. It should surpass the banner record for 1907. This is not only based on the fact that the Americans have come to realize generally that the Canadian Northwest offers splendid opportunities, but also because the railroads have awakened to the fact and are offering rates to the Canadian Northwest which are exceptionally favorable.

The lines which lead to St. Paul from the east and south are offering homeseekers' rates to the Canadian Northwest this year which are on a parity with those in existence to the southwest for a couple of seasons.

These rates can be obtained from any agent of the Canadian government, who will be pleased to give all information possible regarding those districts which offer the greatest inducements to settlers. The weather throughout Western Canada has been remarkably good this year. A telegram from the winter wheat belt of Southern Alberta dated at Cardston, Alberta, January 29th, says:

"This winter up to January 25 was nothing short of a marvel, in fact, it was the finest anyone can remember for twenty-five years though there have been others nearly as good. The days were fine, sunny and warm with light frosts at night. Overcoats and gloves, etc., were discarded by most people in the day time. There was so little frost in the ground that post holes could be dug without any trouble after the first inch was broken through. Winter wheat remained fresh and green although there has been no snow since the September storm. If there is an early spring, winter wheat should gain a great start."

Amongst the reports of the yield of last year the following extracts are taken:

H. Howe, of Magrath, Alta, writing on November, 1907, says: "I have 70 acres in crop, 50 acres of wheat and seven acres of oats. My average yield of oats was 35 bushels to the acre, and of wheat 45 bushels. The value to me was $35 per acre."

J. F. Haycock, of Magrath, writes in November: "I had 65 acres in winter wheat, which went 60 bushels to the acre; oats averaged 80 bushels. I also had 12 tons of hay worth $10 per ton. I got 600 bushels of potatoes from three acres of land; I got eight tons per acre from five acres of sugar beet."

J. F. Bradshaw, of Magrath, had 1,030 acres of winter wheat last year which averaged 39¼ bushels to the acre. The value of his farm products per acre was: Wheat, $31.60; oats, $11.20 and barley, $25.15.

ECZEMA FOR 55 YEARS.

Suffered Torments from Birth—In Frightful Condition—Got No Help Until Cuticura Cured Him.

"I had an itching, tormenting eczema ever since I came into the world, and I am now a man 55 years old. I tried all kinds of medicines I heard of, but found no relief. I was truly in a frightful condition. At last I broke out all over with red and white boils, which kept growing until they were as big as walnuts, causing great pain and misery, but I kept from scratching as well as I could. I was so run down that I could hardly do my work. I used Cuticura Soap, Ointment, Resolvent, and Pills for about eight months, and I can truthfully say I am cured. Hale Bordwell, Tipton, Ia., Aug. 17, 1907."

"I cheerfully endorse the above testimonial. It is the truth. I know Mr. Bordwell and know the condition he was in. Nelson R. Burnett, Tipton, Ia."

No rust, no insects, no failure.

Pupils or their equivalent in money have been subscribed until the RECORDER has been authorized to announce that Rev. Edgar Riley will begin a high school in Burlington next September. During his vacation Mr. Riley will devote his time to completing the details of the school and soliciting additional pupils, and it is believed that he will turn all his energy to the work of building up a school that will be a credit to him and an honor to the county. He is a young man with an ambition to succeed, and he realizes that his future will be what he makes it. Now, let everybody in and about Burlington root for the school, and when it begins give Mr. Riley and his assistants hearty cooperation in every respect, give the pupils to understand from the first that his word in the school room is law, and for disobedience at school they will be held responsible at home and punished. If pupils know they are to be thus treated the teacher will have no trouble governing his school.

According to the returns of the assessor there were 1,876,000 pounds of tobacco produced by the growers of Boone county in the year 1907, while there were 393,496 bushels of corn, 56,665 bushels of wheat and 2,300 bushels of oats grown. With the entire tobacco crop wiped out there ought to be a very large increase in the corn, oats and potato crops, which would have a tendency to diminish, to a considerable extent, the cost of living in rural homes. A large crop of corn would make meat and bread cheaper, while an abundant crop of potatoes would add greatly to the table supplies. The land that will grow tobacco will produce fine corn and potatoes, and the many acres heretofore cultivated in the weed in this county, if planted to corn and potatoes, will make a considerable showing for Boone county in the matter of these to staple products.

James W. Parrish, the largest tobacco grower in Central Kentucky, and one of the wealthiest citizens of Woodford county, who was sued by the Burley Society for damages for the sale of an alleged pooled crop, has advertised his 900-acre farm and his handsome residence for sale. The house cost over $30,000 and has never been occupied. In a card to the Woodford Sun Mr. Parrish says: "I have not sold, or attempted to sell, any pooled tobacco. None of my tenants have ever pooled their crops." In the same card he announces that he will not grow any tobacco this year.

Last Thursday's Louisville Courier-Journal published a dispatch from Lawrenceburg, in which it was stated that the day before Esq. Solon Early, of Petersburg, was visited by a stranger, who had a diagram of Mr. Early's farm, on which he claimed a convict in the Frankfort penitentiary had told him he had buried $15,000 several years, ago, &c., &c. The RECORDER interviewed Mr. Early by telephone, and he pronounced the article wholly false.

A special election to fill the office of representative in Mason county, caused by the death of Hon. Virgil McKnight, has been called by Speaker Gooch for March 7th. As Mr. McKnight's majority last November was only 100, the result of the special election is very much in doubt, and both parties will make a hard fight to win out.

A bill has been introduced in the General Assembly providing for an annual appropriation of $5,000 to be used for advertising the business advantages of Kentucky. The free advertising that Kentucky has been given in the last six months has attracted more attention to her than her entire revenue would if applied to advertising.

Ed Turner, formerly of Breathitt county is under sentence of death in Tennessee for the murder of his wife. The Governor of that State has been petitioned to commute his sentence to imprisonment on the grounds that he is the product of a godless community. Turner is another bad advertisement for Kentucky.

The indications are the Kentucky Republicans are going to have a lively time from now until the State convention is held for electing delegates to the National convention. The Fairbanks leaders are pulling together but the Taft men are divided among themselves.

So far the present has been the best General Assembly that has convened at the capitol of Kentucky in many, many years. It has past no new, nor repeated none of the old laws. If it keeps up this record throughout there ought not to be much knocking.

After many political trials and tribulations Hon. Leslie T. Applegate has the satisfaction of seeing his name on an official payroll, but he acquired the position by appointment of the Governor, and not by an election.

Wat Hardin—the name sounds familiar—will leave his Virginia farm and return to Middlesboro, this State, to resume the practice of law. It may be he thinks the time is ripe for him to enter the political field again.

The Wisconsin delegation to the National Democratic Convention at Denver, Col., was instructed to vote as a unit for W. J. Bryan, as the Democratic nominee for President first, last and all the time.

The President is almost vehement in his denial of the charge that he is placing federal appointments to office where he thinks they will be most beneficial to Secretary Taft's Presidential aspirations.

The session of the General Assembly was more than half gone before an act reached the Governor for his approval, and then he did not do a thing but put it to sleep with his veto axe.

The Democrats and Republicans alike have been playing both ends of the temperance question against the middle in the Senatorial race at Frankfort. Peanut politics of the most pronounced type.

Judge Harbeson, of Covington, has decided that a sunstroke is not an accident, and one who is carrying accident insurance cannot recover on his policy because of a sunstroke.

Last year 1,800,000,000 gallons of alcoholic beverages were consumed in the United States, of which 1,700,000,000 gallons were beer. The cost of liquor was nearly $1,500,000,000.

Because of the new law requiring a change of telegraph operators every eight hours, railroads contemplate the discontinuance of hundreds of their small stations.

The Federal grand jury at New Orleans has indicted representatives of various labor unions, charging them with violating the Sherman anti-trust law.

The legislature has shown a disposition to do something in the interest of public education in this State, be it said to its credit.

Gov. Willson has made out and transmitted to the Senate a list of State officials which he considers of no use to Kenuecky.

Fairbanks was the first candidate for the Presidency to bag a complete delegation. It is the Hoosier crowd.

Too many grand-stand plays on the whisky question are being pulled off at Frankfort.

Hon. C. E. Nadaud waits for no one when he makes up his mind to do anything. He goes right at it.

The Legislature costs Kentucky about $1,000 a day.

A. S. of E. News.

At Lexington the Equity Society reports the sale of all tobacco in grades W-3 and B-S. The number of hogsheads is large, but the amount is not given. A deal aggregating 10,000,000 pounds of Equity tobacco is now negotiating.

One hundred and seventy-five hogsheads were sold here Saturday to Cincinnati and Louisville parties, and a sale for 500 more hogsheads is pending; several other small sales have been made recently. About three thousand hogsheads have been sold up to this time and prospects are good for a number of sales this week. —Winchester Democrat.

The tobacco growers of Pendleton, or a large majority of them are enthusiastically for "no crop" this good year. They fully realize that if this can be accomplished their hard fought battle is won. Many out of the Society of Equity who sympathize with their brothers who have up to this time borne the blunt of the battle, look upon it as a duty to help them win their fight and are lining up to cut out the crop.—Pendletonian.

The Woodford County Board of Control met in Versailles, Saturday afternoon to receive reports from those who had been canvassing in the interest of cutting out the 1908 crop. It was found that fine progrsss had been made, over 2700 acres being pledged to the proposition. The Board believes that this is the best way to bring the trust to terms, and consequently is by far the best for the farmers and growers. It urges all who have not entered this agreement to do so at once. Now is the time to strike for freedom and the tobacco growers should not be slow to seize the opportunity.—Blue Grass Clipper.

It is reported in Augusta and Brooksville that John A. Downard, the Covington tobacco man, has bought all of the 1906 crop of Bracken County's low grades, consisting of trash, tips and part of the red leaf. In all there are about 1500 hogsheads of these grades included in this sale, and none of it graded less than 10 cents, and the average will be close to 12 cents. News of this sale came direct from Mr. Downard, he having written his brother-in-law, A. R. Langley, who is attending court at Brooksville, a letter to this effect. The selling of these grades of Bracken County tobacco means that more than $150,000 will be distributed among its farmers within a very short time. While there has been no direct news from the State Equity officials, confirming this sale, the information at hand is almost as direct.—Chronicle.

That the public and all other interested persons may know the true condition of affairs regarding the number of acres pledged not to grow a crop in 1908 in the Burley District, the following correct report and resolution made at the meeting of the District Board on February 11th, is presented:

That in as much as the Burley Tobacco Society of Kentucky has over 80,000 acres signed not to grow tobacco in 1908, which names and amount will carry more than 20,000 acres, who have not signed, but who promise not to grow, be it

Resolved, That this Society so inform the public and state its firm belief that no crop will be grown by Equity members or those who have a fellow feeling for their countrymen and neighbors.

BURLEY TOBACCO SOCIETY.

Since it has been established that the burley tobacco branch of the Society of Equity holds the title to all tobacco pooled, it has the right, it is held, to prevent the sale of such tobacco, likewise the right to proceed against the warehouse men if they knowingly violate the restraining order, and the same right to proceed against the grower who has sold his pooled tobacco witnout release from the Society of Equity. Warehouse men, however, contend that if the tobacco is put on their floor under an assumed name, or any name other than mentioned in the restraining order, they commit no violation of the Courts orders. The contention of the Equity Society is that the last of the unpooled tobacco is finding its way to the market right now, and that the American Tobacco Company is boosting the price in order to create dissatisfaction in the breasts of the poorer and weaker men in the pool, and thus put the Equity to as much trouble as possible in the fight to hold the tobacco and the people together.

Prof. J. D. Clark, secretary of the Fayette County Society of Equity, a man thoroughly posted on the situation and in touch with every movement that is being made, in a published statement says:

"Every pound of Society of Equity tobacco of the low grades will be sold within three weeks if the samples we have shipped out in the last few days prove satisfactory." Within the past three days the Society of Equity has sold 100,000 pounds of tobacco, all of which is to be used as samples. All of these samples are to be stripped and weighed. Should the samples turn out as expected, orders will come for the grades represented.

The largest sale was made to a Cincinnati firm, which took 50,000 pounds. The contents of these hogsheads will be stemmed at once and should they turn out good 5,000,000 pounds will be sold to the Cincinnati firm.

State Grader J. D. Walton returned from Cincinnati Saturday. While in that city he delivered from the warehouse here a car load of tobacco that will be used as samples. This deal when consummated will mean the reducing of the Society of Equity's stock by several carloads.

Said Secretary Clark: "The manufacturers now begin to see that they must look to us for supplies. Formerly the trust set the price and all tobacco was sold accordingly. Now we set the price and the market is governed accordingly."—Ex.

The Scott county fair will be held five days this year instead of four as heretofore. It will begin August 4th.

The directors of the Consolidated Telephone Co. met at Walton, last Thursday. The company is considering improvements in its system there that will be appreciated by the subscribers.

The first Equity tobacco was introduced here last week by J. B. Rouse, and the boys are all chewing it now. They say it is about the same quality as Star.

The people of Lawrenceburg and Aurora were greatly relieved, last week, when the river began falling. For a few days another February flood seemed imminent.

Why is it that aged people always have business that requires them to move about on foot considerably when the face of the earth is enveloped in a sheet of ice?

Some Scott county tobacco sold in Lexington on Wednesday of last week at 30 cents a pound. The entire crop of 4,000 pounds brought an average of 19 cents a pound.

Now is a good time to select and test your seed corn. A few barren stalks and an occasional missing hill soon amount to a considerable per cent of the crop. Test the seed and avoid these to a very great extent.

The first installment of Congressional garden seeds was received at this office last Friday. It consists of corn, lettuce, parsley, parsnips, radish and tomatoes. Call in when in town and get a supply. They are sent here for free distribution.

Considerable new stone has been spread on the Burlington and Florence pike in the last few weeks. The excellent condition in which that road is kept is apparent to every person who passes over it, and many strangers compliment it.

Ex-County Judge Clay Conrad, of Williamstown, has landed the master commissioner ship of the Grant county circuit court. Clay is one of the cleverest men in Grant county, and Judge Cammack made a popular appointment. Here's to you, Clay.

Some of the farmers are apprehensive that the ground will be hard to plow this spring because of there having been no protracted heavy freezes this winter. Not many winters ago the same fears were expressed but the land next spring broke nicely and was easily put in first-class condition for planting.

Thurston Rice, son of S. D. Rice, of McVille, made the RECORDER a call last Wednesday. He is fresh from Wyoming, the climate of which he says is delightful. He is looking for a few good horses to take back with him with a view to introducing a breed of good saddlers and drivers in that county, where he says only the heavy draft animal is known.

Put your oat ground in as clean a condition as possible, before you sow. If you drill in your oats among stalks, without first plowing the ground, you should rake up and burn every bit of this trash possible. Many prefer to cut the stalks and then plow the ground. This gets the trash and weed seeds turned under. A thick seeding will keep them in check until harvest at least.

While there has been a great deal of talk about cutting out the 1908 crop of tobacco in this county, very little has been said about increasing the acreage of corn, potatoes or any other crop. The labor heretofore expended in the tobacco fields which are not to be considered this year, ought to be applied to production of some other crops—not permitted to be lost.

Those who have traveled over the road from Limaburg to Hebron, some as long as 50 or 60 years, say they never knew it to be in so bad a condition as it was during the thaw out about the 14th inst. It was dangerous at numerous points while every foot of it was bad. Who knows but what those interested will conclude to have the work of piking extended on to Limaburg? It would be a great help to a good neighborhood.

Neighborhood Favorite.

Mrs. E. D. Charles, of Harbor, Maine, speaking of Electric Bitters, says: "It is a neighborhood favorite here with us." It deserves to be a favorite everywhere. It gives quick relief in dyspepsia, liver complaint, kidney derangement, malnutrition, nervousness, weakness and general debility. Its action on the blood, as a thorough purifier makes it especially useful as a spring medicine. This grand alterative tonic is sold under guarantee at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger. 50c.

On the 14th inst. the water courses were on a rampage, and one of the patrons of rural route No. 1 from Burlington, who has to cross Woolper creek to reach his box, requested one of his neighbors to ask the carrier to deposit his mail in his (the neighbor's) box. This was done, but this box could not be reached without wading a branch in which the water would have come up to the location of a pistol pocket if the gentlemen had one. The raging stream was crossed and the mail box was reached, when, lo, and behold! the only mail it contained was a comic valentine for the gentlemen. What he remarked has not been reported.

The Jumping off Place.

"Consumption had me in its grasp; and I had almost reached the jumping off place when I was advised to try Dr. King's New Discovery and I want to say right now, it saved my life. Improvement began with the first bottle, and after taking one dozen bottles I was a well and happy man again, "says George Moore, of Grimesland, N. C. As a remedy for coughs and colds and healer of weak, sore lungs and for preventing pneumonia New Discovery is supreme. 50c and $1.00 at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger. Trial bottle free.

J. C. Hughes, of Richwood, President of the Boone County Board of Control, made the RECORDER a brief call, last Friday afternoon, as he was returning from Belleview, where he had been to put the Equity Warehousemen to work. Mr. Hughes considers the pool in a position that insures success. He says from his personal observation at Lexington and the information that he has from the breaks at Cincinnati, he is satisfied that no such amounts of tobacco as reported sold and received at these two points have been handled. That he was at the warehouses in Lexington one day recently, when there was nothing doing on the market, but the daily papers of the day following reported that there had been several hundred hogsheads sold the day he was there; that he has been creditably informed that the same hogsheads of tobacco are put thru the breaks day after day at Cincinnati to keep up appearances. He is satisfied that the independent buyers have bought nothing like the quantity reported. He is opposed to the night riders or the advocacy of anything that is anarchal.

A New Spanish Navy.

Monarchs, like other men, combine business with pleasure, and sometimes stop on the way to the doctor's to have something sent home which has appealed to them from the shop window. King Alfonso of Spain was supposed to have had no other object in his recent visit to England than the wish to consult a noted English physician in regard to the condition of his lungs. It has since developed, however, that a representative of a Clyde shipbuilding company was with the king on his shooting excursions, and before he left had succeeded in bagging very considerable game in the shape of a commission to build a new Spanish navy. There has prevailed for some time a feeling that the Spanish navy was not all that it ought to be, or, in fact, all that it used to be. Even the Spaniards themselves have come to see it, and to admit it, and so they have authorized a new navy, at a cost of $80,000,000, to be completed in 1910. Since modern battleships cost from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 each the Spaniards should be able to secure from eight to a dozen vessels. The question naturally arises: How many of them will be turned over to the United States, to replace those which were captured by the American navy, but which sank, or turned turtle, or blew up before they could be got to port, or proved far inferior to the advertisements after getting to port? It may, of course, be necessary for a special grievance committee to present the matter, says the Youth's Companion; but the Spanish people are so courteous and so generous that they will hardly need so pointed a hint. A simple description of such of their former vessels as fell into our hands, with a brief history of them, quietly forwarded, should be sufficient to bring us half the new Spanish navy as a present.

During the recent fire in New York 45 lengths of hose burst, and it was afterward acknowledged by a member of the fire commission of that city that the hose bought under a late contract had not been put to the usual test because it was known not to be up to the standard. Such a condition as this is criminal. With faulty hose even the best water supply is worthless, and consequently not only immense amount of property but human lives may be jeopardized by inefficient means to fight fire. It is to be hoped that the men who are guilty of installing this worthless hose will be severely reprimanded and punished and that there will be no danger of a recurrence of such conditions, remarks the Baltimore American.

Tolstoi's poetic imagination makes him an inspiring prophet even to those who disagree with his opinions. In a recent message to the contentious world, in whose combats he sees no light, he compared the struggling parties to the panic-stricken prisoners in a house from which they are trying to escape. They fight to force the door open, and only seal it more hopelessly, for it opens inward, as the doors of the soul must open to the light.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., says the command to sell what thou hast and give to the poor should not be obeyed literally nowadays, lest it should make the poor improvident. Evidently the great benefits which would come to the rich from acquiring the habit of giving would not compensate for the harm it would do to the poor by making them expect gifts, thus ceasing to rustle for a job cutting ice when they had no overshoes.

A bill has been introduced in the New York legislature to the effect that if an automobilist runs a man down he must stop and give his correct name and address. It is a pity that neither the etiquette of the road or plain humanity has made this little courtesy customary, and that it has been found necessary to invoke the law to consider failure to accord it a misdemeanor.

Secretary Straus of the department of commerce and labor has decided that federal inspectors have no right to consider a man's lame legs as a disability when his efficiency does not depend upon legs, but upon eyesight and mental qualifications. Mr. Straus may get into trouble if he insists on substituting common sense for government red tape in this way.

A colored man who claims to have once held George Washington's horse has applied in New York for a marriage license. It is probably only his native gallantry that keeps him from explaining that the lady whom he is to marry used to do Martha's ironing.

Another indication of the fact that the money stringency has ceased to be serious may be found in the attention the people are again giving to murder mysteries, fashionable weddings and charity balls

DENVER PRIEST IS KILLED IN CHURCH

SHOT IS FIRED BY ANARCHIST IN THE PRESENCE OF A LARGE CONGREGATION.

ASSASSIN FLEES, BUT IS CAUGHT BY WORSHIPPER

Kneels at Altar Rail and Presses Revolver Against Victim's Body—Murderer Was Overpowered After a Desperate Fight.

Denver, Col., Feb. 24.—Father Leo Heinrichs was shot and killed when administering the sacrament at early mass in St. Elizabeth's Catholic church, Eleventh and Curtis streets, this city, at 6 o'clock this morning.

Kneeling at the altar rail, between two women, Guiseppe Guaranaccio pressed the muzzle of a revolver against the body of the priest, after receiving from him the consecrated wafer, and shot the priest through the heart.

Exclaiming, "My God! My God!" Father Leo fell prone in front of the altar and died without uttering another word.

With an inarticulate scream the assassin sprang into the aisle and dashed to the door.

For a moment the hundred or more people in the church were dazed, then became panic-stricken.

Women fainted and many became hysterical. Several men rushed to the aid of the priest and others started in pursuit of the murderer. Among the latter was Patrolman Daniel Cronin, who overtook the fleeing Italian on the the steps. Guaranaccio attempted to shoot the policeman and was foiled and overpowered only after a desperate fight, in which several men had come to the assistance of the officer.

The murderer was hurriedly removed to the city jail, and as threats of summary justice were made by men in the crowd, who quickly gathered in front of the church, Chief of Police Misha Delaney called out the reserve force of policemen.

Deputy Coroner Hayes took charge of the priest's body, which was removed to the city morgue.

A single hole in the white communion robes of the priest showed that the bullet had gone straight to the heart. The bullets remaining in the revolver had sharpened points.

Guaranaccio made the following statement:

"I just went over there because I have a grudge against all priests in general. They are all against the working man. I went to the communion rail because I could get a better shot. I did not give a d— whether he was a German priest of any other kind of a priest. They are all in the same class."

GATES OF APPROACH BROKEN.

Six People Dead as Result of Grade Crossing Accident.

Spring Valley, N. Y., Feb. 24.—A foam-specked pair of horses that tore through the streets, dragging between them a splintered wagon pole, brought to the village the first news of a grade crossing accident in which nine members of its most prominent families were either killed outright or frightfully injured. The runaways came to a stop at the livery stable of George Young, from whom they were hired the night before to take a party of men and girls to a basket ball game at Nyack. Returning in the early hours on Sunday the wagon load of merrymakers was run down at a West Nyack crossing by an Ontario & Western express train. Four of the party were instantly killed, two died while being removed to the hospital and the other three lie in an unconscious condition. The dead: George Reith, aged 38; Nelson May, 19, Bertha Singer, 18; Edith Singer, 20; George Shinn, aged 38; Jeanette Palmer, aged 21. The injured: Warren Palmer, 22; Henry Dietern, 22; Mary Edith Bird, 22.

The responsibility of the accident is in dispute. The survivors can not be questioned yet and the only other witness was the gatekeeper. He claims the team was driven through the gates. The gate on the side of approach was broken down, but the opposite gate was intact and if previously lowered must have been hurdled by the frightened horses after the wagon had been struck and torn from the pole. The animals were uninjured.

Police Chief Murdered By Negro.

Fayetteville, N. C., Feb. 24.—Chief of Police Benton, of this city, was shot dead in front of his home here by a negro, Sam Murchison, crazed with drink. This man also shot two negroes before he shot the chief. Murchison was captured an hour after the shooting and placed in jail.

The Murderer Escaped.

FUMES FROM THE GAS TUBE

ENDED LIFE OF BELMONT'S BEAUTIFUL DAUGHTER.

Much Mystery Thrown About Her Death by the Delay in Notifying the City Officials.

New York, Feb. 22.—Mrs. Natice Rives-Burden, one of the most beautiful women in New York society, was found asphyxiated at 10 o'clock Friday morning in her bed in the home of her mother-in-law, Mrs. James A. Burden, No. 908 Fifth avenue.

Members of her family and the physicians, who were immediately summoned, unite in declaring her death accidental. Coroner Shrady was not notified for several hours, and then in an irregular way. He agrees with the family that the young woman died of gas poisoning, but will hold an inquest after the funeral Monday. The strange behavior of the family and the evasiveness of Dr. Francis P. Kinicutt, P. H. M. Lyle, who were first called threw an air of mystery about the death and aroused a strong suspicion that Mrs. Burden had taken her own life.

Mrs. Burden's sudden death was a great shock to the "four hundred," among whom she was exceedingly popular. Her father is O. H. P. Belmont, and her mother is now the wife of George L. Rives, a former corporation counsel. Less than a year ago she gave up the leadership of the younger Newport set to become the bride of William P. Burden, a wealthy young society man.

The tragedy was discovered by Ella Hofer, Mrs. Burden's French maid, who opened her bedroom door to be met with a rush of gas, which was escaping from a reading lamp by the side of her bed.

The maid called the husband, who was on the floor below. Mr. Burden shut off the gas, threw open the windows and tried to arouse his wife. A little Pomeranian dog Bina crawled feebly over the coverlet and dragged himself into the hall. The fact that the dog was alive increased the hope of the family, and two doctors were summoned. They declared that the woman had been dead for at least two hours.

Although the doctors reached this decision about 10:30 o'clock, it was not until 2 o'clock that any official was notified.

Coroner George F. Shrady, jr., received a private summons by telephone to the Rives home at 2 o'clock. He spent an hour and a half examining the physicians, servants and members of the family. Reaching a conclusion that the death was accidental, he went in person to the East Sixty-seventh Street Police station and gave the police their first notification of the sudden demise.

EMBEZZLEMENT CHARGED

Against Former President of Refrigerating Company.

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 22.—Eleven indictments charging the embezzlement of $76,000 and violations of the warehouse act forbidding the issuing of warehouse receipts on merchandise not in the warehouses when the collateral was issued were returned by the grand jury Friday against J. E. Brady. He was formerly president of the Merchants' Refrigerating Co., which failed last November. Two indictments charge Brady with the embezzlement of $76,000 from the Merchants' Refrigerating Co. and the other nine indictments, each containing two counts, charge violation of the warehouse act.

Violation of the warehouse act is a felony under the law. The nine violations of the act are said to cover transactions in butter and eggs aggregating in value about $49,000. Only a small portion of the holders of these receipts are within the jurisdiction of the Jackson county criminal court.

Brady was arrested Friday night and later released on bond.

Salaries Too High.

Jefferson City, Mo., Feb. 22.—Superintendent Vandiver, of the state insurance department, announced Friday that when the state license of the Metropolitan, Equitable and Prudential Life Insurance Cos. expire on March 1 he will refuse to grant licenses for the next year because of the act passed by the last legislature prohibiting the licensing of any company which pays any of its officers salaries of over $50,000 per annum.

Mass of Ice Struck Cage.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Feb. 22.—While 10 miners were being lowered into the Stanton mine of the Lehigh & Wilkesbarre Coal Co. a large body of ice in the shaft fell, striking the head of the cage and demolishing it. Two of the men were killed outright, one died on the way to a hospital and three others it is believed will die of their injuries. The cage was near the bottom of the shaft, which is 1,000 feet deep, when the ice fell.

More Bodies Found.

Jacobs Creek, Pa., Feb. 22.—Two additional bodies were recovered Friday from the Darr mine by workmen employed in removing the debris of the disastrous explosion last December. They were in a fair state of preservation.

Found in the Ohio.

Pittsburg, Feb. 22.—The body of an unknown woman, about 50 years of age, supposedly a victim of the recent flood, was found in the Ohio river a Neville island. The body was perfectly preserved.

COURT CONDEMNS GEN. STOESSEL

DEATH SENTENCE TEMPERED TO TEN YEARS IN MILITARY PRISON.

DISCREDITED COMMADER HEARS VERDICT CALMLY

Before Sentence Was Read Measures Were Taken to Prevent Demonstration in Favor of Russian General by Number of Younger Officers.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 21.—Lieut. Gen. Stoessel was condemned to death Thursday evening by a military court for the surrender of Port Arthur to the Japanese.

Gen. Fecke, who commanded the Fourth East Siberian division of Port Arthur was ordered reprimanded for a disciplinary offense which was not connected with the surrender, and Gen. Smirnoff, acting commander of the fortress, and Gen. Reiss, chief of staff to Gen. Stoessel, were acquitted of the charges against them for lack of proof.

The court recommended that the death sentence upon Lieut. Stoessel be commuted to ten years' imprisonment in a fortress, and that he be excluded from the service.

By a great effort of self control Gen. Stoessel maintained a rigid, soldier-like impassivity.

Gen. Smirnoff also was seemingly unmoved, but there were tears in the eyes of Gen. Reiss.

The sentence of death was pronounced upon Gen. Stoessel "for surrendering the fortress before all the means of defense had been exhausted, for failing to enforce his authority and for military misdemeanors."

Commutation of the sentence was asked on the ground that "Port Arthur, beset by overwhelming forces, defended itself under Gen. Stoessel's leadership with unexampled stubbornness and filled the world with astonishment at the heroic courage of its garrison; that several assaults had been repulsed with tremendous losses on the part of the enemy; that Gen. Stoessel throughout the siege had maintained the heroic courage of the defenders, and finally, that he had taken an energetic part in three campaigns."

Before the sentence was read measures were taken to prevent a demonstration in favor of Stoessel by a number of the younger officers and witnesses who were present.

CHIEF OFFICER BEHEADED

By Ship's Carpenter, Whom He Had Punished.

San Juan, P. R. I., Feb. 21.—George Dixon, a carpenter on the American collier Abarenda, killed Walter Welchert, chief officer of the collier, Thursday afternoon. The crime was committed on board the vessel. Dixon swung at Welchert with an ax and completely severed his head.

The attack was made just as Welchert was walking away from the carpenter's bench, where he had been talking with Dixon. Welchert recently had Dixon placed in irons on account of disobedience, and this probably was the motive for the crime.

Dixon at once reported the murder and asked the second officer to put him in the ship's brig. A board of inquiry has been appointed to investigate the occurrence.

The Abarenda accompanied the fleet of American battleships to Rio Janeiro and arrived four days ago from that port.

Student Nearly Froze to Death.

Galesburg, Ill., Feb. 21.—As a result of being tied to a tree in Hedding College park, at Abingdon, Tuesday night, during the blizzard, Clarence Robinson, a student, is seriously ill. He was seized by masked youths, who gagged and bound him and carried him to the west campus, where they tied him securely to a tree in a lonely spot. He struggled for several hours before he could free himself. Meanwhile he was nearly frozen to death. Johnson could not identify his assailants, but the student body, which is much wrought up over the affair, say it was a case of spite work.

Druggist Fatally Shot.

Colorado Springs, Colo., Feb. 21.—Otto Fehringer, a druggist and wholesale liquor dealer of this city, was slugged, fatally shot and robbed on a country road by a man who had induced the merchant to accompany him to the place on the pretext that an uncle had some fine wine which he wished to sell. The robber secured a diamond stud and ring valued at $1,000 a roll of bills and checks amounting to $600 and a valuable gold watch with a diamond setting.

JAPS YIELD TO UNITED STATES

ON EMIGRATION ISSUE AND EVERY EVIDENCE

Goes To Show Unsparing Efforts To Prevent Further Complications on the Subject.

Tokyo, Feb. 20.—The memorandum of the Japanese government, in reply to that of the United States on the subject of emigration, was handed to Ambassador O'Brien Wednesday.

It is understood that it agrees in the general terms with a number of suggestions made by the American government and requires a further restriction of emigration by the practical prohibition of laborers.

The Japanese memorandum points out that the restriction already enforced, including the closing of emigration to Canada, Mexico and the Hawaiian islands, will make further complaints from America almost impossible. Every evidence goes to prove that the Japanese government has been unsparing in its efforts to avoid further complications rising from the emigration question, but the government is facing a powerful opposition from the emigration companies who are behind a proposed resolution in the diet to censure the foreign policy of Viscount Hayashi, minister of foreign affairs, toward China, America and Canada.

Should the resolution be introduced in the diet it will probably be defeated by a narrow margin. Its passage would certainly entail the resignation of the cabinet.

Should the cabinet be changed, the best-informed Japanese believe that new administration would closely follow the emigration policy of Hayashi.

Ex-Ambassador Aoki, since his arrival here, has not called on the foreign office, nor has he submitted any report on the situation at Washington, but has assumed an attitude of unfriendliness to Minister Hayashi.

Rumors Unequivocally Denied.

Washington, Feb. 20.—Rumors to the effect that the state department is about to address a protest to Japan against her attitude in Manchuria, and that this was to be done upon the instance of the Chinese government, meet with unequivocal denial at the state department. It is admitted that complaints have been made to the department that American trade is suffering in the Orient, but it is believed that other causes than Japan's attitude are principally responsible.

BLOODY RAZOR

Found By the Murdered Child—Salvation Army Leaders Arrested.

Rock Island, Ill., Feb. 20.—Ensign and Mrs. Robert Booth, in charge of the Salvation Army post here, were held by the coroner, accused of murdering their two weeks' old son, who was found dead in their bedroom. There was a fearful gash in the child's neck. Booth contends that the child was murdered by unknown persons, who left the door open and a bloody razor on the table, while the wife tells of a dream during the night that she was attacked by a snake, which she killed with a knife. The police have a theory that the woman killed the child in a fit of puerperal insanity. The mother is 18 years of age. The couple came here recently from Monmouth, Ill.

Powder Exploded at a Baptism.

New York, Feb. 20.—A cable from Puerto Plato, Santo Domingo, says: A large number of people gathered at the residence of Gen. Guayubin, dictator of the government and governor of Macoris, to celebrate the baptism of a child. While the festivities were in progress a large quantity of gunpowder exploded, destroying Gen. Guayubin's residence. Forty of the guests were injured, but only the child in whose honor they had assembled was killed.

New York, Feb. 20.—Preferring to take the maximum punishment rather than betray his "pals," Peter Rooney, a professional crook, was sentenced to ten years in Sing Sing for a burglary at 241 West 125th street. No amount of persuasion by the police could induce Rooney to tell the names of the three men who aided him in the burglary. Rooney was caught leaving the house, carrying jewelry and a burglar's kit.

Anything else wrong with him?" "Well, er—er—no. Otherwise he was a fine animal." "Good. But next time I'll throw in an extra pair of lungs."—New York Press.

HER CHOICE OF DEMISE.

Pathetic Thought of Little Girl Who Had Lost Playmate.

Mary had for neighbor a small playmate, a much-loved and attractive boy. The little lad rushed across the street one day, throwing back a glance at his mother. At that instant a trolley car swept around the corner and the resulting tragedy threw the town into mourning. Each family wept as though its own son had been lost. Mary was utterly disconsolate and, little as she had previously known of death, realized in a childish way the added horror of this one. In her convulsive grief, and while her father and mother sat with sobs in their throats and tears overflowing, Mary straightened up and sobbed:

"Mother, when I die I hope it will be of a disease and not of a damage!"

BRAIN POWER

Increased by Proper Feeding.

A lady writer who not only has done good literary work, but reared a family, found in Grape-Nuts the ideal food for brain work and to develop healthy children. She writes:—

"I am an enthusiastic proclaimer of Grape-Nuts as a regular diet. I formerly had no appetite in the morning and for 8 years while nursing my four children, had insufficient nourishment for them.

"Unable to eat breakfast I felt faint later, and would go to the pantry and eat cold chops, sausage, cookies, doughnuts or anything I happened to find. Being a writer, at times my head felt heavy and my brain asleep.

"When I read of Grape-Nuts I began eating it every morning, also gave it to the children, including my 10 months old baby, who soon grew as fat as a little pig, good natured and contented.

"Within a week I had plenty of breast milk, and felt stronger within two weeks. I wrote evenings and feeling the need of sustained brain power, began eating a small saucer of Grape-Nuts with milk instead of my usual indigestible hot pudding, pie, or cake for dessert at night.

"Grape-Nuts did wonders for me and I learned to like it. I did not mind my housework or mother's cares, for I felt strong and full of 'go.' I grew plump, nerves strong, and when I wrote my brain was active and clear; indeed, the dull head-pain never returned."

A FALSE FRIEND

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyrighted, by the author, W. A. Elson.)

Scripture Authority—1 Kings; 11:26-40.

SERMONETTE.

"Lifted up his hand against the king."—Jeroboam had gained the favorable regard of King Solomon by his ability, industry and bravery and had been generously rewarded with high position and great authority, being made chief over the most powerful tribe of the nation of Israel. But like many another his great success and the favors shown him only turned him from loyal service to the king to the serving of personal ambition.

Selfish ambition is always ready to offer up the friendships of life upon the altar of personal gain.

Jeroboam was not the first man nor is he the last man to let ambition dull his moral perceptions and blind him to the obligations he has taken upon himself.

Place side by side the pictures of the bright auspicious beginning and the gloomy, dismal ending of Jeroboam's life and we can read the story of cause and effect; the sowing and the reaping. God gave to this promising young man great opportunities and great gifts, he sent his prophet to him to plead that righteousness and truth and devotion to God might control his life, but he turned a deaf ear to God's voice and he prostituted his sacred trusts to the realization of personal gain, and just as he sacrificed the friendship of the king so he forfeited the favor of God. He was afraid to do right, thinking to lose all, and in doing wrong he found ultimately that he had lost all and brought disaster and disgrace upon his household.

Ambition needs the checkrein of devotion to God and loyalty to friends.

Jeroboam owed much, very much, to his friend King Solomon, and then used the place and power thus conferred upon him to the hurting of his friend.

Thus we find Jeroboam repaying Solomon's kindness in the world's coin of ingratitude.

A trust incurred should not become the open door of opportunity for the securing of personal gain.

A false friend! How repulsive the thought! How unworthy any member of the human family. And yet how often are such met with. There is nothing which so wrecks one's faith in human nature as to have those from whom we would naturally expect the most prove false, and not only use the favors which have been shown them for personal gain, but to the positive hurt of the former friend.

"Every man is a friend to him that giveth gifts," says Solomon, but it is not the kind of friendship that sticks, but is of that quality which characterized Jeroboam.

THE STORY.

"THOU art early, but I am always more than glad to see thee!" and as the king entered the room he extended his hand to the stalwart young man bowing before him and warmly clasped him in a momentary embrace. He had taken a wonderful fancy to this energetic official, and welcomed his comings as he did no other prince of the realm. There was a fascination about the strong personality of the young man which held the man of maturer years. It took the king back to the days of full strength of his own young manhood and made him feel again in the push and energy and keen ability of Jeroboam the thrill of the old ambition for the accomplishment of great enterprises.

From the moment that he had first discovered the young man at Zereda he had realized that he had gained a master hand which would make possible the carrying out of some plans he had conceived for the beautifying and strengthening of Jerusalem. And so he had eagerly admitted Jeroboam to his confidences and finally had committed to his hands the work of building the beautiful Millo and repairing the difficult breaches of the royal city.

Thus brought into almost daily contact with the king the acquaintance had grown until a strong intimacy existed between the two. The attendants in the palace soon learned that of all the king's guests Jeroboam was the most welcome and understood that the king was never too busy to receive him. For this reason on this morning on which our story begins they had hastened off to the apartments of the king in response to the request of Jeroboam, who had presented himself at so unusually early an hour and had asked for the king. And in response to the king's warm, cordial greeting, Jeroboam said:

"It is the king's business which brings me thither, else would I not have disturbed thee at so unseemly an hour."

"Well do I know what thy zeal is bringing to pass," exclaimed Solomon approvingly.

"Thy words of praise are refreshing, but we have not time to listen to such fair speech this morning," and the young man immediately plunged into the business which had brought him to the palace. It was his habit to reach an objective point in the quickest and best way possible, and so without waste of words he soon had his case before the king, had received his answer and additional instructions for the carrying out of his work, and was gone.

"A remarkable young man," exclaimed King Solomon, enthusiastically, as the door closed on Jeroboam and the echo of his sturdy footsteps on the marble tiling died away in the distance. "I made no mistake when I lifted him from the obscurity and limitations of the little town of Zereda and placed him where his powers and abilities might have full play. I shall not forget the bitterness and opposition of some of the princes at the young man's advancement, but surely time has vindicated the wisdom of my choice. And where could the king find a more able or loyal servant than is Jeroboam? Surely, though of humble birth, he is a prince among men, and the honors of a prince shall be bestowed upon him. He shall be second only to my son Rehoboam in the kingdom."

This plan, although never as yet broached to a single person, not even the most confidential adviser of his kingdom, was one of the favorite dreams he held for the future. A man of such mighty valor and striking abilities, a commander of men, and coming from the great tribe of Ephraim, the strongest of the nation, he of all others would make a powerful lieutenant and helper for his son when he should come to the throne. And so as this thought had grown upon him he had made more and more of Jeroboam, and no visitor at the palace, as we have said, was more welcome than he.

And Jeroboam, conscious of the esteem in which he was held and realizing his increasing power and influence, made free use of his opportunities. At first there was a sense of appreciation of the favors and advancement which had been bestowed upon him, and loyalty in thought as well as deed marked his services, but as time progressed, and he became firmly established in his place, and he had proved the powers which lay within him and became conscious of them, self-esteem began to displace the sense of loyalty to the king, and self-interests came more and more to dictate and formulate his policies.

So it was that long before there had been any overt act against King Solomon there had been smouldering the slow fire of insurrection in his heart. But not until after that last morning's interview had the thought, clean and distinct, of definite plot against the king come to him. He had taken his place in his chariot and was being rapidly driven along the highway toward Millo, where elaborate plans were being carried out for the fortification of the city, when a company of courtiers on their way to the palace saluted him and cried: "Hail to the mighty Jeroboam." For they knew the great work over which he had charge and the favor in which he was held by the king.

Like a flash came the thought to Jeroboam:

"They bow, not for my sake, but because I am friend of the king. Why not homage for myself alone?"

Once this thought had fixed itself upon his mind and a larger ambition took possession of him. Why the servant of a king when he felt within him the powers of dominion and authority? Completely absorbed by the thought he did not observe that he had reached Millo and the driver had stopped the horses and was standing deferentially awaiting his pleasure. Hastily stepping from the equipage he dismissed the driver and, being in no mood at the present moment to take up the work of the day, he turned and wandered off into the fields.

Suddenly there appeared before him a form wrapped completely from head to foot in a new mantle, and before he could speak the man had stripped himself of the garment and with swift, fierce movement had torn it into 12 pieces, thrusting ten of them into Jeroboam's astonished hand, and exclaiming:

"Take thee ten pieces: For thus saith the Lord the God of Israel: Behold, I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon, and will give ten tribes to thee."

A twelvemonth rolled by and during the time Jereboam had not been idle. From the hour of his interview with the prophet in the field he had not ceased feverish, eager plotting against the king, for said he, "what I am to have, I will secure at once;" while at the same time he sought to maintain a semblance of loyalty to King Solomon. But inkling of the falsity of Jereboam reaching the ears of Solomon, he sought to kill him, and Jereboam fled into Egypt to escape him.

Sailors Outwitted Pirates.

Pierre Loirat, a retired sea captain, has just died near Bordeaux at the age of 103. He was only 11 when he went to sea as a cabin boy, and later, while serving in a French bark, he was taken captive by Spanish pirates. He and his fellow prisoners succeeded in overpowering their captors, taking command of the vessel and bringing it safely into a French port, where the pirates were handed over to the law.

NOT "DOING THINGS"

ONE MORE REPUBLICAN BOAST IS PUNCTURED.

Leaders and Editors Alike at Sea as to Legislation That Will Save Country from Effects of Party's Blunders.

The Republican financial experts being unable to agree on the necessary legislation to ward off panics, it may be well for those who are not financiers and bankers to take interest in a matter that intimately affects their welfare. There are three plans under consideration for the reform of the currency: The Aldrich bill which provides for an issue of emergency currency, with other than United States bonds as security and limited to $250,000,000, which will probably be amended to $500,000,000 as the maximum; the plan for an asset currency proposed by the National Association of Bankers, and the general currency reform measure known as the Fowler bill. There is no probability of the Fowler bill being considered at this session, for it includes a proposition for the government to guarantee all bonds of national banks similar to the plan advocated by Mr. Bryan, which is opposed by the majority of both parties as making the government a partner of the national banks and responsible for all their debts to their depositors.

The Aldrich bill is advanced by the Rockefeller interests and their financial allies. The banks issuing currency under its provisions are to pay at the rate of six per cent. per annum on the amount issued. It is stated by Mr Glover of Washington, who is the head of the Riggs National bank, controlled by the Rockefeller interests, that "it is not expected a dollar of such proposed emergency currency will be called for under the act." The fact that such a law has been enacted would "quiet all uneasiness and cause an immediate relaxation of the money but is even now being hoarded" This opinion was given out on January 22 and was published in the Washington Post of the next day.

But Mr. Glover also makes some extraordinary disclosures in his statement that throw light on the panic and the danger there is of recurrence. He says: "There is now no further relief from the United States treasury to be expected, for its resources have all been exhausted and during the panic the working balance was actually down to $2,000,000, and if the vouchers which lay on the official desk had been opened and presented that balance would have disappeared."

"Unless there is some means of supplying an emergency circulation," further declares Mr. Glover, "we are going to run against the same situation a few months hence, plus the inability of the treasury to help. We will be going through the presidential campaign, which, this time, is going to shake the country from one end to the other. What will the bankers do? If congress should adjourn without providing the means for obtaining this emergency currency, every banker in the country would immediately begin to reach out for all the currency he could get and lock it up. The scare we had last October will be duplicated. The banks will cease to loan. Enterprises will stop, and we will have a presidential year with a panic, the extent of which I will leave to conjecture."

These direful predictions by such a high financial authority may not be verified, and perhaps are only put out to scare congress into action. The national banks held on deposit on January 23, $249,782,014 of the public money, and on the same date there was a deficit of available cash in the treasury to pay running expenses. No doubt many vouchers were being held up because of this lack of cash, which the national banks, where it has been deposited, are unable to repay at this time. On the face of it, the Aldrich bill is not especially dangerous and seems the only immediate way of relief for the mess the Republican financial policies have brought about.

The Republican leaders and organs have boasted that they can "be trusted to do things" and that they "know what they want and do it," but the panic seems to have unsettled the nerves of the Republican politicians and editors alike and they are wallowing around in a sea of uncertainty with a babel of advisers, all of whom declare their plan is the only one that will bring relief.

The fact is, no legislation can relieve the banks from repaying the money deposited with them, short of a deed of gift, and nothing can relieve the United States treasury but receiving back this money, unless congress should reform the tariff and finances and so bring more money into the treasury, or issue some more Panama bonds and keep on issuing bonds.

As a taxpayer and a voter how do you like the prospect, and do you feel that you can indorse the party that has brought it about?

The feast of the tariff robbers has progressed until the nation is weary of its blatant defiance and smug self-sufficiency. The people have written their warning on the wall.—Chicago Journal (Rep.).

The President's Message.

This Roosevelt is intemperate, abusive, hasty. His message is more like a stump speech than a state paper. It is less an argument than a shriek

COMBINES PREVAIL, AS USUAL

Provisions of Pure Food Law Not Enforced by Republicans.

The influence of the whisky trust, the glucose trust, the beef packers' combine, the Patent Medicine association and others whose products are covered by the pure food and drug act has been too much for what virtue the administration possesses. There is no doubt that President Roosevelt favors the law and has intended to have it enforced, but to settle the many vexatious questions that arise he has relied upon so-called experts, including the board of food and drug inspection, and the too many cooks employed seem likely to spoil the broth. The president is more interested in politics—personal politics—and has but little time to give to details of the pure food law. The various combines whose products are affected by the law have nearly all placed obstacles in the way of its enforcement and desire the law modified in their interest.

For instance, the whisky question was first taken up by a select council in the department of agriculture, was then discussed at a cabinet meeting and pondered by the president, was then passed upon by the attorney general, went back to the department of agriculture, and has lately been through the internal revenue bureau and the attorney general's office once more. The benzoate of soda question was prayerfully considered by the board of food and drug inspection and the decision was ratified by the secretary of agriculture and two other cabinet officers. Then it was taken up by the secretary of agriculture again and was by him referred once more to the board. It then passed to the president, who called the board into consultation, and that is its status at present. The corn syrup question is in very much the same position and the sulphur issue, although not quite so far advanced, is not very differently situated. Meanwhile, although many suits for violation of the law have been recommended to the department of justice by the department of agriculture, but few have been brought. The question is therefore being asked how far President Roosevelt intends to have the law enforced. For a good while the president has been regarded as the mainstay of the law and he has at times taken some unquestionably positive steps in support of it. His recent action in appointing still another board of scientists to pass upon some mooted questions will, of course, operate as a postponement and will to some extent weaken the present efficient board of food and drug inspection by showing that the administration has not full faith in its rulings.

It is evident that at least some of the administration and other lesser officials are either not competent or else are trying to favor the interests affected. The delay in enforcing the law against those who disregard it is very unfair to those who are honestly trying to obey the law, for in most cases the pure preparations are not as enticing to look at as those which are adulterated. Meanwhile the health of the people, especially the sickly and the children, is injured by the delay in enforcing the law, while a Republican administration is playing politics for the perpetuation of its power

Protection Does Not Protect.

That the so-called protective tariff is not a producer of prosperity has been forced on the attention of the most ardent standpatters by the present prolonged panic. The several glass industries, especially the window glass trust, are very highly protected by the tariff, yet according to the National Glass Budget, a journal devoted to glass and tariff protection many of those industries are in a bankrupt condition and their workmen in a sad plight. The National Glass company is in the hands of a receiver and several of the nine constituents companies are unable to meet their obligations. "The witch's cauldron in Macbeth" says the Budget, "isn't a patch compared to the window glass hell kettle that has been boiling for the past few months." The same authority says the bottle manufacturers have curtailed production to about one-half the normal capacity of their plants. If from 40 to 108 per cent. of tariff protection does not protect these glass trusts and manufacturers from bankruptcy or depression, is not the evidence overwhelming that protection does not protect either the trusts or the workingmen, and yet a Republican congress persists in refusing to revise the tariff.

President's Message Criticised.

President Roosevelt is fond of preaching; but in this tedious sermon he combines, to his own disadvantage and that of the causes he aims to serve, the lurid style of Jonathan Edwards with the exuberant vituperation of Thomas W. Lawson. . . . Perhaps some of those who have admired him hitherto will now admire him the more. But many who are not included either among his blind and unreasoning supporters or among those who cordially disapprove him will regret that he has seen fit to give to congress and to the country a document like this, that overreaches itself by its diffuseness and deficient self-restraint —Providence Journal.

When the trouble in Washington at both ends of Pennsylvania avenue is Republican irresponsibility the country has its remedy at hand in a return to responsibility and Democracy under the constitution and the laws made in accordance therewith.

Kentucky Gleanings.

Most Important News Gathered From All Parts of the State.

WILL SACRIFICE NOMINATION,

Says Beckham, If It Will Insure Passage of County Unit Bill.

Frankfort, Ky.—Former-Gov. J. C. W. Beckham has announced to the Anti-Saloon League of Kentucky that he is willing to drop out of the race for United States senator if the republicans will agree to pass the county unit bill and submit to a vote of the people next fall a prohibitory constitutional amendment, making the state a unit on prohibition. He asks for no quarter in his fight for temperance. His opponent, former Gov. Bradley, stated to the Anti-Saloon League that he favors the passage of the county unit bill when fairly and squarely presented on its merits.

The statement of the two candidates for United States senator comes through the Anti-Saloon League, which, being convinced of the imminent danger of the defeat of the county unit bill, sent a delegation of its members to this city to find out the position of the two candidates on the question.

It has been charged by the democrats that the republicans are blocking the passage of the county unit bill and the republicans charged that the democrats are blocking its passage.

PERFECTLY COMPOSED

Was Hargis When He Heard the Reading of the Murder Indictment.

Jackson, Ky.—The Breathitt county grand jury returned an indictment in open court against Beech Hargis, charging him with the willful murder of his father, Judge James Hargis. Young Hargis was at once brought into court, and upon agreement of counsel his trial was set for the 13th day of the present term of court. The defendant seemed perfectly composed.

It is said that the night before the time of the tragedy Beech Hargis made an attempt to shoot his cousin, Junelett, a clerk in the Hargis store. He was thwarted by Cal Cooper, a negro.

It was learned that an effort will be made by the citizens who see in Beech Hargis' conviction the dawn of a new era to raise a fund with which to employ additional counsel to be associated with Attorney Kash in the prosecution. Friends and enemies of Beech Hargis are alike open in their condemnation of him.

Lexington, Ky.—Robert Wickliffe Preston, son of the late Gen. William Preston, after a long fight through the courts, comes into possession of an estate of 1,500 acres of valuable land lying between the Richmond and Winchester roads, near this city. The estate was that of Robert Wickliffe, one of the wealthiest and most prominent citizens of Fayette county in the early part of the nineteenth century. When he died he bequeathed it to Gen. Preston in trust for his wife, Margaret Wickliffe Preston, during her natural life. When Margaret Wickliffe Preston died she limited her children to a life interest in the estate and passed it on to her grandchildren.

Robert Wickliffe Preston was not satisfied with the provisions of the will, and the matter went to court, with the result above stated.

LOUISVILLE MAN ELECTED.

Kentucky Farmers Seat Contested Delegations in Their Institute.

Frankfort, Ky.—The State Farmers Institute, in session here, adopted the report of the committee on credentials, seating three delegations from Jefferson county, whose seats were contested after a stormy session.

Former Commissioner of Agriculture Hubert Vreeland made a fight on the floor against seating the three delegations, charging that they were not fairly elected.

As a result of the decision, Caldwell Norton, of Louisville, was elected a member of the state board of agriculture over Mr. Vreeland.

Extra Session For County Unit Bill

Frankfort, Ky.—Unless the regular session of the legislature passes the county unit bill, Gov. Willson will call an extra session for its enactment, is the statement made here upon apparently reliable authority. The governor is said to have assured the advocates of the measure that he regards himself committed to its passage both by party platform and campaign promises.

Grand Jury May Probe.

Lexington, Ky.—Dispatches from Jackson say it is probable that the grand jury will investigate the county's feud extending over the last quarter of a century. If this is done nearly every prominent family in Eastern Kentucky will be affected.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS.

J. L. Clore, of Covington, is here.

No clean score made at last Saturday's shoot.

After this week the Walton department will be in good running order.

For Sale—Good male hog. Apply to Harriet Rouse, near Gunpowder.

Claud Carroll, aged 17, died last Saturday of pneumonia, at his home at Big Bone.

The Recorder force set 12 columns of matter for this issue commencing at 1 p. m. Monday.

Very little, if any, of the pooled tobacco will be sold to independent buyers in this county.

Last Saturday being Washington's birthday the rural mail carriers did not go over their routes.

For Sale—16 100 pound hogs, and 1 Chesterwhite male hog. Apply to Leslie Goodgride, Burlington.

Sammie Adams has so far recovered from his injury some time since as to be able to get about with the assistance of a cane only.

Circuit Clerk Duncan reports business very dull about his official sanctum, only two suits having been filed since the last term of court.

Quite a number have responded to the statements the Recorder sent out a few weeks ago, all of whom are hereby thanked for their remittances. The time is growing short in which the remainder have to attend to the matter before Uncle Sam will require their names stricken from the subscription list.

Dr. R. L. Grant, of Texarkana, Ark., is another Boone county boy who is prospering in a distant land, and keeps tab on the doings of the people at his old home by means of the Recorder. His recent remittance to this office came duly to hand. Hope the doctor is owner of a portion of the Arkansas diamond fields.

Keeping Open House.

Everybody is welcome when we feel good; and we feel that way only when our digestive organs are working properly. Dr. King's New Life Pills regulate the action of stomach, liver and bowels so perfectly one can't feel good when he uses these pills. 25c at Bentler's Drug Store, Erlanger, Ky.

Hon. Clifford E. Nadaud, candidate for Congress, will begin his speaking tour of this county in March, and following are his dates for that month: Verona, March 11th at 7:30 p. m. Richwood, March 12th at 8 a. m.; Union, 9:30 a. m.; Beaver, 11 a. m.; Hume, 1:30 p m.; Berkshire 2:30 p. m.; Big Bone, 8:30 p. m.; Normansville, 5 p. m.; Hamilton, 7:30 p. m.; Walton, 7:30 p. m. on the 16th. His April dates will be published later.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

I see it stated in your local items column, that petitions are being circulated in several precincts of the county, asking the County Judge to order an election to be held on the County Unit Local Option Law. This, I think, is a move in the right direction, but I think a little premature without a county organization. The friends of the measure must organize. In every precinct of the county there should be a committee of two or three men who will push the matter, secure names and funds, and thoroughly arouse their friends to the importance of this grand movement to save their boys from becoming drunkards and their girls from marrying drunkards. Of course the liquorites will fight to a finish, and will let nothing go undone to insure success. From what I know of the sentiment of our people in the Union precinct the odds will be overwhelmingly against whisky. I should like some correspondence on the subject, especially from the north end of the county. With united effort the stains that blot the fair name of old Boone will be wiped out forever.

M. C. Norman.

Union, Ky., Feb. 20, 1908.

What Say You All ?

Mr. Editor:—During some recent meditations it occurred to me that it would be a nice thing for our dear old teacher, D. C. Gaines, and his pupils of the Ashby Fork and Woolper schools that remain, with their children and grandchildren, and friends to hold a reunion or a home-coming, if you please, at or near the site of the old school house, some time the coming spring or summer. There is nothing that would give me greater pleasure than to meet the old schoolmates and the teacher of teachers on the grounds which if they could speak could tell many a side-splitting incident. If this suggestion should meet with general approval, it would be well to have a committee to prepare a programme for the occasion; and to meet either at Petersburg or Burlington at an early date as possible. How would D. M. Snyder, W. A. Gaines and W. T. Stott do for the committee? And then there might be need of another committee or two which committee No. 1 might appoint. Such a meeting would almost be a semicentennial, and if conducted on the plan of a barbecue or basket meeting, would surely bring together a large crowd. No doubt the friends in that community would take great pleasure in making the necessary preparations. What a grand thing it would be for the old teacher to prepare a list of practical questions, and gather all the pupils present, into a class, and, with old time energy, repeat the scenes of days long past. Much more might be said, but, no doubt, if these few lines should find a place in your paper, there will be expressions from others on the same subject.

A PUPIL.

WALTON DEPARTMENT.

James Rogers, John Sleet and M. J. Hudson, of Crittenden, spent Friday here.

W. Berry Johnson, of Glencoe, spent Wednesday here with relatives and friends.

Born on the 19th inst. to Arthur Smith and wife, a fine son, Dr. B. K. Menefee attending physician.

R. C. Green, cashier of Walton Deposit Bank and Trust Co., attended court at Williamstown, Monday.

A. W. Smith, our popular "med icine man," spent part of last week in Cincinnati, buying supplies for his drug store.

Charles L. Griffith, the popular president of the Equitable Bank and Trust Company, spent part of the past week in Georgetown and Lexington on business.

Dr. A. N. Jones, one of our highly esteemed physicians, who has been ill for some time, we are glad to say, is much improved and will soon be able to be about.

Hon. J. G. Tomlin spent Friday at Williamstown on business pertaining to some of the cases he will have ready for trial in the Grant circuit court at this term.

W. M. Hudson and Claude Gardner, of Crittenden, were here on business, last week. Mr. Gardner sold his tobacco crop to Covington buyers, where he delivered.

Dr. J. G Slater, one of our clever citizens, spent part of the past week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Slater, at Big Bone, where he made some professional calls.

Rev. Edgar Riley, of Bullitsville, who recently accepted the pastorate of the Walton Christian church, held his regular services here, Sunday. Rev. Riley is also pastor of the church at Beaver Lick.

Harry and Ed Stamler, of Paris, this State; Mrs. Melvin Percivall and daughter, Miss Dora, of Bank Lick, and Mrs. Anna Percivall, of Covington, attended the funeral of Mr. John Booth here, last Thursday.

Robert C. Green, as administrator of the estate of the Rev. Lafe Johnson, deceased, will have a sale of the personal property at Rev. Johnson's late home, 2 miles south of Walton, Tuesday, March 3rd at 10 o'clock a. m.

Washington's birthday was observed by the banks, and all were closed out of respect to the memory of the "Father of Our Country," though it has been a long, long time since George added the little hatchet story to the history of the country.

J. G. Tomlin and J. L. Vest spent part of the past week at Independence, attending the Kenton circuit court. They were attorneys for Miss Hattie Walden, who sued the L. & N. Railroad Company for damages for carrying her by the station for which she bought a ticket. They secured a verdict for $25.

S. L. Hinbold, the mechanical engineer of the Anderson Foundry and Machine Works, at Anderson, Indiana, was here, last Thursday, closing up a contract with the Walton Brick Works for the installation of the machinery for the making of a dry pressed brick. It is expected that the plant will be in operation by the latter part of April. Already application has been made for estimates on over 1,000,000 of the brick, the sample brick made from the clay being very fine in quality and appearance.

The Consolidated Telephone Co. held a meeting here, Thursday, relative to installing a local exchange, the rapidly increasing business demanding it. It was attended by N. E. Riddell, of Burlington, presiden; Robert Rouse, of Hebron; Elbert Clacken, of Richwood; R. P. Rice, of Florence; C. C. Sleet, of Beaver Lick; Richard A. McWethy, of Petersburg, and J. W. Conner, of Walton, directors, and W. T. Black, of Walton, superintendent. It was decided to install the exchange, and to overhaul and improve the exchange at Beaver Lick. The company is in fine working condition and in prosperous shape.

The funeral of Mr. John Booth took place on the 20th inst. from the Baptist church, and was largely attended. Mr. Booth was 50 years of age. For about a year he had been afflicted with a nervous prostration and spinal trouble that gave him great pain, and death was a relief to his acute suffering. He leaves a widow who was formerly Mrs. Alice Coffman. Mr. Booth was highly esteemed by a large circle of friends as was evidenced by the number at the funeral, the large auditorium being filled to its utmost capacity. He was a member of the order of Odd-Fellows and a Knight of Pythias, and there was a very large number of brothers of both orders in the procession that went to the home and escorted the remains to the church, where the rituralistic burial service of the orders was conducted in part, being finally completed at the grave. Bro. Booth was a member of the Christian church for many years. The services were very impressive. Rev. John B. Harris, of the M. E. church, read the scripture lesson; Rev. S. M. Adams, of the Baptist church, made a very impressive and feeling prayer, and Rev. D. T. Buck, of the Christian church, delivered one of the finest funeral discourses that has been heard here for a long time.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Hypocrisy is the predominant trait in the life of Mr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde, who pretends to be one thing to one class of people and the opposite thing to another class of people, living a dual life in all things and deceiving alike both friend and foe, and bringing in due time disgrace and destruction upon themselves and injury and mortification to all with whom they are connected. The hypocrite is always selfish and piquant, believing that all things ought to work for his special benefit, but he is always doubtful even when a special providence has arranged for his personal benefit, fearing it will fail or inure to the benefit of others before he can take advantage of it. He always encourages you to keep on doing that which will benefit him, but never assists in doing anything himself, except to receive the benefits derived through the efforts of others, and turn his best side to the company he is in, and conduct and discredit all things distasteful and objectionable to present company, and keeping the sails of his infinite wisdom trimmed so as to be able to take advantage of any favorable wind, to sail into any port that popularity and self interest may dictate. Now, the hypocrite always believes he is popular for he is so easily known that he never particularly opposed in argument, because he aims to know the sympathies of the individuals he talks to, and discusses matters accordingly, and points out the weak spots in affairs generally, and suggest wise improvements and furnishes volumes of valuable advice, absolutely free, as only ignorance and insincerity guided by hypocritial generosity can do. His egotism makes him believe that he is splendid and interesting on all occasions when he only deserves the silent contempt of all sincere persons. The hypocrite is an intrusive devil, but never violent. Like the eel, he insinuates himself into all societies, religious and fraternal, also in business and social clubs, colleges and universities and state and national legislatures, delaying, if not rendering futile, the heroic efforts of those who are making personal sacrifice to better the condition of all. Realizing that no great reform is ever accomplished except through the personal efforts and personal sacrifice of the few, yet it is encouraging to know from past experiences that there is always enough who are interested in the betterment of condition and the elevation of mankind to carry out any beneficial reforms in business, society or morals, that the times demand. This spirit of hypocrisy is evidenced in our schools, colleges and universities by the change of principles and policies upon which they were founded at first, in order to get a part of the unearned millions of a Carnegie or Rockefeller.

Again it is evidenced in a subsidized press, when it becomes spokesman for trusts and monopolies, and exagerates and misrepresents at their behest, principles and conditions that do not exist, and if charged with belief in these same utterances would repudiate and deny them; and, again, when the New York papers are giving advice so freely for the suppression of Night Riders and lawlessness in Kentucky, they forget or ignore the Black Hand Society of their own State, blackmailing and assassinating her citizens, and fails entirely to suppress it or to think seriously about it. So I am inclined to believe they are not sincere in dealing with the Night Riders in Kentucky, but this same press presumes that the people will believe whatever is persistently put before them, whether it is true or untrue, and, from information I have received, there is to be a well directed and continued attack by this same press on the growers of tobacco in Kentucky from now until April, from all along the line. Every feature of the business is to be minimized or magnified in the interest of the trust, and more especially as to the preparation and planting of the 1908 crop. So, growers, beware of newspaper reports, believe none of them until you have verified them. You have so far borne the unjust criticisms of the press, and the unwarranted denunciation of a Governor, possibly and delay in selling your tobacco caused by the selfish dumper and buyer of dumped tobacco, who are your true and interested friends to your face and direst enemies to your back, and I believe you will remain true to the end as good sales are being made by Equity. Again, hypocrisy or something worse is evidenced in the working of our legislature. A very large majority of all members about equally divided between two candidates, voting the same vote day after day, both sides knowing that it is impossible to elect either man, obstructing, preventing and neglecting much needed legislation, when they could drop both candidates and select one out of a dozen better men and elect him and let legislation proceed. But, when we consider the National Legislature and the action of the Supreme Court the limit is about reached. The N. L. with business blocked by a stand pat speaker, doing nothing except turning over the regulation of the currency to the national banks, raising its salary, distributing garden seeds, and speeches that were never delivered. The Supreme Court nullifying all labor laws reminds me of Jefferson when he said "The Federal Courts were mines and sappers of the constitution." It seems that the functions of the different departments of government have been changed or have been rotated so that we do not know just where we are at, but we have been for so long dictated to by the safe and sane and have been given such a square deal with a big stick, we have lost track of who is who and what is what, and cannot judge of what the future has in store by past precedents.

An Observer.

To the Tobacco Growers.

To the Growers of Tobacco in Berry County: I beg that you will not suffer yourselves to be misled by Judge Hill's call, published in the Courier-Journal Feb. 13. To cut out the 1908 crop is the only way ever again for tobacco growers to become their own masters. The trust will hold a "surplus" over our heads until the crack of doom if this crop is not cut out so that the surplus can be consumed. Judge Hill knows, or else he talks without knowing what he is talking about, that the members of the Society of Equity are on the same financial level as the men out of the society. There are as many—I believe more—poor men in the Society of Equity as out of it. In my part of the State it is not poor men who insist up on raising tobacco this year, but rich men, who do not work in the crop themselves and who have enough capital invested to live on a small per cent. of profit. To the large landholders tobacco is, after all, a side crop; it is the small farmer and the tenant who depend upon it almost entirely, and to them a just price is absolutely necessary if they are to live above the rank of slaves.

The Equity tenants are in far more direful straits than the nonequity tenants. They have lived for two years without one dollar for tobacco, and they now ask the non equity tenant, after he has made as much in two years as he would have made in three years without the Equity Society, to cut out his 1908 crop and give them a chance to sell their 1906 and 1907 crops.

Have they not a right to believe that he will do it? What does Judge Hill mean by "unlawful," "immoral," "inhuman?" What is there unlawful about not raising tobacco this year, when there is already a surplus? What is there immoral about asking your neighbor to co-operate with you for the common good? What is there in human about sharing with your fellows a common burden? The immoral and the inhuman course would be to hide behind the law and fail to share the burden.

If a crop is planted in 1908 the nonequity poor must suffer a third year. Do not give the world another example of man's inhumanity to man. Let it not be said that the non equity tobacco grower is more heartless towards his fellow growers than the trust has ever been. Make the sacrifice of a crop this year and make it cheerfully. When it is all over you will be proud of your own courage and proud to tell your children that you were afraid to endure hardship for the right. You can but be ashamed in the years to come if you fail to be one of the heroes in this fight. The best you could then say would be: "I took care of myself, and let what would come to my neighbor who had helped me."

If you are a landowner, raise some other crop. You can at least raise a living. If you are a tenant, your landlord will do as landlords are doing in this section: Furnish you a house, a garden spot, pasture for a cow, work in other crops, and with pigs and chickens you can live. It is not a matter of life and death, as Judge Hill said. In my part of the State we do not intend to let any man suffer because he does not raise tobacco. Neither will Henry county; but if Henry county does not see that you are not allowed to come to such extremes as Judge Hill predicts, let us know, and we will send you relief—not as charity, but as pay for services rendered, as we pay our soldiers on the firing line.

A crop planted in 1908 will bring aid to no one before December, 1908, or later; but if the crop be cut out, the equity tenant and landowner will certainly sell at scale prices a large part, if not all, their tobacco before that time. There will no doubt be privations to be endured either way, but if the crop is cut out then no one will have suffered in vain. The 1909 crop will bring twice as much as the 1908 crop would bring. The end will pay for what all have endured. But if you plant this year, then all the three years of struggle of the equity poor will go for nothing. If you raise then why not everybody raise? Then away goes all that has been done, wasted for lack of co-operation and persistence to the end. Have the courage. Make the fight! Help your neighbor now as he has helped you in the past, and your present sacrifice will bring permanent good to both. We must not expect to "be carried to the clouds on flowery beds of ease, while others fight to win the prize and sail through bloody seas."

"No wrong was ever made right without pain." Have the courage to endure the pain for the sake of the right. "There is no such thing as a comfortable reform." We do not want strife and hard feelings. Let us stand together and share what we have with each other until the fight is won. If you go to New Castle Saturday, put up the "non crop" pledges and sign them, and then ask every farmer you meet to do the same. Judge Hill does wrong to stir up and to prolong strife. He does wrong to defeat the only move that will enable the farmer to meet with adequate resistance the power of the trust.

Beseeching you to acquit yourselves like men, believe me, faithfully yours.

He was just blooming into young manhood at the age of 18, when most of humanity look so brightly into the future; but, alas! it was not for Claud, but he faced death without a murmer, being calm and resigned. When his uncle, Dr. Smith, spoke to him of his weakened condition and that there were so many chances against him, he assured the doctor that his faith would lead him all the way. He was the son of the late Meredith and Katie Carroll, and leaves a step-mother, two brothers and a sister, besides a number of aunts, uncles and friends to mourn his death. His funeral was preached at Big Bone M. E. Church by Bro. Bly. The remains were laid to rest by the side of his mother and father in Hughes' Chapel cemetery. "Yep, we planted yaller corn," said the boy. "It don't look like you would have more than half a crop." said Mr. Jones. "Nope, we don't expect to, the landlord gets the other half." Mr. Jones hesitated a moment and said, "there is not much difference between a boy and a fool." "Nope, only the fool axes questions and the boy answers 'em," said the boy. In the early history of his business career he had the misfortune to lose nearly everything by fire, but he was too courageous to let that embarrass him. He rebuilt and launched out again with the result of perfect success. The funeral services were conducted at Hopeful last Sunday by Revs. S. H. Walterick and T. L. Utz, after which the remains were interred in the cemetery in the presence of a large concourse of relatives and friends. Mrs. Hattie Dinn, wife of Harry Dinn, and only child of Mr. and Mrs. Elza Harper, died of pneumonia at her father's residence on the 26th ult. The funeral services were held at Hebron church, of which she was a member, on the 28th, Rev. Walterick officiating. Her remains were buried on the family lot in the Hebron cemetery.

We noticed in last week's Recorder a very unjust criticism made on our new turnpike between here and Limaburg. The writer says there is not one foot of it passable. Now, we had occasion to pass over it about the time he did, and we found as much as 12 feet in three miles as good as any body's road, don't care what others say about it.

The creamery at this place is doing a much better business than it was expected it could do when operation was begun in December. The time of the year, the scarcity of cows and the high price of feed stuff was a combination against its success. Nevertheless, under the careful management of our efficient butter maker, Mr Noppenberg, it has been operated on a paying basis. During the month of February 32,426 pounds of milk were received, the average per cent of butter fat was 5, making 1,621 of butter fat. To this was added the over-run—salt and moisture—to the amount of a possible 15 per cent on the 100. The butter was sold at an average of 34½ cents a pound. It is a plain proposition that creameries are a paying investment, and much more can be realized from cows by patronizing a creamery than by the old dairy process.

Good for Everybody.

Mr. Norman R. Coulter, a prominent architect, in the Delbert Building, San Francisco, says: "I fully endorse all that has been said of Electric Bitters as a tonic medicine. It is for everybody. It corrects stomach, liver and kidney disorders in a prompt and efficient manner and builds up the system." Electric Bitters is the best spring medicine ever sold over a druggist's counter; as a blood purifier it is unequaled. 50c at Bentler's Drug Store, Erlanger.

Man's Contest with Nature.

The greatest of inventions is measured not by their ingenuity, nor by the fortunes they make for their originators, or others, for that is a small matter, but by the service which they render the public and by their influence on civilization. If inventions are to be measured by their effects by far the greatest in the history of the world was the invention of the steam engine. In 1769, the same year in which the duke of Wellington and Napoleon Bonaparte were born, James Watt produced his steam engine, which was destined to exert more influence in shaping the world's future than both of these great captains put together. From the beginning man has had to struggle with nature for his life, says the New York Weekly. She scorched him; she froze him; she starved him; she smote him with disease; she overawed and terrorized him; her winds buffeted him; her waters drowned him. Against the measureless forces of Nature he could oppose only his puny arm. On that arm he must rely to wrest from her food, fuel, raiment and shelter. Such was the unequal contest for thousands of years. But today Nature is man's servant; her mighty forces do his bidding and run his errands.

Ten Thousand Dollar Men Wanted.

Mr. Edison takes a deep interest in young men and offers them much encouragement, says Success Magazine. "To-day is youth's zenith in this great country," is the way he cheers them on. "The United States is starving for ten-thousand-dollar men. Corporations are actually clamoring for them; and the younger the better. But the man to-day must be technically educated. Modern industrial, financial and commercial conditions are more complicated than ever before and it takes a trained mind and a-level head to get to the front. The demand for educated men, chaps that have brains, exceeds anything that I have ever known. They are doing the work, too; that's why more are wanted. So now is the time for the man who is going to make something of himself to get busy. If he is any good he won't be out of a job long; not much. There is entirely too much work and too few of the right kind of persons to do it. If you don't believe it, take a peep into the gigantic plant of a concern like the Bethlehem Steel company. Yes, sir, we are starving for brains—for ten-thousand-dollar men, if that way of putting it appeals more strongly to the young American instinct."

Here is a new "science." Its exploiter is a lady of brilliant gifts who calls it mental therapeutics, and who teaches that by following her theory men and women can make their dispositions and characters what they please—in fact, compound them, just as a skilled operator in that line compounds chemicals. And they can do more than that. Says the lady: "There is no question but that if we concentrate our minds we can spin through space at any distance. We can travel to China, or to the Himalayas." And if the theory can be carried out in practice it will surely put the airships out of business, for everyone can be his own flying machine. It is enough to make one light-headed.

The shine-your-boots industry appears to be flourishing famously. Substantial evidence of this is furnished by the fact that small spaces in the terminal buildings of the New York tunnels have been leased to a hoot-blacking corporation for a long term of years at an aggregate rental of $124,000. The notion entertained in some conservative quarters that the boot-black business has been ruined or seriously injured by the growing popularity of patent leathers and tans is evidently a pipe dream. It is flourishing more extensively than ever. Shine 'em up!

Christmas has a dual significance in Spain; it is a season of rejoicing in more senses than one, for the drawing of the great state organized Christmas lottery takes place in Madrid during the holidays. It is an event to which Spaniards of all classes look forward with the brightest hopes. This Christmas Barcelona had phenomenal luck, for the inhabitants of that city secured no fewer than 123 prizes, including "el gordo," or the chief prize, the third prize and 121 minor ones, totaling nearly $2,000,000. The money was spread over some 400 families.

An Ohio woman, after finding matrimony a failure and getting a divorce from her husband, has decided to try for the position of mayor of her town. Evidently, failing to rule the individual masculine, she hopes for better luck with the sex en masse.

Those Pennsylvania students who put a cow into the girls' dormitory were 'way behind the times. Girls do not act as milkmaids any longer. The patient and uncomplaining milking machine attends to that romantic job.

ENTIRE SECTION OF TAMPA WIPED OUT

THIRTY-FIVE BUILDINGS COVERING FIFTY-FIVE ACRES ARE CONSUMED BY FLAMES.

NORTHERN PORTION OF THE CITY IS GONE

Tampa, Fla., March 2.—The entire extreme northern section of this city was destroyed by fire which broke out in a building early Sunday and raged uninterruptedly for four hours.

The area burned covered fifty-five acres, or eighteen and one-half city blocks.

Thirty-eight buildings were destroyed, with a total loss estimated at $600,000, and one woman is dead from excitement.

The burned section includes four large and one smaller cigar factory and numerous restaurants, saloons, boarding houses and over 200 dwellings occupied by cigar makers.

The factories burned were M. Stachelberg & Co., loss $100,000; M. Perez & Co., loss $50,000; Gonzales, Fisher & Co., loss, $40,000; Esberg, Gunst & Co., branch of Stachelberg, loss $10,000; Fernandez & Bro., loss $20,000.

All factories carried large stocks of tobacco and cigars. The area swept by fire embraces all that portion of the city between Twelfth and Michigan avenues and Sixteenth and Twentieth streets.

It originated in the boarding house of Antonio Diaz, 1714 Twelfth avenue, and fanned by a strong wind, spread fan-shaped defying the efforts of the fire department, which was crippled by very weak water pressure to check it.

A Cuban woman dropped dead from the shock, her body being rescued from the burning house with difficulty.

Fire Chief Savage was overcome by heat and smoke early in the fire, but recovered later. Citizens volunteered assistance to the hard-working firemen, but the spread of the flames was so rapid that little effectual work could be done.

Among buildings other than factories destroyed were the hotels and cafes of Perez and Castro and Maximo Caras, six saloons, 12 restaurants and ten boarding houses.

The car barn of the Tampa Electric Co., containing 20 cars, was endangered, and owing to the destruction of trolley wires cars could not be moved.

The fire finally burned itself out at the extreme northeastern section of the city. Fully half the people rendered homeless were out of work, and their shelter became an immediate problem.

St. Joseph's convent was opened to them by order of the Jesuit fathers and many found lodging there, while others were accommodated in homes throughout he city.

Besides these thousands of men will be out of employment on account of the burning of the factories. The insurance is estimated at not more than half of the loss.

The state militia was placed on guard Sunday night in the burned district to prevent depredations.

NINE SHOT BY NEGRO BURGLAR.

Two Victims Were Women, One of Whom Will Die.

Richmond, Va., March 2.—Nine persons, eight whites and one negro, were shot down in the streets by Robert Faulkner, a negro burglar, who had stolen a double-barreled shotgun and ammunition from a nearby gunshop. W. F. Caudry, night watchman, was mortally wounded, and Miss Mamie Siegle, who was shot while on her way to church with an escort, will probably die. Others less seriously injured are E. C. Chancellor, Harris Popins, Ben Jollison, J. Gorathe and Miss Ada Straus.

Faulkner fired promiscuously and was not taken until six policemen surrounded him and broke his leg with a pistol bullet. A mob of 1,000 persons gathered and demanded the negro at the station house. The negro, if he had not already been taken to the city hospital, would certainly have been lynched. He was taken late Sunday night to the city jail for safekeeping.

TWO THOMASES INDICTED

GOTHAM FINANCIERS ACCUSED OF LAW VIOLATIONS.

Special Grand Jury Returns True Bills Against Them—Plead "Not Guilty."

New York.—Edward R. Thomas and Orlando F. Thomas, who are financiers of extensive interests, were indicted Thursday on charges growing out of their management of the funds of the Provident Savings Life Assurance society, which they controlled. The indictments, which were returned by the special grand jury for New York county, that has been investigating the Provident Life and other financial institutions, are three in number, two being against Edward R. and one against Orland F. The offenses charged are violations of the state insurance laws and constitute a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of $500 or a year's imprisonment, or both, on each count. Late Thursday afternoon the Thomases were arraigned, pleaded not guilty, and were given two weeks in which to change the pleas or demur, meantime being admitted to bail. Justice Dowling fixed bail at $5,000 on each indictment. In the first indictment against E. R. Thomas he is accused of "unlawfully being pecuniarily interested as a beneficiary in a loan from an insurance company doing business in this state of which corporation he was then and there a director." This indictment deals with a loan made by Thomas from the firm of Thomas, Maclay & Co., stock brokers. On April 2, 1907, Thomas was a customer of the firm, and indebted to them on demand loans in large sums. At the same time, the indictment alleges, Thomas, Maclay & Co. were indebted to other financial institutions, the loans being secured with stock and other securities of Thomas, Maclay & Co., and of their customers.

OUR WARSHIPS GOOD AS ANY

REAR ADMIRAL CAPPS REPLIES TO MAGAZINE ARTICLE.

Chief Constructor of Navy Answers Criticisms Before Senate Naval Committee.

Washington.—Rear Admiral Washington Lee Capps, chief constructor of the navy, Wednesday before the senate committee on naval affairs replied to the magazine article written by Henry Reuterdahl in criticism of the construction of American battleships. The admiral asserted that the American ships are the equal of ships of any navy of the world. The most serious charges made, he said, were of insufficient free board, meaning height from water line to deck; insufficient gun height, and improper location of main line armor belts, and all these he explained have been the subject of the closest study and experiment for many years by naval designers of every country. Admiral Capps characterized as "exploded" the theory that if a shell penetrated the armor plate at a slight incline it would be deflected upward by the armor of the protected deck. "All efforts," he added, "should be directed toward keeping the shell out; all the armor should be put on the ship in vertical form."

"Put it all on the outside?" remarked Senator Tillman.

"Exactly, for if a shell goes through 11 inches of armor it will explode any way. The protected deck would not be a protection at all."

The admiral said the fact that in the Dreadnaught class in Great Britain, and the Delaware class in the United States, the forward free board has been made one deck higher than the previous class does not indicate that the latter was too low.

"They are just right for their type," he said. "The Delaware is made high forward because she is designed on finer lines, much longer, and for greater speed, which, of course, casts the spray higher. No increase has been made in the free board except at the bow."

He stated that during the five hours firing in the fight of the sea of Japan, the rapidity of firing from big guns of Japanese vessels was only one-fourth of that maintained by the American navy during recent target practice.

HER GOOD FORTUNE.

After Years Spent In Vain Effort

Mrs. Mary E. H. Rouse, of Cambridge, N. Y., says: "Five years ago I had a bad fall and it affected my kidneys. Severe pains in my back and hips became constant, and sharp twinges followed any exertion. The kidney secretions were badly discolored. I lost flesh and grew too weak to work. Though constantly using medicine I despaired of being cured until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. Then relief came quickly, and in a short time I was completely cured. I am now in excellent health."

With an Eye to the Future.

Queen Alexandra attended last spring's annual Mansion House fete in London, and because of that auspicious fact there is a tale to tell—and worth the while. One of the diminutive flower-maidens was both pretty and plump, and when her majesty stopped for an instant to smile down upon her, what did she do but put up her wee (and tempting) mouth for a kiss, which she received.

"Molly!" gasped her astounded mother, and after the distinguished visitor had passed on, "how could you!"

And Molly gave a good reason. "I fought," said she. "It 'uld be interestin' to tell my grandchildren."—Harper's Weekly.

CURED HER CHILDREN.

Girls Suffered with Itching Eczema—Baby Had a Tender Skin, Too—Relied on Cuticura Remedies.

"Some years ago my three little girls had a very bad form of eczema. Itching eruptions formed on the backs of their heads which were simply covered. I tried almost everything, but failed. Then my mother recommended the Cuticura Remedies. I washed my children's heads with Cuticura Soap and then applied the wonderful ointment, Cuticura. I did this four or five times and I can say that they have been entirely cured. I have another baby who is so plump that the folds of skin on his neck were broken and even bled. I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and the next morning the trouble had disappeared. Mme. Napoleon Duceppe, 41 Duluth St., Montreal, Que., May 21, 1907."

In Demand.

"I hear you have a new automobile, old man," said the motor-car fiend. "What does it look like?"

"Well, to tell you the truth," replied the amateur motorist, "it is as ugly as a steam roller, makes as much noise as a traction engine, knocks over as many people as a freight engine and raises as much dust as a street sweeping machine.

The motor-car fiend was wild with enthusiasm.

"You don't say!" he blurted eagerly. "Tell me where I can buy the same make and I'll give you my old machine as a present."

Cause for Alarm.

A young man had been courting a girl for nine years. "Jennie," he said, one evening, "I read the other day that in 50,000 years Niagara falls would dry up."

Jennie clutched his arm excitedly. "Why, what's the matter?" he asked.

"Why, you promised to take me there on our bridal trip. Don't you think you had better be a little careful that it does not dry up before we get there?"

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Round About the State

What Is Going On in Different Sections of Kentucky.

BECKHAM MAY SEEK

The Democratic Nomination For Governor Three Years Hence.

Louisville, Ky.—William O. Bradley's election to the United States senate caused as much excitement in Louisville as followed the report of the assassination of William Goebel in Frankfort in 1900. For weeks this contest has been the center of interest. Ever since the result of the joint ballot became known in Louisville, little else has been discussed.

It has been over a quarter of a century since a citizen of the Fifth Congressional district was sent to the United States senate. When the new senator returns from Frankfort he will be accorded a monster demonstration here and will receive the congratulations of men of all parties. A report is already current in Louisville that Beckham, although defeated for the senatorship, may seek the democratic nomination for governor three years hence and may endeavor to retrieve his lost laurels. Although his closest friends here say that they do not place any credence in this report, they declare that Beckham, although defeated, is still strong with the people and they would not be surprised if he were forced into such a position by his friends.

NOW GOES TO SENATE.

County Unit Bill Passes Kentucky House 76 To 14.

Frankfort, Ky.—Without debate the house of representatives passed the county unit bill by a vote of 75 to 14, and the bill will now go to the senate, where the same fight as has occupied most of the session in the house will begin. Representative Hannah, Greenup county, said the bill had been discussed in the newspapers, talked about by every member of the general assembly, and he believed that the members had made up their minds how they would vote, so he moved the previous question. Party lines were laid aside in the voting. Practically every member made a brief explanation of his vote, some of them being stirring and to the point.

NINE YEARS AFTER DEATH

Will of Mrs. Parr Is Probated—May Have Some Bearing on Contest.

Louisville, Ky.—The will of Mrs. Maria D. Parr, wife of the late Capt. Daniel Parr, was probated, nine years after the death of the wealthy testatrix. Just what bearing this has on the contest to set aside the will of Capt. Parr is not known here. Capt. Parr, by his will, provided that $700,000 should be invested in "Parr's Rest," a home for aged and indigent females. Contest was threatened, but a settlement was effected, and later a revocation of the charitable bequest is said to have been found. Suit was begun to have the former will set aside and it will be adjudicated in May.

Church Takes Action.

Lexington, Ky.—Accompanying a pastoral letter issued by Bishop Lewis W. Burton, which will be read in all of the Episcopal churches of the diocese of Lexington, is a special prayer, invoking Divine aid to freeing the state from the disorderly conditions of disorder now existing, which is recommended for public and family devotions.

Democrats Enraged.

Bowling Green, Ky.—Democrats here are enraged over Beckham's defeat. Many of the old-time democratic war horses, who have been anti-Beckham men for years, are denouncing the Louisville members who defeated Beckham, and there is no question but that he is stronger with the people of Warren county than ever before.

TO PUNISH NIGHT RIDERS.

Gov. Willson Urges Legislature To Adopt Such Measures.

Frankfort, Ky.—In a special message to the general assembly Gov. Willson demands immediate protective measures to redeem "one-third of the state from anarchy" caused by night riders. He asks that the attorney general be given more power. In the course of his message he points out that in all the night rider outrages only one indictment has been returned and no one punished.

Gov. Willson also repeats his recommendation for a uniform local option law, with the county as the governing unit; for a state reapportionment law, denies a report that he had said he would defeat a certain resolution of investigation, favors investigations by the legislature without the help of outside lawyers, indorses the suggestion of non-partisan public institution boards and renews his request for legislation for tax reform, state aid to public roads, additional support to the state militia and state settlement of industrial disputes, and urges economy in state expenditures.

COOL HEADS

Prevented Fist Fights During a Heated Argument in the House.

Frankfort, Ky.—Fist fights and possibly bloodshed were only averted between republicans and democrats in the house of representatives by cool heads, as the tension was stretched to the limit. Ruling, as he thinks, clearly within his rights, Acting Speaker Porter recognized Representative McChord, a democrat, in preference to Representative Sawyer A. Smith, republican, who tried to get in a motion for the house to reconvene when the regular hour of adjournment arrived to consider, he says, the report of the special and fixed committees. Speaker Porter ruled him out of order and later the speaker recognized Representative Jackson in preference to Smith. Smith demanded that the speaker recognize him. Representative Jackson went on with his speech for the bill, but Smith started for the speaker's stand, with all eyes following him. After whispering a moment with Speaker Porter he went back to his seat.

Limits Cost of License.

Frankfort, Ky.—Senator Wheeler Campbell secured the passage of his bill limiting the maximum saloon license to $500 in cities of the second class. This bill will doubtless save the saloon men of the state thousands of dollars, as there is a movement on to raise the license in every city in which the local option people are in minority.

BRADLEY DEFEATS BECKHAM.

ON THE 29TH BALLOT TAKEN BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

Declared Elected United States Senator From Kentucky to Succeed James B. McCreary.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 29.—Amid scenes of the wildest excitement on the floor of the house of representatives former Gov. William O'Connell Bradley, republican candidate, Friday was elected to succeed James B. McCreary in the United States senate for a term of six years, beginning March 4, 1909.

He received 64 votes, barely enough to win, and was enabled to gain the victory through the assitance of four anti-Beckham democrats, Senators H. S. McNutt and Albert Charlton, and Representative H. W. Lillard, of Boyle county.

Until Friday they have voted for democrats for senator and their sudden rally to Bradley took Beckham men completely by surprise, although the latter claim to have information that a deal was effected by which liquor forces were to elect Bradley in return for the defeat of county unit bill in the senate. The four democrats who voted for Bradley have been known as strong liquor men.

The balloting for senator began January 15, and ballots were taken each day thereafter when a quorum was had. Friday's deciding ballot was the 29th.

Completion of the first roll-call showed Bradley 64, Blackburn 1 and James 1. Before the speaker could announce the result the democrats attempted to break the quorum by leaving the hall, but camo back accompanied by Beckham, who authorized the withdrawal of his name and released democrats from primary nomination pledges for him in a hope that some other democrat would be named who could defeat Bradley.

The four bolting democrats were surrounded by life-long party friends, and urged to withdraw their support from Bradley and elect James, McCreary or any democrat they might name, but they remained obdurate, declaring that the proposition came too late.

Democratic leaders promised a caucus to select a candidate to which the name of Beckham would not be presented, but recalcitrants refused all offers and the result could not be changed.

There was great disorder in the chamber during the recapitulation, republicans demanding of the speaker to announce the result, democrats seeking to delay the proceedings in the hope of inducing some democrats to leave Bradley.

In a speech accepting the election Bradley thanked the speaker for fair and impartial rulings. He promised to use every effort to secure a repeal of the six-cent tax on tobacco.

AX USED BY INSANE MOTHER

To Mutilate Bodies of the Four Children She Had Murdered.

Lancaster, O., Feb. 29.— One of the most horrible crimes that has ever happened in Fairfield county was committed Friday afternoon about 5 o'clock, when Mrs. Joseph Spires killed her four children and herself, ten miles north of this city.

After shooting the three oldest children, none over 8 years old, the mother killed the baby, and then to make sure of her deed she took an old hatchet and cut the heads off two of the bodies and threw them into the cistern.

Satisfied that her work was well done she placed the revolver to her temple and fired a bullet which caused her own death almost instantly.

The family had been spending the greater part of Friday afternoon together and about 5 o'clock the husband went out to feed the stock.

He was gone for almost an hour and when he returned it was to find his wife lying in a pool of her own blood, the cries of the children stilled and the smell from the powder from the revolver was still fresh in the rooms.

He aroused his neighbors and the search began. In the cistern were found the bodies of two of his little ones. Under the house was found a third, and well covered over with blankets was the baby in its cradle, dead.

From the evidence discovered the wife must have killed the children in this manner:

First the oldest, then the next in age, and so on until she found herself at the tiny crib of her one-year-old babe, where she pushed away the curls and placed the weapon to its head and fired a bullet that caused instant death.

Then she pulled back the covers on the babe, surveyed the work of but a few minutes, and turned the revolver to her own brain, where she completed her work and wiped out all that was dear to Joseph Spires.

TWO CHIEFS LUCKY

SHAH AND PRESIDENT ALCORTA DODGE BOMBS.

PERSIAN EFFORT FATAL

Three of Monarch's Outriders Are Slain While Explosive Tossed at South American Fails to Accomplish End.

Teheran, Persia.—An attempt was made in this city Friday afternoon to assassinate the shah of Persia by a bomb. His majesty was not hurt. Three of the outriders who were accompanying him at the time were killed. The shah owes his escape to the precautions taken to protect him from just such an attempt as was made Friday afternoon. He was on his way to a near-by town where he intended to pass a few days. The procession had left the palace and was traversing a narrow street when two bombs were hurled down at it from the roof of a house. One exploded in the air, but the other struck the ground near the shah's automobile. This missile in exploding killed the three outriders, wounded the chauffeur and a score of bystanders and shattered the vehicle.

The shah, however, was not in his automobile. He had taken the precaution to send the motor car on ahead and ride himself in a carriage further in the rear of the procession. The motor car was a closed one, and it was thought that the sovereign was inside.

America Congratulates Him.

Washington. —— The shah of Persia Saturday received the congratulations of the American government on his escape from assassination. The message, signed by Secretary Root, was cabled to Minister Jackson at Teheran Friday: "Convey to his excellency hearty congratulations on his fortunate escape."

Outrage in Buenos Ayres.

Buenos Ayres.—A dynamite bomb was thrown Friday against a carriage in which President Alcorta was driving, but failed to explode. Four persons were arrested charged with complicity in the plot. Recently there has been political unrest in Argentina owing to the issuance January 26 of an executive decree closing the extraordinary sessions of congress and putting into effect for the current financial year the budget of 1907. This extreme measure was made necessary by the obstructive tactics of a majority in the senate which made impossible the passage of the budget or other legislation.

INDIAN SENATORS IN TILT.

Controversy Between Curtis and Owen Soothed by Carter.

Washington.—One of the most dramatic scenes ever witnessed in the senate was enacted Thursday when Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma insisted in tragic tones and with face showing much emotion that the five civilized tribes of Indians were dead and that he as a member of the tribe of Cherokee Indians was not under the control of the secretary of the interior. The event was rendered all the more interesting by the fact that Senator Owen was sharply engaged in controversy by Senator Charles Curtis, (Kan.) himself a Kaw Indian. It was the first time that two men with Indian blood in their veins had ever locked horns as senators in the senate chamber. Senator Carter came to the rescue and attempted to show that both senators were right.

The president's message approved the work of the body from its start and the chief executive went on record as favoring the proposed system of inland waterways, as advocated in the west and by the commission which has spent some time at work on the matter.

Bradley Wins Toga.

Frankfort, Ky.—Amid scenes of wildest excitement on the floor of the house of representatives, former Gov. William O'Connell Bradley, Republican candidate, was Friday elected to succeed James H. McCreary in the United States senate for a term of six years, beginning March 4, 1909.

HAD BEAR CUB FOR CHUM.

Death of Pet in Fight Brings Sorrow to Owner.

Milo P. Ward, a westerner, who spent seven years in the hills of Oregon seeking a "pocket" that contained gold enough to put him on his feet after a fortune of $500,000 had been swept away, has received bad news from home.

"It was tragic to me," he said, "although it was only the death of a pet bear that tramped with me during my days of loneliness and solitude in the hills in the hunt for gold that allowed me to hold up my head again."

Ward found the pocket that he sought. It contained $37,000 worth of good, yellow gold, and he is holding on to it. After losing his vast fortune in 1893, Ward, who had been a miner in former days, got out his pick and shovel, red shirt and rifle, and disappeared in the hills. He knew there was gold to be found, and after seven years of hard work and exposure to danger he succeeded in locating a rich "pocket." After three days of digging he started for civilization with the yellow metal.

"My faithful companion during the most of that time," said Ward, "was Bob, who came to me as a bear cub. We met in an unusual way. One night after a hard day's work I cooked my meal and lay down to sleep. During the night I felt the pressure of a soft foot on my hand and instantly started up. The night was dark and I could see but a few feet away. A rustling in the bushes a few feet from where I lay indicated that something was there.

"Finally daylight came and imagine my astonishment when I saw that my foe instead of being a ferocious mountain lion was nothing but a bear cub. The little fellow sat there shivering—scared worse, if possible, than I had been.

"I made friends with the cub and he followed me for months. When I found the fortune Bob and myself made our way to Gold Hill, where we located. We were good chums and I loved that bear. When I left him there in charge of my friends he weighed 450 pounds.

"Some time ago some of the 'boys' of the town concluded to get up a fight between Bob and a mountain lion they had captured. The fight took place a few days ago, but it was short. The lion got the bear by the throat and that was the end of Bob."

The Hungry Children.

If city school children are fainting at their desks from hunger it is high time organized measures were taken for their relief, declares the New York World. It is not to be expected that teachers should keep bottles of milk in their classrooms, as has been done, to provide pupils with sufficient nourishment to get through their lessons. The extreme conditions are assumed to be temporary and as such they should receive the attention of charitable societies. But the periodical reports of breakfastless school children indicate permanent conditions of privation and undernutrition among some part of the school population which should be remedied. No child can study on an empty stomach, and the attempt can only result in nervous weakness and dwarfed mental and physical development. Shall regular meals be provided for underfed children, and, if so, shall they be paid for by an appropriation from the educational fund, or must the expense be met by popular subscription?

Prefer Native Macaroni.

Much American macaroni wheat is now exported to the Russian Black sea ports but the bakers prefer the native product, for which they pay up to 11 cents a bushel more, claiming that it gives better results.

For Fighting Tuberculosis.

The city of Berlin has appropriated $12,500 toward the fund for combating tuberculosis, to be named in honor of Dr. Robert Koch. About $40,000 has been subscribed from private sources.

Sunday School Lessons for the World.

A power greater than that of steam seems to have been wielded by a little group of thoughtful men who gathered at the Fenway residence of W. N. Hartshorn to select the lessons for the Sunday schools of the world, says the Boston Herald. Every year they gather to make this choice, and when a decision has been reached the lessons are handed out to the printers and by them literally scattered over the planet. The word thus goes forth not in one but in scores of languages. Europe and Africa, east and west, north and south, get these helps to religious study in the vernacular. There is a supply for Hawaii, Japan and the islands of the sea. For India alone 40 dialects have to be provided for. Some 500,000,000 Sunday school leaflets are thus distributed every year.

Wonderful Phraseology.

A party of American tourists who were comfortably established in a hotel in Germany discovered a new contribution to "English as she is spoke," only this time they found it in the written word. The building had been recently wired for electricity and under the bulbs in each room directions were posted in French, German and English. The French was irreproachable, the German nearly so. The English read as follows: "To open and shut the lightening electrical on, is requested to turn to the right hand. On going to bed it must be closed. Otherwise the lightening must be paid."

Damage Done by Rats.

"The western farmer is waking up to a realization of the fact that he is, as the agricultural department told him some time ago, losing not less than $100,000,000 a year from rats," says J. H. Van Burden, a Milwaukee grain merchant. "It costs about 50 cents a year to feed a rat. We know this because we have boxed them up and fed them as much grain as they would eat for a year. It is a conservative estimate to place our rat population at 150,000,000. About one-third of them live in the large cities, where they do not get so much grain."

A TEMPERANCE WORKER.

Says Peru-na is a Valuable Nerve and Blood Remedy.

MISS BESSIE FARRELL.

MISS BESSIE FARRELL 1011 Third Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., is President of the Young People's Christian Temperance Association. She writes:

"Peruna is certainly a valuable nerve and blood remedy, calculated to build up the broken-down health of worn-out women. I have found by personal experience that it acts as a wonderful restorer of lost strength, assisting the stomach to assimilate and digest the food, and building up worn-out tissues. In my work I have had occasion to recommend it freely, especially to women.

"I know of nothing which is better to build up the strength of a young mother, in fact, all the ailments peculiar to women, so I am pleased to give it my hearty endorsement."

Dr. Hartman has prescribed Peruna for many thousand women, and he never fails to receive a multitude of letters like the above, thanking him for the wonderful benefits received.

GO TO SEA

There are positions open in the Navy for hundreds of young men between 17 and 25 years of age, and for mechanics up to 35 years of age. Good pay and good food furnished by the Government. For full information address Navy Recruiting Station, Post Office Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

So far the General Assembly has been unable to devise any plan whereby it can assist the public schools in the State, although there appears to be a considerable sentiment among the lawmakers that something ought to be done in that behalf. The public school is a most important factor in education, and Kentucky has fallen away behind many of the other States in providing a good school system, and the time has come when something that will bring her to the front in the matter of public education must be done. The States that have good school facilities will attract the home seeker in the future, and will draw the better class of people from States that are falling behind in education.

Had the acreage of tobacco raised in other counties in the Burley district, been in the same proportion to the area as the crop in Boone has always been there never would have been an over production. and the crop would have been so easily handled every year it would have commanded a good price all the time. Now that the acreage has been reduced, let good judgment prevail and the crop be kept within limits that will only meet the consumption each year.

That this Appellate district is not represented on the bench by a Republican Judge is due to the fact that Judge John M. Lassing took personal charge of his campaign last fall. He saw early in the campaign that disaster awaited the State ticket which was trying to ride in opposite directions at the same time on some important public measures, and he began paddling his own canoe and made a safe landing where the odds were largely against him.

There is no danger of any person getting into trouble in predicting that from now on the sheep is to be returned to its proper place on the farms. And why not, when it makes by far more money out of the grass and the weeds, and the seeds, the roots, the grains, the hay and anything else fed to it than any other kind of animal we raise, and it does that without one needing to milk or grind for them.

Judge Cammack heard and decided the contest growing out of the attempt to elect a marshal in Williamstown, Grant county, last November. He went behind the returns and discovered that the person holding the certificate of election by the margin of one vote had received 14 illegal votes while his opponent had received only 9, which gave the contestant the election. An appeal was taken.

Gov. Willson sent his third epistle to the Legislature, last week. In it he defended himself against criticism for not having put the night riders out of business, and placed the responsibility for the outrages upon the people themselves, who he says have elected officials who fail to perform their duties. He urged the Legislature to go to business and accomplish something.

The probability is there will be "a hot old time," at the Democratic State Convention a few months hence, as there will be a demand for a party reorganization from the ground up, which will precipitate an exciting session, as the fellows whose management has been so disastrous will not want "to acknowledge the corn" and step down and out.

Judging from surface indications Hon. W. J. Bryan is as good as nominated for the Presidency by the Democrats, and the national convention will only have to ratify his nomination and select his running mate. This country has never produced a man to whom the rank and file of his party was more loyal than they are to Mr. Bryan.

In the brief which Attorney General Breathitt filed in the Supreme Court of the United States, in the action of Bereah college to test the constitutionality of the Kentucky law requiring separate education of the races, he maintains that the co-education of the races would result in social equality, which would blot out both.

Figures taken from the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce show that Kentucky is preminently the chief of tobacco growing States. Her 1907 crop consisted of 270,200 acres which produced 240,478,000 pounds, the estimated value of which is $24,529,000, an average of 10.2 cents a pound.

Ex-Governor W. O. Bradley, Republican, was elected U. S. Senator by the Kentucky General Assembly last Friday. His election is another victory made possible by the outrageously badly managed Democratic campaign last fall. Goy. Bradley is the strongest man in his party in Kentucky.

At the meeting of the District Board of the Burley Tobacco Society, held in Winchester, last week, a resolution was adopted ordering the Secretary not to report any sales of tobacco during the next fifty days following the meeting, to newspapers or to anyone else.

If Mr. Beckham had made the sacrifice for his party two weeks ago that he was so willing to make last Friday after the hand writing was on the wall, Mr. Bradley would not have been U. S. Senator elect from Kentucky today. He delayed too long his opportunity.

Senator Elliston, of Williamstown, says that there are only two or three counties in the State that he has visited in which any serious attempt will be made to grow a tobacco crop. These counties are generally those which do not produce any great quantity of the weed.

Between the stay-at-home Democrats last November and the bolters in the General Assembly, last week, the Democratic party has been about put out of business in Kentucky. Gov. Bradley's election is the result of party perfidy on the part of four Democrats.

Everybody was caused to rejoice, last Thursday, by the newspaper report that the Society of Equity had sold all of the 1906 and 1907 crops of Burley Tobacco, but all were greatly chagrined, Friday when the report was denied and the denial was confirmed.

Henry Watterson is quoted as saying that if Bryan is elected President that he (Watterson) will never enter the White House. The country would submit to such conduct on the part of Mr. Watterson without being annoyed in the least.

The General Assembly has passed the bill appropriating $200,000 to the State University and $150,000 to each of the Normal Schools. It took a long time for the law makers to round in properly on the measure.

Ireland pays $5,000,000 a year for timber imported from other countries. Only one and one-half per cent of its land is in timber and much of this is of little value.

Secretary Taft has bagged several State delegations in the last few days, and it will not be long until there is a stamped to his Presidential band wagon.

With the Senatorial contest out of its way the General Assembly may now try to do something in the way of Legislation.

Mr. Beckham is now a private citizen, the first time in many years.

No more quorum breaking at Frankfort now.

CORTRIGHT METAL SHINGLES

What never leak? Exactly; never leak, never needs repairs of any kind, and last as long as the building itself. Neither melting snow, nor the worst driving rain can possibly reach the interior of the building that's covered with Cortright Metal Shingles. Pretty good recommendation isn't it? In addition we might add they're fire-proof and lightning proof too. Think of it! and they are not as expensive as other forms of roofing. Step in and we'll show them to you.

Your Watch

Ought to be cleaned at least once a year. Time dries the oil. When that happens the works will wear down. Even if there is oil much dust and dirt must have crept into the works and clogged them here and there Thorough cleaning will save the watch. You will admit that it is far better to pay the small cost of cleaning than to be compelled to buy a new watch. We do watch repairing cautiously and guarantee it for a year.

ARISTOCRACY

Has to Some Extent Pervaded the Confines of Old Boone.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

The Senatorial fight has been brought to a close, the Democratic party going down in defeat the second time within the last several months, because of which, many stalwart, conscientious, tried and true Democrats of our State hang their heads is sorrow. Not because of change of administration particularly, but because the result is the fruit of an unworthy ambition, coupled with the trampling underfoot of those principles of government, loved by every true patriot, by the leaders of our party—more particularly our last Executive. A noble ambition, prompted by true patriotism, which leads one to sacrifice his own selfish ends, as well as self-aggrandizement, is laudable and commendable and much to be admired. But, alas! such has not been the case in the government of our beloved State in the recent past. Worst of all regrets, such a spirit of aristocracy has pervaded to some extent the confines of our loved and native county of Boone. Shall we continue to hang our heads? Nay, verily. We have simply lost our mourings. Let us drift back to those sacred principles that make for the peace, happiness and prosperity of all republican institutions, as well as for the "Great Common People" of our State, putting in the forefront for office, from constable to governor, men of unquestionable integrity, sobriety, patriotism and ability and we shall soon see the Democratic banner float over the institutions of our grand old Commonwealth, and all will be well and her citizenship be made to rejoice.

A DEMOCRAT.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

As Sampson of old pulled down the temple of the Philistines and destroyed himself and his enemies as well, so has our Simpson pulled down the temple of democracy in Kentucky, but with different results. He destroyed himself and Democratic organization and injured his friends and the cause, but he has prospered his enemies and promoted the cause of the Republican party. Now it behooves all Democrats to get together and reorganize the party and put their wisest and most conservative men in the lead, and inaugurate an aggressive movement all along the line to regain what the many have lost by the selfishness and rule or ruin policy of the few. No man is worthy to lead in any cause or movement who is not willing to make a sacrifice when necessary for the good of the cause. The interest of the people or party is greater than the interest of any one man, and unless leaders recognize that principle they are always dangerous. I trust Democrats will not forget their experiences under Republican rule and fully realize conditions that will be brought about if it again gets complete control in Kentucky.

Mrs. Susan Acra, one of the county's oldest female citizens, has been in a critical condition for several days at the home of her daughter, Mrs. William Clore, of Locust Grove neighborhood. Her great age causes her friends to fear that she can not successfully resist disease very long.

Uncle Let Nichols, who resides down on Ashby Fork, has been having quite a serious time of grippe. He and his wife are among the county's oldest married couples, he being in his 84th and she in her 83d year. They are both able to get about nicely when well.

Messrs Hadley and Jesse Ellison, of Locust Grove, were delivering their 1907 crop of tobacco to Albert Conner, last Friday. They have been producing a very excellent quality and a large quantity of the weed every year, generally getting top figures for it.

The Lucky Quarter.

Is the one you pay out for a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills. They bring you the health that's more precious than jewels. Try them for headache, biliousness, constipation and malaria. If they disappoint you the price will be cheerfully refunded at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

The first Monday in next month is known as "horse show day," in this county, and the indications are that the exhibition will be larger than any for several years past, the advance in the price of horses in the last five years having revived the breeding interest very greatly. There will be several valuable animals on the street that day.

Chas. P[illegible] of Bullittsville, an old Confederate soldier, has been in bad health for some time. Several weeks ago he fell and broke one of his ribs, since which time he has been in a very bad condition. Mr. Helm has many friends who will be sorry to hear of his protracted indisposition, and his old comrades in arms will be especially sorry.

Much to the regret of the good people of Limaburg neighborhood, Rev. T. L. Utz and family moved to Belleview, last week where he will have charge of the Baptist church. He was pastor of the Belleview church many years ago, but had to give it up on account of his health, which broke down. Mr. and Mrs. Utz were given a hearty welcome by the people at their former home.

The death of Mrs. Harry Dinn, of Hebron, is particularly sad. Mrs. Dinn's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Elza Harper, were quite ill, and she went home to nurse and take care of them, when she contracted pneumonia and survived only five days. She passed away almost in the midst of her duties to her father and mother whom she loved to serve. She leaves a husband and a child about 20 months old.

The month of February just past sustained, fully, its reputation of being the worst month of the winter. There was no really severe weather, but numerous disagreeable days full of gripp and bad colds that were spread over the country about as freely as they were ever known to be. During the month of February is the time for the people in this latitude to have business in the sunny south.

Manager Kirkpatrick is making dates for games for his base ball aggregation which he expects to have on the diamond early in the season this year. He is in correspondence with Guy W. If you have any furniture that is from 100 to 500 years old, and which you desire to dispose of, send for Kirkpatrick, whose address is Burlington, Ky.

It has been some time since anything has been said in regard to the reclaiming of the Petersburg and Woolper pike. The land owners along that road should not fail to put themselves in a position to take advantage of the financial assistance the fiscal court has declared itself ready to render, when they shoulder their part of the burden. The work necessary to put the road in condition could be done with the outlay of a very small amount of money, and it will be a great pity should the work, which, at one time appeared to be almost ready to proceed be suffered to go undone.

Last Thursday morning Herbert Kirkpatrick went on Clutterbuck's wagon to Covington, where he delivered a large lot of butter to individual customers, then crossed the river and "hoofed it" over a large district in Cincinnati, then jumped a street car and unloaded at Anderson's Ferry a few minutes after 11 o'clock. He crossed the river and walked a distance of four miles to Limaburg and attended T. B. Aylor's afternoon sale, and at 4:30 p. m. he was sitting on a barrel in the back room of Clutterbuck's store in Burlington, looking none the worse for his trip, and talking furs equal to a Burkhardt. What use has he for an automobile?

A farmer up in the Northwest country bought 160 acres in the heart of the great flax belt for $10 an acre on the crop payment plan. He broke up 135 acres and planted it in flax. In round numbers, he thrashed in the fall eighteen and one-half bushels to the acre; sold it for $1.39½ a bushel; total, $3,500; a little more than twice enough to pay for his land out of his first crop. Not only was the flax immensely profitable itself, but it removed from the country the stigma, "one crop country."

Guarded and Kept

Elijah, the Prophet, Preserved During the Years of Famine.

STORY BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

Scripture Authority.—I Kings 17 and 10th verse of Chapter 18.

SERMONETTE.

Elijah lived in the spirit and confidence of the One Hundred and Twenty-first Psalm. During all these terrible three years while King Ahab and his emissaries scoured the land and sifted the nations round about seeking in mad rage for the prophet that they might kill him as they had killed all the priests of the Lord upon whom they could lay their hands, Elijah rested safely and peacefully under the shelter of the Almighty. No evil could come to him, for God's hiding places are beyond man's power to find, and God's resources for supplying the needs of the body are infinite.

There were only two things the prophet needed to do in order to bring himself within the sphere of God's perfect care. To OBEY and to WAIT.

Obedience made him the bearer of an unwelcome but needful message. He dared to speak the truth, even to the king. It is not honeyed words the world needs, but the burning words of God's judgment on sin and his call to righteousness.

Obedience made for the prophet powerful enemies who sought his life, but obedience also made certain the unfailing friendship of God.

Obedience made him a fugitive and drove him from the fellowship of man, but it also won for him the fellowship and hospitality of God.

And having obeyed, he waited.

Perhaps this is the hardest test to which the servant of God can be subjected.

To push boldly into the presence of the king and bluntly give God's message took courage, but to wait, just wait, during the weeks and months while God's word was being fulfilled; to wait, just wait, while the devouring drought wasted the land; to wait, just wait, until God spoke, even though the angry king had decreed your death and was sending his soldiers to take you; there is where the real testing comes; there is where sublime faith is needed to keep one steadfast.

To wait on God is to make certain that you do not miss the only door of escape to God's sheltering care. Elijah waited even until the king had spoken the sentence of death upon him, even until the shadow of the executioner had fallen across the doorway of his humble dwelling, and then God bade him go to the brook Cherith.

To wait, just wait, and see the last drop of water dipped from the brook; to wait, just wait, after the ravens had made their last visit and came no more! Ah! what a testing! Had God forgotten? Was he to perish there? No water! No food, for the hour when the ravens should have returned was gone! In the darkness of the moment he just waited, and then God spoke, pointing the next step and opening the door to new supplies of his grace and bounty.

It pays to obey God and then to wait, for "He will not suffer thy foot to be moved; he that keepeth thee will not slumber."

THE STORY.

FULL three months had passed and no rain. The ground was parched and dry, and even the choice pasture lands of King Ahab began to fail, so that the herdsmen were anxiously questioning whither they should turn to find good food and water for their flocks and herds.

Only that morning the head keeper over the sheep had arrived with reports of the growing severity of the drought, and Obadiah, the governor of the royal household, had taken the king word. Ahab listened with troubled heart to the dispiriting reports. The brazen skies and the parching ground had not escaped his eyes even in the beautiful palace grounds at Jezreel, and the laugh of scorn with which he had dismissed the prophet Elijah three months before had given place to one of apprehension and fear. No rain had fallen since then. Would the word of this "crazy Tishbite," as he called him, really come true? What would three years bring forth when already but three months had passed and the land was even then beginning to feel the lack of rain?

Ahab asked himself these questions as he sat alone after dismissing his servant, and then rising impatiently he went to the window and looked out. How cruel the sun seemed as he poured his withering heat upon the earth. How brazen and empty the sky. He searched its blue, clear depths from horizon to zenith in a sort of desperate hope that he might discover some vagrant cloud which would give promise of the needed rain.

"Can the word of this uncouth Gileadite shut up the heavens that they give no rain?" he angrily exclaimed.

"And is my lord the king content to suffer such a low-born fellow to trouble him?" spoke a voice behind him. There was a cruel, harsh contemptuous ring to the words as they fell with accentuated intensity, and Ahab turned suddenly to look into the beautiful face of his wife Jezebel.

"Let Baal our god drink the blood of this pestilential fellow," she continued, with an air of decision, and then as though the only question which remained to be settled was the manner of carrying out her decree of death, she added:

"Let the servants of the king be dispatched at once to seize the prophet and I will see that the prophets of Baal are prepared to receive him. It will be a great day for Israel, and Israel shall know that Baal is god indeed, and that he knoweth how to destroy those who are his enemies."

"But suppose the God of Elijah had shut up the heavens and was mightier than the god Baal?" questioned Ahab, a rising fear taking possession of his heart.

"Would thou leave the worship of Baal to serve the God of this wandering Tishbite?" contemptuously demanded Jezabel. "Ago, not the gods angry with us because such a pestilential fellow is suffered to trouble the land, and will not rain come when the affront to Baal is wiped out with his blood?"

"Perhaps," admitted Ahab.

"Nay, not 'perhaps,' but for a truth. Wilt thou not send and search for this fellow?" Jezebel pleaded in softer, quieter mood, and by way of reenforcing her appeal she threw her beautiful arms about his neck and looking into his eyes, she whispered softly: "Where is there more glorious king than thou? Be king indeed in thine own land. He who dares to speak curses upon the land let him feel the king's displeasure."

"Thou hast spoken well, I verily believe," exclaimed Ahab, yielding himself to the charm of those eyes and that face, for long since had this beautiful but wicked woman gained complete ascendancy over him and she knew how by her wiles to completely dominate both the political and the religious atmosphere of Israel. It was her influence which had established the worship of Baal so completely upon Israel, and it was she who was now ready to boldly and fearlessly take issue with the prophet of the Lord and bring him to an accounting.

And so it came to pass that day ere the sun had set that messengers of the king were speeding here and there in search of the prophet Elijah. They had traced his movements from the time of his meeting with Ahab through the various places he had visited since then and came at last to the dwelling in a little village where it was said that the prophet had taken lodgment.

To the insistent, imperious knock of the soldiers the door was at last opened, and, in spite of the protests of the woman who came to the door they pushed their way in and demanded to know where the prophet Elijah was. Powerless to resist, the woman led the way to the little room where the prophet had found shelter and pushed open the door. Eagerly the soldiers crowded in, but the room was empty, and search the house from end to end as they might no signs of the prophet could be found.

"When did he leave?" demanded the soldiers. "And whither went he?"

"I know not," faltered the woman, a light breaking in upon her puzzled heart, "save that last night I heard him speaking as though in prayer and then heard him moving softly about his room. After that I fell asleep and heard nothing more, and still supposed he was resting and meditating within, as was his wont."

Baffled and disappointed, the messengers of the king reported to him, and at once Ahab sent messengers into all the nations about demanding whether the prophet Elijah had come thither, and asking that diligent search be made for him. Thus was the quest kept up, man measuring his skill with that of the Almighty God and always being disappointed and baffled, for who is there who can search out the hiding places of God? And who is there mighty enough to harm when God holds within the hollow of his hand? But to the land of the Zidonians the messengers came not, for Jezebel exclaimed with lofty scorn:

"There be none in my father's land who would give shelter to Elijah, for all there are worshipers of Baal, even as are the people of Israel since we destroyed the remaining prophets of the Lord."

But Jezebel knew not that within a stone's throw of the palace walls in the caves in the hills 100 prophets of the true God were sheltered, and that in the very heart of her father's dominions, where she supposed the worship of Baal ruled supreme, there was a poor widow woman into whose heart the light of the true God had come and who was prepared to receive the hunted servant of the Lord and give him shelter.

OPPOSED TO REFORM

MEN URGING TARIFF COMMISSION SHOW THEIR HANDS.

National Grange Evidently Is Being Misrepresented in the Matter—Standpatters at Work to Block Any Changes.

Representatives of the National Association of Manufacturers, the National Grange and numerous other national and local associations called on President Roosevelt a few days ago to urge him to recommend the passage of the Beveridge bill to create a tariff commission. President Van Cleave of the Manufacturers' association declared: "We are urging the appointment of a tariff commission, not as revisionists, but as stanch protectionists. It is my own belief and that of the National Association of Manufacturers and the large number of organizations which indorse the immediate appointment of a commission that such a commission is absolutely necessary in order [illegible] the business interests of the country from the barmful effects of a continued partisan agitation for tariff revision during the campaign."

If such is the purpose of these associations, it would seem they are opposed to real tariff revision and are pushing the commission plan on purpose to prevent tariff reform, or at all events to postpone it. The National Grange, which at its last annual meeting declared in favor of tariff reform, is evidently being misrepresented by its officials when they join in this attempt to postpone reform, and the great majority of the members of the subordinate granges throughout the country should call them to account and insist on the tariff reform program adopted at the last meeting of the National Grange: "That we believe that the general welfare of the country demands an exhaustive and thorough tariff revision, and that the tariff be removed from every article that is continuously being sold in foreign markets cheaper than at home.

"Resolved, That we urge upon the members of the granges throughout the United States to take speedy action and use every influence at their command to secure the carrying out of the sentiments of these resolutions."

There was no mention there of a procrastinating commission, but rather for an immediate "exhaustive and thorough tariff revision."

The National Boot and Shoe Manufacturers' association was also represented amongst those who called upon the president, and that they did not represent the largest manufacturer of boots and shoes in the United States any more than the grange officials represented the demands of the members of the National Grange is equally apparent. For in a letter from Mr. H. E. Miles, one of the board of directors of the National Association of Manufacturers, to Gov. W. L. Douglas of Brockton, Mass., he said:

"I write to ask that there be present a representative of the shoe interest, and as a matter of politics, I suggest that he be not known particularly as a Democrat. It is a business proposition and no room for party consideration of any kind. At the same time you know how some smart politician might play upon the fact if there were Democratic leaders among us."

But Gov. Douglas, although the products of his factories are protected by the tariff, is an ardent tariff reformer, and he replied through his secretary that "I am quite sure the governor is not in favor of the appointment of a tariff commission. He very much prefers the immediate revision of the tariff and the elimination of at least some of the schedules that are admittedly farcical. I inclose you the governor's latest interview in New York World of the 16th instant, which will thoroughly explain his position in the matter, and under separate cover I mail you a copy of his addresses and call your special attention to his address to the president at Washington while acting as chairman of the committee of the National Association of Boot and Shoe Manufacturers."

All this shows how the question of a tariff commission is being fostered by the standpatters, with the evident intent of postponing tariff revision indefinitely, or, at least, to a more convenient season.

From the experience of what former tariff commissions accomplished and the years consumed in deliberations, another commission could and probably would play into the hands of the standpatters who now control congress.

Fighting "Honest Graft."

Senator La Follette has introduced in the United States senate and Mr. Cary in the house a bill "to prohibit the giving to or receipt by officials of telegraph or telephone franks." The bill provides for imprisonment or fine or both and is intended to destroy the last link that has bound officials to corporations through such favors. The labor organizations are pushing the measure and expect to force a vote on it which will put a good many Republican members of both houses of congress in an uncomfortable position. It is quite possible that the Republican leaders will find some way to prevent the exposure of their complicity with corporations and prevent the bill from being reported by the committees on interstate commerce to which it has been referred. The Democrats of both houses will undoubtedly favor its passage, and such few Republicans as are free from corporation entanglements.

FARMERS AND THE TARIFF.

Appeal for Revision Unlikely to Have Much Effect.

It is singular that while a majority of the farmers of the northern states continue to vote to keep the Republican party in power all the organizations of farmers are urging tariff reform. The farmers' unions and the Society of Equity have since their organization been demanding that the tariff which protects the trusts be revised, although the majority of the members have been voting to indorse the standpat Republican program. The granges, which used to be such a power in politics, and now continue as independent organizations for the benefit of farmers, have been dominated by a Republican ring, but even these have lately seen the light. At the last meeting of the National Grange in November the following resolutions were passed unanimously:

"Resolved, By the National Grange in Hartford, Conn., assembled November 13, 1907, that we believe that the general welfare of the country demands an exhaustive and thorough tariff revision, and that the tariff be removed from every article that is being sold in foreign markets cheaper than at home.

"Resolved, That we urge upon the members of the grange throughout the United States to take speedy action and use every influence at their command to secure the carrying out of the sentiments of these resolutions."

That is the Democratic position, but there is no probability of the Republican majority in congress paying any heed to the demands of the farmers, for Speaker Cannon, who rules the Republican roost, has packed the committee on ways and means on purpose to prevent tariff consideration. There is a vague promise in the air to revise the tariff "after election," but as Speaker Cannon has declared to the Manufacturing Potters' association that their industry needs that the tariff be revised higher, what hope is there that any general reduction of the tariff will be made "after election" if the Republicans elect the president and a majority of congress?

How can the National Grange expect the Republican party to remove the tariff, "from every article that is being sold in foreign markets cheaper than at home?" Such a reform would compel the trusts to reduce the price of their products at least 30 per cent. Where would the Republican party raise its campaign fund, if not from the trusts? The money power would be the only source left, and the trusts and the money power are so closely united that if you hit a trust a Wall street bank squeals.

Investigating Roosevelt.

The presidential choler has been raised by the many reports of federal appointments for partisan purposes. President Roosevelt has inspired a statement that the charge that he is misusing federal patronage in Mr. Taft's behalf "is an unqualified lie," and the additional information is furnished from the White House that this statement is contained in a letter written to a close friend of Mr. Roosevelt's in Indiana. It is supposed that this close friend is William Dudley Foulke of Richmond, former chairman of the civil service commission. Senators and representatives who contend that they have ground for the belief that the allegations are justified, are answering this inspired announcement with the challenge: "If it is an unqualified lie, we should like to have certain things explained."

In order to get the desired explanation a resolution for an investigation will probably be offered in the senate unless the Republican leaders determine that it is bad politics. If Republicans are afraid to investigate, they will have to accept the imputation of being prevaricators, which President Roosevelt declares they are, but it would seem that an investigation should be made. The Democrats would, of course, prefer some Republican should offer such a resolution, but as such charges should not be bandied about without investigation it may become the duty of the Democrats to force it, as far as the minority is able to do so.

Republicans Oppose Reform.

Civil service reform is a Democratic policy which the Republicans were compelled to adopt when Mr. Tilden was the leader of the Democratic party. For all these years the Republicans have pretended to favor civil service reform, but have evaded the law whenever possible. It is, therefore, nothing to be surprised at when the leaders of thought in the Republican party resolve against reform. Read what the Indiana Republican Editorial association has to say: "While we earnestly believe that merit should win and every laborer should be worthy of his hire, we are opposed to and heartily condemn the civil service law, which makes lifetime jobs of positions under its control and is producing a countless office-holding class whose future is even now a matter of great concern to the government. We stand for the rich, red blood of the United States and feel that anything that hinders its free coursing in the nation's arteries is detrimental to the public service and places a premium upon the political mollycoddle."

This no doubt comes because President Roosevelt, the supposed leader of civil service reform sentiment, has been permitting the federal officials to help in setting up the pins for delegates, favorable to "my policies," for the Republican national convention. Hence this squeal from the spell-mongers.

If a young man sits half the time on a hot stove and the other half on a cake of ice it's just like being in love.

LOST TEMPER WAS COSTLY.

Post Banker Threw Away and Bought Back His Own Property.

Edmund Clarence Stedman, the poet banker, had a high temper and was exceedingly sensitive. One day, exasperated by the crass stupidity of a servant, he threw a book at his head. The boy ducked and the book sailed out of the window. After it hurried the menial, but he was too late; a passerby had picked it up and walked off with it. Stedman began to wonder what book he had thrown away, and to his horror discovered that it was a quaint and rare little volume for which he had paid $50. His chagrin was intense, as the work was almost unique and the prospects of replacing it were remote.

Some time afterward, when browsing in a second-hand book shop, our splenetic poet banker perceived to his great delight a copy of the very book he had lost. He asked the price. "It's very rare," replied the dealer, "but as you are an old customer I'll let you have it for $40; nobody else could have it for less than $60." Stedman gladly paid the $40, got home with his treasure as soon as possible, and sat down to gloat over it. A card dropped out of the leaves. It was his own. Further examination showed that he had bought back his property. It cured him of casting books at servants' heads.—New York Press.

WILLSON'S MESSAGE TO THE SENATE

SPECIFIES OFFICES WHICH HE REGARDS AS UNNECESSARY IN STATE AFFAIRS.

OLD SYSTEM DECLARED BETTER THAN THE NEW.

Recommends All Boards in Charge of Public Institutions Taken Out of Politics By Making Them Nonpartisan or Bipartisan.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 25.—Gov. Willson's message to the senate in connection with the request for information, introduced by Senator Newman, as to the alleged useless offices which should be abolished, was sent in. The governor's message says:

"Taking first a general view of the offices needed to transact the public business, it seems to me that in Kentucky, during the last few years, we have gone a long way toward changing the original plan of our government from the old and tried ways to a series of experiments in governing by commissions and other devices for interfering with and regulating the business and lives of others previously free from such regulation.

Devices Declared Partisan.

"Some of these devices are partisan political plans to keep men in office after the people voted for a change, by giving the appointing power to another department in which there was no change, when the people made a change in the executive department, and to change the plan or the constitution making appointments executive acts, to the plan of appointing executive boards and commissions and officers by the other departments, sometimes by the general assembly, which the constitution intended to be purely judicial and not executive.

"For generations the executive management and control of the penitentiaries, asylums and other state institutions and their employes was conducted by the executive branch, the state officers, without extra pay; but, upon the election of a republican administration coupled with a democratic general assembly, in order to prevent change in the control of the penitentiaries, the legislative branch took from the executive branch the old and long maintained executive function of managing the penitentiaries and vested it in a board elected by the legislature.

"I believe that the asylums were better managed by the old-time boards of citizens of high character and that those most deeply concerned felt safer about them than since they were put in charge of men chosen politically.

"We have created a number of other boards generally to promote good, patriotic, philanthropic, semi-public efforts, historical work, etc., which are admirable but should be maintained by private patriotism and enterprise instead of from the state treasury.

"I renew my recommendation that all boards in charge of penitentiaries, asylums or other public institutions, whether under the present system or the old local boards, be taken out of politics by making them nonpartisan or bipartisan even if it requires an additional member on each board.

Offices Are Specified.

"I specify the following offices as unnecessary: Three penitentiary commissioners, salaries $2,000 each $6,000 a year; three members of the board of control, salaries $2,500 each, $7,500 a year; four assistant deputy wardens at $1,200 or $4,800 a year; twenty guards more than needed in the penitentiaries receiving $18,000 a year; steward of the Feeble Minded Institute at $1,000 per annum; secretary of the capital commission, $1,200 per annum; $2,500 a year ordered to be paid out of the state appropriation for the State fair to a member of the senate as secretary of that body should be prohibited by law; the office of commissioner of the court of appeals at $5,000 per annum, adopted to help the court catch up with its work which got behind owing to the total loss, through illness for several years of any service of one of the judges. With the full bench, the commissioner and the stenographers, the court is now practically up with its work and no longer needs the help of the accomplished and admirable judge, who has been performing the duties of commissioner in a manner greatly respected by the state and by the profession.

Inspector Blake Plan.

"There are no doubt other unnecessary offices which I can not specify now, but I have not been able to have any examination of the institutions by any inspector other than the democratic chairman of the late campaign an active partisan and defender of the present conditions which the people voted to end, who has held on to office after being advised in a courteous way that it was advised to have an examination made by a new inspector independent of the old control, which seemed reasonable under the circumstances; but, although his term of office ended January 14, 1908, he has resisted the change, and the confirmation of the new inspector, appointed promptly, has been delayed by some arrangement to which I was not a party, and the inquiry into the full details of all employed in the penitentiaries and asylums and what they are paid what the work is worth and what the state gets for their pay, in order to be able to advise the general assembly as to all unnecessary offices, has been delayed against my wishes and without my approval."

All Beach.

Wilfred was sitting upon his father's knee watching his mother arranging her hair.

"Papa hasn't any Marcel waves like that," said the father laughingly.

Wilfred, looking up at his father's bald pate, replied, "Nope; no waves; it's all beach."—Harper's Weekly.

Where It Belongs.

"Excuse me," said the playwright to his friend who was hissing the piece, "do you think it is good form to hiss my show when I gave you the ticket that admitted you?"

"Certainly," resentfully replied the friend. "If I'd bought a ticket I would have contented myself by going outside and swearing at myself."—Success Magazine.

Hog Cholera.

The greatest drawback to the hog industry which breeders in this country have to contend with is what is known as "hog cholera" and "swine plague."

Hog cholera is a highly contagious disease and unless checked is liable to carry off a great number of hogs in a very short time.

Mr. A. P. Williams, of Burnetts Creek, Ind., tells of an experience which he had with some hogs that had the cholera. "Five years ago," says Mr. Williams, "I was in the employ of Mr. J. D. Richardson, Lafayette, Ind., as his barn foreman. Some fine hogs that I was feeding took the cholera. I gave them Sloan's Liniment and did not lose a hog. Some were so bad they would not drink sweet milk and I was compelled to drench them. I have tried it at every opportunity since and always find it O. K."

OLD SURGEON

Found Coffee Caused Hands to Tremble.

The surgeon's duties require clear judgment and a steady hand. A slip or an unnecessary incision may do irreparable damage to the patient.

When he found that coffee drinking caused his hands to tremble, an Ills. surgeon conscientiously gave it up and this is his story.

"For years I was a coffee drinker until my nervous system was nearly broken down, my hands trembled so I could hardly write, and insomnia tortured me at night.

"Besides, how could I safely perform operations with unsteady hands, using knives and instruments of precision? When I saw plainly the bad effects of coffee, I decided to stop it, and three years ago I prepared some Postum, of which I had received a sample.

"The first cupful surprised me. It was mild, soothing, delicious. At this time I gave some Postum to a friend who was in a similar condition to mine, from the use of coffee.

"A few days after, I met him and he was full of praise for Postum, declaring he would never return to coffee but stick to Postum. We then ordered a full supply and within a short time my nervousness and consequent trembling, as well as insomnia, disappeared, blood circulation became normal, no dizziness nor heat flashes.

"My friend became a Postum enthusiast, his whole family using it exclusively.

"It would be the fault of the one who brewed the Postum, if it did not taste good when served.

"The best food may be spoiled if not properly made. Postum should be boiled according to directions on the pkg. Then it is all right, anyone can rely on it. It ought to become the national drink." "There's a Reason." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

WINTER WHEAT CROP

HE REALIZED $36 PER ACRE. HIS OATS $37 PER ACRE IN SOUTHERN ALBERTA, WESTERN CANADA.

Coaldale, Alta., Can., Nov. 19, 1907.

Sir: I beg to say that this year we had 349 acres of grain, consisting of 197 acres of spring wheat and 152 acres of oats. The average yield of wheat was 38 bushels per acre and oats 74 bushels. We were offered $1.00 per bushel for wheat and 50 cents for oats, making the acre values for the two crops $38.00 and $37.00 respectively.

We also had 50 tons of hay worth $13.00 per ton, and 500 bushels of potatoes, worth 50 cents per bushel, the latter off 2½ acres of ground.

Our best yields this year were 107 acres of wheat, making 41 bushels per acre at $1. 00 per bushel, would be $41.00 per acre; 47 acres of oats, yielding 95 bushels per acre were sold for 50 cents per bushel. Proceeds, $47.00 per acre.

I might add that 50 acres of our oats were "stubbled in."

During the spring of 1906, we hired about 300 acres broken by steam. We put in and harvested 55 acres of grain last year, did the remainder of our breaking, worked up the ground and seeded this year's entire crop, put in seven acres of alfalfa and five acres of garden potatoes, trees, etc., all with one four-horse team. During harvest we hired other teams, but, aside from this, and part of the breaking, the one team did the work of raising practically 19,000 bushels of grain, worth $12,000.

Yours truly,
W. H. PAWSON, JR.

WINTER WHEAT 25 TO 30 BUSHELS TO THE ACRE IN SOUTHERN ALBERTA.

Warner, Alta, Canada, Jan. 9, 1908.

Dear Sir: This is the first year of farming in this settlement. Mr. A. L. Warner raised twenty-five hundred and fifteen bushels of fine winter wheat on one hundred acres of breaking and Tenny brothers bad sixty acres that went thirty bushels per acre. The winter wheat that is in this year looks fine.

Spring wheat here went thirty bushels per acre, oats fifty to eighty, barley fifty, and flax ten to fifteen on sod.

The settlers here are all well pleased with the country. The stock have not required any feed except the grass up to this date and are all fat.

Yours truly,
F. S. LEFFINGWELL.

How the Governor Felt.

Gov. Hughes recently addressed the West End Woman's Republican club of New York and remarked in the course of his talk: "My happiness on this occasion may be compared with the young lady on her first visit to Venice. RESOLVED TO SNUB EVE.

Mrs. Intheswim Intended to Draw Social Line in Heaven.

The minister had dropped in to tea, and the conversation had drifted through various channels to the question of whether or not we should know each other in heaven. Presuming that our physical beings would be perpetuated, and that recognition would be assured, the minister had asked various ones at the table among whom the Biblical characters they would be most interested in recognizing.

Some mentioned one prophet and some another, but one lady, noted for her social exclusiveness, had not spoken. Turning to her the minister said: "And who would you like to meet in heaven, Mrs. Intheswim?"

Mrs. Intheswim pursed her lips. "I really don't know," she said, "but there is one thing I do know, and that is that I shouldn't care to meet Eve. In fact, I don't know that I would speak to her if I did!"

The Flatterer.

The tramp had applied to the farmer's wife for assistance.

"You have a beautiful voice, lady," he said.

She looked interested.

"Have I?"

"Yes, ma'am; I'd rather hear you say no, lady, than most other women say yes."

Then she drove back the dog and gave the wanderer half a loaf and a chunk of cold beef.

"Talk it over with Dobbin"

I AM located in Texas gathering and sending out information about this wonderful state. The Santa Fe pays me a salary for doing this and incidentally for answering the questions asked by people who want to know. The information I give you may be depended on. The conclusions have been reached after careful consideration of all the facts and I assure you they are very conservative.

Texas offers every advantage to the man who is looking for an opportunity to make a place for himself in the world. I have no land for sale, neither has the Company; but what we want is people of brains and energy to settle along the line. The resulting traffic will pay the Company—I get my salary regularly every month.

I believe that Texas has more points of interest to the man who is looking out for the main chance than any other portion of the rapidly developing West. I believe that the Gulf Coast Country is destined to rival Southern California as a wealth producer. I believe that I can show you why this is so.

I want to interest you in Texas—I want you to own some Texas land—I want you to come to Texas to live. Won't you send me your name and address and receive in return the new book-folder, "Gulf Coastings," which is just off the press?

Oldest House in Kentucky.

Standing about two and one half miles from the little village of Crab Orchard, Lincoln county, is the oldest brick house in Kentucky. It was built by Col. William Whitney in 1793, when Col. Whitney was an associate of Boone, Kenton, Morris and Clarke. The material came from Virginia, brought across the Overland Trail in wagons. The old mansion is ornamented with strange carving. It is two and one-half stories high, and stands on top of "Sportsman Hill." As a safeguard against Indians the windows are seven feet from the ground, the doors are two oak layers in thickness, and the stair case, of thirteen steps, has a carved eagle on each step representing the original States. The third floor is an old and spacious ball room, and the cellar, dug deep, serves as a refuge from attacking Indians.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Hall of Walton Lodge No. 183, I. O. O. F., Walton, Ky., Feby. 24, 1908.

Death has again visited our paternal circle and taken BRO. JOHN T. Resolved: That in the death of BRO. JOHN T. BOOTH our lodge has lost one of its oldest and most valuable members, who, at all times, endeavored to exemplify the principles of friendship, love and truth to the honor of the order; and to his bereaved widow we tender our heartfelt sympathy and fraternal protection.

Resolved: That as a token of our high regard for the memory of the deceased that the badge of mourning be worn for the usual period; that these resolutions be made part of the minutes and published in the Boone County RECORDER, and a copy of the resolutions be given the widow of the departed brother.

Resolved: That we tender to the bereaved widow our sincere sympathy in the loss of her beloved husband, and commend her to that All-wise Power that alone can heal the anguish that death brings.

HON. J. G. TOMLIN.

Hon. J. G. Tomlin was appointed by Gov. Willson as a special judge to preside in the trials of the Owen county officials at Owenton, beginning this week. There has been a very bad state of affairs at Owenton, where the State Inspector went over the books and reported a lot of money due from various officials, and especially the ex-sheriffs, who collected the revenue. Suits were instituted for the recovery of this money, and the cases are now coming up for trial. There is a very strained relation among the officials and ex-officials in Owen county, and much of the bad feeling has been publicly displayed, and the position of trial judge in the cases is one of a most delicate nature, and it requires not only a man of brain and diplomacy, but one of resolution, inflexible justice and honesty. Gov. Willson could not have made a better selection for the position than Mr. Tomlin, for all know that he will do what justice and the rights of the public demand, and no influences or coercion can sway him from the plain path of duty of an honorable judge as he sees it, and while he may not please all, the public will be faithfully represented with justice in all governing Judge Tomlin's decisions.

The Walton Military Company, the new State Guard being organized here, has 45 enlistments, and as soon as 61 are obtained, as the law requires, the boys will be mustered into service. Elijah J. Green, an old Walton boy, is Assistant Adjutant General of Kentucky, no doubt will come here and superintend the mustering-in. The company is composed of a fine lot of young men, and presents a handsome appearance. The following were elected officers: Captain, B. F. DeMolsey; First Lieutenant, Wm. T. Black; Second Lieutenant, A. R. Edwards; First Sargeant, Chas. W. Ransler; Second Sargeant, Arch Smith, who is a veteran of the 18th U. S. Infantry in the Philipines; Third Sargeant, J. A. Robinson, who was in the 19th U. S. Infantry in the Philiplnes; First Corporal, Robert Crisler; Second Corporal, Walt Cross; Third Corporal, Eugene Lathrop. There are several ex-soldiers in the command.

The organization of the Union League of Christian Endeavors was effected Friday evening, Feb. 21st, at the Christian church. This union is composed of the three societies from the different churches—Christian Endeavor, Epworth League and Baptist Young Peoples' Union. Its purpose is to draw the younger element of the churches together in a religious and social meeting to discuss local topics which are of interest to all church workers. The first meeting was well attended by members from all the societies and several visitors. The following officers were elected: President, Charles Rensler; Vice-President, Wayne Byland; Secretary and Treasurer, Mrs. Anna Hind. Editor, Miss Hattie Taylor; Assistants, Miss Fannie Mae Buck and Everett Aylor; Mr. Rensler has been president of the Christian Endeavor for more than two years and is well equipped for this office. Mr. Byland is president of the B. Y. P. U. Mrs. Hind of the Epworth League. A committee of six was appointed to prepare a program for each month. The young people of Walton are very proud of this spirit of condition manifested by the different churches and also feel honored that this is the second organization of its kind in Kentucky. Everyone lend a helping hand. We have made an excellent beginning but would be glad to have the support of all the people of the town. The meetings will be held on Saturday evening before the fourth Sunday in each month at the different churches. Come and meet with us at the Baptist church Saturday evening. An interesting and beneficial program is promised.

HON. R. B. BROWN.

The above is a picture of the RECORDER'S esteemed friend, Hon. R. B. Brown, of Warsaw, Gallatin county, who is so faithfully representing the interest of the people in the State Senate, being the member from this the twenty-third district comprising the counties of Boone, Gallatin and Owen. Quite a number of his friends have been urging him to become a candidate for delegate to the National Democratic Convention at Denver, and he would feel honored if the party would select him as one of the delegates from the Sixth Congressional District. Mr. Brown represented this district in the State Senate when it was Gallatin county's time before, and so faithfully did he discharge the trust that he was nominated the last time by acclamation. He has been chairman of the Gallatin county Democratic Committee for years, and under his leadership he has preserved the old time majority in Gallatin county even in the face of a strong organized opposition. Mr. Brown has been always for and of the people, and therein lies his great strength, for in every instance he has insisted that their rights be preserved in the process of nominating candidates and in the conduct of elections, and while he is at all times an aggressive Democrat his course has been so fair and just that his political adversaries honor and respect him. He is in complete harmony with the progressive ideas of the Democratic party, and the preservation of the rights of the people, and as a delegate to the National Convention the district would be faithfully and intelligently represented.

VERONA.

An attempt was made one morning, last week, to burn the large tobacco warehouse at this place, the property of Geo. W. Roberts, and in which he and C. C. Hume had a very large quantity of loose tobacco, besides 10 hogsheads that had been prized and ready for shipping to market. It was about 2 o'clock in the morning when a lady who was sitting up with a sick neighbor residing near the warehouse, discovered the flames and saw three men leaving the building. She gave the alarm and several men were soon at the scene and succeeded in putting out the fire and saving the building. The large doors to the barn had been saturated with coal oil and the match applied. The blaze at one time mounted to the roof, while a considerable hole was burnt through the barn floor. The location of the fire was evidently for the purpose of preventing the moving of the ten hogsheads of tobacco in case the fire was discovered while in its incipiency. There is no clue to the incendiaries. The tobacco was not in the pool.

Untidy Women.

If a man is asked what kind of a woman it is that he most dislikes, he will probably answer that it is the slovenly woman. Unfortunately, many women who would be horrified if their husbands came down to breakfast in an unshaved, unwashed and collarless condition, think nothing of appearing at that meal with their hair in curl-papers and clad in an unsightly tea-gown. More often than not, laziness is at the root of a woman's neglect to arrange her hair and put on a short and tidy skirt and a clean shirt-waist. Five minutes less of sleep is surely all that is necessary to enable her to make herself neat for the morning meal. Her husband would then carry away with him a pleasant and inspiriting picture of a dainty woman, instead of a slovenly, tousled creature, who, by her own carelessness and laziness, must inevitably weaken, even if she does not altogether destroy, the affection and respect of her husband. Many women think they must be dirty and untidy when doing housework—a very foolish mistake. A woman, if she has any innate refinement, says the New York Weekly, will do her work and look as neat as a new pin throughout. She will coil her hair neatly and cover it from dust with a mop-cap made of any cheap washing-material. Her short skirt and neat shirt-waist will be businesslike and allow freedom and quickness of movement. Then for doing dirty work, a garment of dark print should be slipped on, to be changed for a light one when cooking. In such a dress she will look as neat and dainty as anyone could wish, and her work will be better done, too, than if she wore soiled clothes.

From Rome comes the odd romance of a convict in the penal settlement on the island of Lampadusa, near Sicily, who has just been set free, nearly three years before his term for larceny expired, to enter into the enjoyment of the great fortune which he had inherited last spring from his aunt, besides a villa on the lake of Como and a city flat filled with costly and beautiful works of art. It was no doubt felt that it would be easy for him to be good with all the money he needed, and that he woul he better off than in jail. He promptly married a widow whom he had engaged as housekeeper and they spent their honeymoon at the convict settlement at Lampadusa. While a prisoner he had found the lack of any way of telling time a great trial, and he presented to his late companions a handsome clock to be placed in a tower where it can be heard striking the long hours.

There is a very strict law against any British officer accepting any gift from a native prince in India. Even when a doctor may have performed some serious operation upon a rajah, who, being grateful, wishes to give—exclusive of a money fee varying from £200 to £1,000, according to the operation performed—a present of a shawl, golden cup or other similar valuable, the doctor must obtain special permission from the viceroy before he dare accept the present. If any officer accepts a gift of any value without such permission he may have to resign. This rule was made because, in the old days, when the East India company governed India, an officer's pickings and the presents, often extorted from the rajah, were worth much more to him than his salary.

In Various Mexican states the sombrero, that picturesque adjunct of the Mexican, is to be placed under a heavy tax, in hope, it is said, to abolish it entirely. It is said that this hat, often six feet wide from brim to brim, often costs so much that the average workingman spends a year's wages for it. The tax takes the form of a license, with a number affixed, and there will be thus induced an aristocracy of the peon who wears the sombrero as compared with the peon who gives it up.

The island of Celebes, nearly half of which is still almost unknown, has now been connected by cable with the neighboring island of Borneo, and also with the American island of Guam, far to the north. It has thus been brought into close touch with the rest of the world, for it is joined to all parts of the eastern hemisphere through Borneo and to the western hemisphere through Guam and San Francisco.

A farmer living within the limits of Greater New York was almost asphyxiated recently because he blew out the gas when he found it necessary to stay all night in the city. It appears that New York continues to be rather provincial.

Steel rails are going down in price, but they will have to be put up in more convenient sizes and packages before the average man will feel constrained to take some home to the loved ones.

AN ANSWER OF FIRE

Elijah, the Prophet, Overcomes the Prophets of Baal.

STORY BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1901, by the Author, W. E. Eilers.)

Scripture Authority.—1 Kings, Chapter 18.

SERMONETTE.

"The God that answereth by fire, let him be God."—Fire was the element over which the god Baal was supposed to have special power, and when Elijah proposed his test it appeared in every way reasonable to the people and tha prophets of Baal. The fire should be a sign to the people as to which was the true God. The result of the test we know.

Fire was the symbol of God's presence, and it was the fire which God had kindled and which the priests were to keep constantly burning by which the fire on the altar of sacrifice was to be kindled. Long since because of the apostasy of Israel had this fire been quenched, and now if the altar fire was rekindled it must be from God. Thus was Elijah choosing a token which would at once test the strongest claim of Baal and at the same time bring the people together in the divinely-ordered form of worship, and make possible the revelation of God's presence and power.

The child of God need never fear the test which involves the true elements of worship and seeks the revelation of God's presence and power. But we must remember that Elijah was three years getting ready for this task on Mount Carmel. Three years of waiting. Three years of prayer. Three years of fellowship with God. Three years of simple, childlike dependence upon his care and protection. And then came the call from God and the opportunity for service.

It was the testimony of Moody as under his leadership the fires of revival were kindled wherever he went, that it was the result of the long-continued prayers and the patient waiting of some saint or group of saints. It is prayer and faith which brings down from heaven the manifest power and presence of God to the defeat and the destruction of the evil.

Fire typifies a two-fold process of manifestation of God. That of purifying and cleansing and that of judgment.

God's children are purified and cleansed by the operation of his word. "Now, ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you," said Christ. Just as the impurities are burned out and the pure gold left, so by the processes which God is carrying out in his children he is burning out the dross in order that the pure gold of righteousness and truth may be made manifest.

God is spoken of as a consuming fire, and thus is typified the judgment of God upon evil

THE STORY.

"WHAT! Thou hast seen Elijah and hast let him get quite away again?" and the shrill voice of Jezebel with rising inflection and added intensity with every word plainly indicated the astonishment, indignation, scorn and contempt which surged over her. King Ahab in confusion struggled to make answer, but he had only spoken a few faltering words when Jezebel broke out again:

"Here thou hast been seeking for thy enemy and the enemy of thy people for the past three years, and when the gods give him into thy hands thou lettest him get quite away again!"

"But it was not the gods that gave him into my hands," Ahab protested, "for he came boldly to meet me, saying his God had sent him."

"His God!" scornfully repeated Jezebel. "What god is there beside the god Baal whom we worship?"

"And he has asked that all the prophets of Baal and the prophets of the groves who eat at thy table shall meet him on Mount Carmel," Ahab continued, without answering Jezebel's question.

"Thou fool!" shrieked Jezebel, letting her passion quite get the better of her and so distorting her face that she seemed more demon than woman. "Thinkest thou that he will meet them there? Surely, he seeketh only to put thee to further confusion and shame. The dirty dog, the vile hypocrite, dare not show his face before the prophets of Baal."

"But Obadiah declareth that there is no doubt but that Elijah will be on Mount Carmel at the appointed time," protested Ahab.

"And what reason hath Obadiah for supposing anything?" contemptuously demanded Jezebel. "Verily, I believe that it is he who has kept Elijah hidden from my wrath during all these years."

"Thou speakest unjustly," protested Ahab, "for the king hath no more faithful servant than this man Obadiah."

"But somebody who is close to thee and hath known of thy plans must have kept the prophet warned, else could he not have escaped our search all these years. And who but Obadiah could do this thing?"

"And it was Obadiah who first brought me word to-day that the prophet Elijah was in the land and close at hand," reluctantly admitted Ahab, as he recalled how Obadiah had sent him to meet the prophet that day.

"Ho, ho! As might have been expected, and yet thou needest to be told what ought to be plain enough to thee. And now thou art foolish enough to believe that the prophet will keep his word. He hath but slipped through thy fingers again, and while the prophets of Baal are gathering on Mount Carmel Elijah will be far, far away."

Ahab was silent. The influence of his wife was so strong upon him that when in her presence she dominated his every thought and action, and now that which before he had not called into question seemed uncertain and doubtful. He wondered now how he could have been so weak as to let the prophet Elijah escape him. He recalled how when first Obadiah had brought him word and revenge filled his heart against the prophet and he fully intended to call him to a severe accounting, but as he had come into that commanding presence his courage had failed him and with a desperate effort at the display of kingly dignity and authority he had demanded:

"Art thou he that troubleth Israel?"

And then the piercing eyes of the prophet had been fixed upon him, seemingly looking right through him, and making him quail and tremble as his words of accusation and condemnation were thundered forth. With bowed head he had listened, and when the prophet had commanded him to summon all the prophets of Baal to Mount Carmel he had promised like a child to obey.

But now under the spell of his wife's suspicions and wrath a revulsion of feeling had taken place and he began to doubt himself and everything and everybody. Such is the evil influence of a wicked life which comes to completely dominate another.

"Shall we not summon the prophets to Mount Carmel?" at last he ventured to ask, half doubtfully.

A wicked gleam came into the eyes of Jezebel as a sudden thought came to her and she said:

"We will let Obadiah decide. If he thinkest his friend Elijah will keep tryst with the prophets of Baal, let them be summoned. But," and she fairly hissed the words as she leaned toward Ahab, "if Elijah come not—and he won't—verily the life of Obadiah shall be forfeited. He shall atone with his blood for the affront offered Baal."

Without a word Ahab turned and left the apartment. He knew it would be useless to protest, even though he chose to do so. The decision of summoning the prophets must rest with Obadiah.

"Remember," he exclaimed later, when Obadiah had come to him in response to his summons, "remember, it means thy life if the prophet Elijah appeareth not!"

"Yes, I know," was the quiet response. "He will come. Let the prophets be summoned."

On the day appointed, with much pomp and ceremony the great company of Baal set forth for Mount Carmel, their gorgeous apparel and banners and images borne before them making an imposing display and calling forth the shouts of admiration and approval of the great crowds of people as they followed.

"Baal shall have a fitting sacrifice to-day," whispered Jezebel to her chief prophet just before he took his place in the procession. And then as her eyes sought out Obadiah where he stood surrounded by the guard she had caused to be appointed, she added: "Let him not escape."

The hours passed wearisomely to the queen. Her usual pleasures and diversions failed to hold her attention. Confident as she was of the outcome of the gathering on Mount Carmel, her spirit was strangely ill at ease. That night troubled dreams came to break her rest and the next day found her in a state of nervous excitement and irritation from which late in the afternoon she sought relief by resting upon her couch. Not a breath of air was stirring and the sun seemed more fierce in his heat than ever, and as she lay down she said to herself:

"Surely the gods will be appeased this day and will send rain."

How long she slept she knew not, but she was suddenly aroused by a loud crash in the room and sprang up to find the wind blowing in a perfect hurricane and the heavens so black with clouds that she could scarcely see in the gloom the broken fragments of the big urn which had stood before the open window. Trembling and frightened she turned to rise and ran squarely into the arms of some one who at that moment had come hurrying down the passageway. A sudden flash of lightning revealed the awe-stricken face of Ahab bending over her.

"What aileth thee?" she whispered. "Taketh thou the death of Obadiah thus to heart?"

"Nay, Obadiah liveth," Ahab exclaimed, "and the prophet Elijah hath appeared on the mount and his God hath answered him with fire, and the prophets are slain."

"All the prophets?" she asked, trembling like an aspen.

"Yea, all!"

CHANGE MUST COME

TARIFF REFORM NECESSARY FOR BUSINESS REVIVAL.

Demands Made by Leading Manufacturers Put Republican Party Leaders in a Hole—Time for Voters to Assert Themselves.

A great many Republican manufacturers, not in a combine or trust, have at last discovered that they cannot increase production and find a market until the tariff is revised. As long as the home market absorbed all they could produce they were satisfied to have raw materials and foreign made products taxed by a high tariff, but now the Republican panic having reduced consumption, and having a surplus to sell, they must either reduce their output or seek foreign markets for their surplus. To cheapen their products they must have free raw materials, a change is what some are demanding, and then they are confronted with the dilemma that the tariff generally must be reduced, so that the cost of living may be decreased and wages thus be reduced without injury to their workmen employed.

Gov. Douglas of Massachusetts, the great boot and shoe manufacturer, has for years been telling his brother manufacturers that present conditions were approaching and advising them and the people of Massachusetts to demand tariff to save the industries of that state. A majority of the boot and shoe manufacturers of New England have joined with him in that demand, but Gov. Douglas being a Democrat, many hang back on account of partisan politics, although the people elected him governor by a large majority on the issues of radical tariff reform.

The meeting in Washington of representatives of the Manufacturers' association and other bodies, notably the National Grange, and their demand upon the president and speaker for the passage of ahe bill for a tariff commission, is a good sign that tariff reformers can well be pleased with, although no immediate advantage will be gained, for the Republican leaders will not allow the bill to pass. But the movement advertises the fact, long since claimed by Democrats, that the protective tariff was bound to fall of it's own weight, and that manufacturers who use raw materials of foreign origin would be compelled to have such free of tariff duty or they could not compete with foreigners in foreign markets.

That time has now come. The breakdown of the financial and economic policies of the Republican party has produced business depression, and the first people to suffer are the manufacturers and their workmen. The most ordinary business sense would seem to demand forthwith such amendment of the tariff law as would give our manufacturers the free raw materials they need, even if other people were not immediately relieved from excessive tariff taxes. If such reductions were at once put into effect it would put new life into the depressed business of manufacturing and allow them to seek foreign markets for their products that cannot be sold in the home market, and thus induce them to run their factories on full time, instead of the present reduced production. Workmen would then be employed and from the expenditure of their wages all business would be benefited.

But the managing Republican politicians in congress are in a blue funk and are afraid that any discussion of the tariff would add to their misery. Even President Roosevelt fears to recommend tariff reform, for it is said he has entered into an unholy alliance with the standpatters, who have made him believe that tariff discussion would further depress business and lead to the defeat of the Republican party.

So the Republican politicians stand pat and allow the people to continue to be plundered, and not a Republican congressman rebels against the program. Is it not time to "turn the rascals out?"

A Republican Quandary.

The Indiana Republicans are in a quandary If they heartily indorse Roosevelt, the Fairbanks crowd say it will be equivalent to indorsing Taft, who is supposed to be standing for the Roosevelt policies, therefore, they want a very mild indorsement of the president. If they fight a generous indorsement of the president it will lead to trouble in the campaign and perhaps at the election. Then there is an important faction of the Republicans of Indiana who favor tariff revision and are determined to include a tariff reform plank in the state platform. Whether such a plank is rejected or adopted by the party it is pretty sure to manifest a division in the ranks and this would be a weakness to a presidential canvass. Why should not the Indiana Republicans adopt tariff revision? Why not favor a maximum and minimum tariff as Senator Beveridge suggested? Then if the G. O. P. is lucky enough to win out, it will be easy enough to again fool the people by preserving the present tariff schedules as the minimum rates and make the maximum rates 20 to 30 per cent. higher. Nothing would please the trusts so much as that.

When Rear Admiral Rixey is sent to sea by the next administration will he command a hospital ship or just be an ordinary doctor? is the question in naval circles

BUSINESS CONDITIONS.

The Whole Country is Leaning on the Farmer.

There are, according to the reports to the railroads, 360,000 cars and hundreds of engines idle, whereas a year ago there were not enough to carry the freight offered. Such an enormous shrinkage of business on the railroads is a pretty good barometer of business depression elsewhere. Another indication of business stagnation is the iron trade, which only produced a little over 1,000,000 tons of pig iron in January compared with 2,300,000 tons in October. But as a trust controls the iron industry it is no longer as reliable a trade barometer as it used to be. The steel trust, in spite of the falling off in the demand for its products, has determined to maintain prices. Before the organization of the steel trust the price of iron and steel was gauged by supply and demand, and in times of business distress the price of steel products followed closely the price of other commodities.

Importations of merchandise at New York have dropped 12 per cent. in January as compared with December. There is also a curtailment of production in nearly all industries of from 20 to 25 per cent., and declines in values of 10 to 20 per cent. in many manufactured products. Economy is prevalent and many workmen are out of a job.

These are not pleasing facts, but it is no use to conceal them in looking forward to what will come. Business cannot much revive until the process of readjustment is completed from the changed conditions from the boom times to the present liquidation. The great trusts are figthing against this readjustment and are straining every nerve to hold up the price of their products. They probably know that this effort retards a return to prosperity, for lower prices are needed to induce greater consumption, but being protected by the tariff they can compel the people to still pay the price of prosperity without participating in it

The managers of the great trusts are all Republicans; they have been fostered by Republican tariff legislation and they desire to keep the Republican party in power. To reduce the price of their products they would have to lower wages, and that just before a national election would be likely to lead to disaster to the party which protects them. They, therefore prefer to run their furnaces on half or one-third time than to increase their output and reduce prices and wages. They hope to control their workmen by keeping them on half time better than by more work and reduced pay.

There is one redeeming feature that appears to offset these discouraging facts. The price of farm products continues fairly remunerative, so that whereas there is much poverty in the cities there is plenty on the farms It is appalling to think of what conditions would now be if there had been a crop failure the past year of any of the leading agricultural products. The whole country is now leaning on the farmers and those who look ahead for signs of the times are fixing their gaze on what the promise of the next crops will be, both here and abroad, for good or bad crops will decide the business future of the country for the next year at least.

Meanwhile, the trusts and other tariff-protected interests are bleeding the farmers at every pore, for no one else can afford to buy trust products in any quantity on account of high trust prices. If the present Republican congress had revised the tariff so that the protected monopolists would feel the competition from abroad, the farmers, at least, would be saving millions a month which is now absorbed by the trusts. If you want to know what is going to happen keep your eyes fixed on the weather man and the farmers.

Prophetic Words.

Gov. Johnson of Minnesota goes on record as follows:

"The farming of taxes in France before the revolution was no more iniquitous than is our present tariff system; 1908 will be a memorable year for the struggle of equal rights and American ideals; the year will see tariff reform accomplished or well under way, for if the present congress does not at the present session make substantial reductions the people in November will elect those pledged so to do."

The truly optimistic chord in this pronunciamento finds response in the hearts of millions of men to-day, and serves the excellent purpose of unifying popular sentiment against the crying evil of tariff taxation.

The French revolution—the bloodiest of all in the history of internecine wars—was largely the result of oppressive taxation, and though greater in magnitude was, in principle, no worse than the present tariff taxation. As a result the struggle is on between the people and the Republican machine in congress, and though the present congress may delay relief, the people will mend matters at the polls this fall and indorse these prophetic utterances of Gov. Johnson.

The question of revising oppressive tariff laws has been thoroughly sifted out in the press, and all the people know the various phases of its iniquitous power. It remains to them to unify effort and to cover local elections to the end that only men of sworn fidelity to the people and hostility to corporate power shall hold seats in the next congress.

BRYAN HOME CHOICE

NEBRASKA PLEDGES PRESIDENTIAL ALLEGIANCE.

DEMOCRATS IN SESSION

All Sorts of Warm Greetings Thrown at Man Whom Party Leaders Term the "Ideal American."

Omaha, Neb.—Friday was "Bryan Day" in Omaha. For that matter it was "Bryan Day" throughout Nebraska. With the Democratic state convention as a nucleus, party leaders from every county and practically every primary district in the commonwealth pledged allegiance to the presidential aspirations of Mr. Bryan and to consider means for furthering his interests before the Democratic national convention at Denver next July. Enthusiasm was prevalent throughout Thursday. It broke loose early in the afternoon session of the convention and gradually gathering volume broke out in tumultuous vociferations when at the beginning of the evening session the platform committee presented a resolution. The resolution: "The Democratic party of Nebraska again declares confindence in, and admiration for William Jennings Bryan. In him we behold the ideal American citizen—the ideal Democrat. We rejoice that the principles which he has so ably advocated have been gladly received and as now generally accepted by the American people. Resolved, That the delegates by this convention chosen, be and are hereby instructed to vote as a unit for the nomination of Mr. Bryan for the presidency." Brief as this official indorsement of Mr. Bryan's candidacy, it met in full the approval of the delegates. The ironclad instructions to the 16 men selected during the afternoon to represent the state at Denver will, it was thought, leave no doubt as to where Bryan's home state stands.

St. Paul, Minn.—The Democratic state committee of Minnesota Friday afternoon, after a bitter fight, adopted a resolution indorsing Gov. John A. Johnson of Minnesota for the Democratic presidential nomination and recommending that he be named by the national convention at Denver next July. The state committee besides adopting the Johnson resolution, voted that the state convention to elect delegates to the national convention should be held in St. Paul on May 14. The matter of calling a convention to nominate state officers was left to a committee of five to be appointed by State Chairman Frank A Day.

THRO TS OF THE WARDENS

WERE SLASHED BY THE DESPERATE LIFE CONVICTS

Before One of the Officers Could Shoot Down His Assailants—Escape Was Planned.

Deer Lodge, Mont., March 9.—Warden Frank Conley, of the Montana state penitentiary, was dangerously wounded and Assistant Warden John Robinson was killed, when three life convicts, George Rock, W. H. Hayes and another whose name is not given, made a dash for liberty. Robinson's throat was cut from ear to ear, and the jugular vein was severed. Conley's throat was gashed, and he was stabbed several times in the shoulder and groin before he was able to draw his revolver and shoot two of his assailants down. Convicts Hayes and Rock were both shot down by Conley after the latter had been wounded. It is believed that the warden will recover.

The attack and attempted escape, according to the prison authorities, had been long planned by Rock and Hayes, who were cellmates. Both were armed with penknives, the blades of which were sharpened like razors.

The three convicts were brought to the office of the prison in the court yard by Deputy Warden Robinson to be tried for some trivial infraction of the rules and, Conley was waiting to sit in judgment. Hayes had for several months been a "trusty," and had been given the position as turnkey. He had been placed in the same cell with Rock because the authorities believed he would watch the latter, who had been regarded as a most desperate convict.

The moment the men entered the office door Rock turned swiftly upon Robinson, who was closing the door, and, quickly drawing a knife, he began slashing at the warden's throat. The deputy sank to the floor dying. At the same moment that Rock attacked Robinson, Hayes drew a knife and started for Conley. The latter retreated to the rear of the office, but before he could draw his revolver Hayes had slashed his throat. The convict, seeing his intended victim getting away, grappled with him and stabbed him several times in the shoulder and the groin. Although bleeding terribly, Conley managed to draw his gun from his pocket and fired four times, with the weapon pressed against Hayes' abdomen. As Hayes sank to the floor Rock rushed at Conley, who emptied the remaining cartridges into Rock, and the latter also went down.

The third convict who had been called to the office took to his heels at the first of the battle, but was quickly captured. The authorities refused to give out his name until they have investigated whether he was concerned in the plot or had merely been called to the office at the same time as the other two.

How the convicts, Hayes and Rock, secured possession of the knives is a mystery. It is believed that the infraction of the rules had been planned in order to reach the warden's office, where they would have more chance in making a dash for liberty.

Rock was shot through the lungs twice and Hayes three times through the abdomen. Both are badly wounded, but it is believed they will recover.

The electric power to be developed will be 16,500 horse power and will benefit mainly the towns of Brattleborough and Vernon, Vt., Hinsdale N. H., and Northfield, Mass.

AFTER THE ROOF COLLAPSED.

Drawing Made from Photograph of Collinwood, O., School, Where Over 160 Pupils Lost Their Lives.

AWFUL SCHOOL HOLOCAUST NEAR CLEVELAND KILLS 167

Building Housing Elementary Pupils in the Suburb of Collinwood, O., Burns, Bringing Death to Children.

Cleveland, O.—Penned and held in narrow hallways, jammed up against doors that only opened inward, 167 children in the suburb of North Collinwood Wednesday were killed by fire, by smoke, and beneath the grinding heels of their panic-stricken playmates.

The awful tragedy occurred in the public school of North Collinwood, ten miles east of this city. One hundred and sixty-five corpses were in the morgue at Collinwood Thursday, six children were unaccounted for, and all the hospitals and houses for two miles around contained numbers of children, some fatally, and many less seriously injured. All of the victims were between the ages of six and fifteen years. The school contained between 310 and 325 pupils, and of this entire number only about 80 are known to have left the building unhurt.

Fire Drill Is Forgotten.

The school building was supposed to be practically modern, although erected three or four years ago. The school children had been given fire drills, and were supposed to be in training for just such an emergency. When the crucial moment arrived the drill was forgotten and not the slightest effort to effect an orderly or prompt escape availed.

Victims Practically Incinerated.

As soon as firemen and volunteers could get close enough, attempts were made to pluck bodies from the death heaps at the doors. It was found that the flames had practically incinerated the bodies. Firemen with rakes, forks and shovels turned up blackened bones, little blackened skulls and masses of charred flesh, but bodies recognizable as such were no longer to be found. A fearful stench added to the horror of the scene.

Miss Anna Moran, the principal of the school, who escaped, says that the children made a mad rush for the door as soon as the alarm of fire was sounded, but were driven back by the choking smoke. Later the flames prevented the escape of many of them from the burning building.

County Coroner Burke immediately after the fire said:

"The construction of the schoolhouse was an outrage. The hallways were narrow and there was practically but one mode of exit. The children were caught like rats in a trap."

Terrible Scenes Enacted.

Fearful scenes were enacted around the burning schoolhouse. Fathers and mothers raved, cursed or prayed. Many tried to break through the crowd and some got so far as to dash toward the flaming doorways. One big man in overalls and jumper was restrained by force. Explaining in broken English that his "kinder" were in the building he struggled desperately with the three men who held him. Finally they threw him to the ground and sat on him, forcing his great form down in the ankle deep mud.

The building was completely destroyed, only the outside brick walls remaining standing. The floors and roof fell into the interior early in the fire, making the rescue of intact bodies absolutely hopeless.

Dead Laid to Rest.

Slowly and solemnly the processions of death began to wend their way towards the cemeteries, hearing the battered and charred remains of some of the 167 children whose lives were snuffed out in Wednesday morning's catastrophe in the Lakeview school. All day there was no cessation in the funeral corteges. Those who had no dead to mourn as a personal loss stood in the streets with bared heads as the grim processions passed. There was scarcely a dry eye in Collinwood. One of the sad funerals was that of the three children of Janitor Hirter, held jointly with the services for three other little ones.

Janitor Is Made Target.

Mutterings against the janitor could be heard about the village as half-crazed parents sought an object upon which to wreak vengeance, forgetting as they did that Hirter himself was walking with bowed head and broken heart behind the hiers of three of his beloved. A detail of police was placed about the Hirter home when the hour for the funeral came. Fully 500 persons had gathered, but when the coffins were carried to the doorway the crowd spread and opened the way for them without protest or expression of hostility.

Altogether there were 50 burials Friday, and Saturday the gruesome task was repeated. Sunday will witness the last of the individual burials, and on Monday the remains of all those who are unidentified will be laid to rest with one funeral. Friday night there were 28 of these bundles of flesh that awaited claimants.

Fire Testimony Heard.

Testimony describing the mad rush to death of the school children was given Friday at the continued session of the coroner's inquest. Stories of heroism on the part of the women teachers were recited. F. P. Whitney, superintendent of the Collinwood schools, stated his belief to be that no fire department could have done any effective work after the fire had started. Two of the teachers told of their unavailing attempts to open one of the double doors at the rear, which they said was locked. The inquest also developed the fact that, after the first crush at the door, it was beyond human possibility to aid or save those whom the tongues of fire were devouring in the charnel house. The inquest will be resumed Monday.

Partitions Cause Great Loss.

In a statement Friday, Chief Wallace of the Cleveland fire department, after an examination of the ruins of the Collinwood school, said it was his opinion that the loss of life would not have been so great had there been no partitions at the sides of the storm doors at the rear entrance.

Round About the State

What Is Going On in Different Sections of Kentucky.

M'CHORD BILL PASSED BY HOUSE.

Measure Designed To Restore Peace and Protect Planters Adopted.

Frankfort, Ky.—The McChord tobacco bill was passed by the house by a vote of 66 to 21.

The bill will now go to the senate. It is designed to relieve the tense conditions in the tobacco-growing districts of the state and received the solid backing of the growers' societies.

It places the tobacco industry of the state under police powers, which is vested in the hands of a deputy to be named by the commissioner of agriculture.

It is said the measure will drive the American Tobacco Co. out of the state.

Many speeches were made for and against the measure.

Mr. Wallace, of Louisville, said the extension of the police power in the state so that it would control the tobacco industry was wrong.

He condemned lawlessness, such as night riding, and charged that the Society of Equity must have knowledge of the same, as it takes no step to stop it.

Frankfort, Ky.—The county unit bill was given a staggering blow in the senate again when the motion of Senator Rives to take the bill out of the hands of the committee was lost by a vote fo 18 to 16.

As a result the vote on the bill will be delayed. The supporters of the bill, however, won a victory when the motion of Senator Charlton, of Louisville, to table the motion of Senator Rives was lost by the tie vote of 17 to 17. If the Rives motion had been tabled the county unit bill would have been as dead as a door nail.

Senator Rives said that he meant no reflection on the committee on public morals and religion in asking that the county unit bill be taken out of the hands of the committee and put on its passage. He said that there has been considerable delay and he feared further delay. He said that a report was not what he desired, but that he wanted the bill put on its passage, for he believed every man in the senate had made up his mind how he would vote on the bill.

The house, in its two sessions, devoted nearly all of its time to the passage of a number of bills. Only one measure met defeat, it being the Smith bill to compel sixth-class cities to publish their financial statements annually.

Rewards To Be Offered.

Lexington, Ky.—At a meeting of citizens $1,000 was raised and placed in the hands of the board of control of the Montgomery County Society of Equity to be offered as a reward for the arrest and conviction of those persons guilty of sending threatening anonymous letters signed "Tenants" and "Outsiders." These letters were recently mailed to various citizens of Montgomery county.

Dynamite In Coal.

Danville, Ky.—Mrs. George Hunn, wife of a prominent merchant at Moreland, threw a bucket of coal into a grate at her home and a terrific explosion occurred. It is believed that the coal contained a number of dynamite caps. How the dynamite caps got into the coal is a mystery. The victim, who was badly burned about the face and body, may recover.

Failed To End War.

Louisville, Ky.—Authorization of the statement that nothing tangible resulted from the burley conference here was made by the growers' officials. They all returned to their homes, and it seems that the big deal is off, though there are possibilities that another meeting with the trust officials may be called in a week or two.

Kukluxers Sued.

Paducah, Ky.—Suits were filed in the United States court by Robert H. Hollowell and his wife Mary for $50,000 damages each against 28 alleged Kukluxers in Lyon and Caldwell counties. Allegations are made that on May 2, 1907, the defendants visited the homes of the plaintiffs and unmercifully whipped and beat them.

Boyd Acquitted.

London, Ky.—Robert Boyd was acquitted by the jury on the charge of killing James Sparks. Boyd killed James Sparks in the circuit clerk's office during last September's term of court. The shooting ended a dispute over certain commissions amounting to some $5 or $6.

May Go To Linn.

Frankfort, Ky.—The first appointment of a regular democrat to office by Gov. Willson will probably be that of Senator Conn Linn as a member of the board of regents of the Western Kentucky State Normal school.

Believes Powers Innocent.

Lexington, Ky.—The city council of Barboursville, former home of Caleb Powers, passed a resolution asserting belief in Powers' innocence of complicity in the murder of Gov. William Goebel and petitioning Gov. Willson to pardon him.

Fleeing From Breathitt.

Lexington, Ky.—Attracted by promises of better wages and desiring to escape connection with the feud troubles, young men are leaving Breathitt county in considerable numbers. Over a hundred have left since January 1.

NIGHT RIDERS BURN TOBACCO.

Torch Is Applied To Property of Buyer Who Ignored Warnings.

Augusta, Ky.—At midnight a large crowd of men gathered at Rocksprings, three miles below Augusta, and took from a warehouse 5,000 pounds of tobacco and burned it. The tobacco was part of a purchase bought by Louis Hull for J. A. Downard, Covington tobacco man, and was in hogsheads, ready for shipment to the Cincinnati market.

Mr. Hull had received several warnings to quit purchasing tobacco, but had disregarded them. He was using a large warehouse belonging to J. B. Boughner, of Augusta, who had notified Hull not to use the property for the purpose of prizing tobacco.

The men rolled the tobacco out on the hillside, away from the warehouse, and set it afire.

After it had gotten under good headway they aroused Jeff McClanahan, postmaster, and told him to watch the fire and see that no buildings caught from it.

There was no insurance on the tobacco.

VICTORY OF TEMPERANCE FOLK

Was the Reference of the County Unit Bill.

Frankfort, Ky.—Friends of temperance legislation won a decisive victory when the Waggoner county unit bill, that passed the house, was referred to the Kentucky statutes committee in the senate by a vote of 16 to 13. The reference was made at the request of Senator Cox, as he said the bill had been so widely discussed that he would rather the senate committee refer the bill than to take the responsibility of it. The committee consists of R. B. Brown, chairman; Frank Rives, J. Wheeler Campbell, Conn Linn, J. A. Donaldson, O. P. Hogan, A. R. Burnam, N. C. Cureton and Hillard H. Smith. With the possible exception of two members of the committee all are strong supporters of local option legislation, and the committee may bring pressure to bear on the rules committee to take up the county unit bill and pass it before the close of the session.

Nell Bill Passed Senate.

Frankfort, Ky.—Local option supporters won another distinct victory when the rules committee, composed exclusively of democrats, took up and had passed the Nell bill, which prohibits distillers selling by wholesale in local option districts to any person except licensed or retail dealers. Senator Nell, the author of the bill, says that the provisions of this bill will put an end to "boot-legging." It was passed unanimously.

Campbell On the Ground.

Lexington, Ky.—President Hugh Campbell, of the United States Tobacco Co., who has been conspicuous in the fight waged by the independent manufacturers against the American Tobacco Co., arrived here from Richmond, Va., to have a look at the local market and to size up the situation in this section.

More Death Traps Found.

Louisville, Ky.—Examination into the protection against fire afforded school children developed that in 12 schools the doors open inward. Other schools did not practice the fire drill enough and orders were at once issued to have the faults remedied.

Thieves Robbed the Corner Stone.

Newport, Ky.—Sacrilegious thieves paid a visit to the St. Thomas church, Ft. Thomas, and, after prying out the corner stone, secured a small amount of money. A crowbar was used in loosening the stone, as was evidenced by its imprint in the soft earth.

Farmer In Terror.

Mayfield, Ky.—J. J. Albritton, living at Old Baltimore, found a bundle of switches and matches at his door. It is said that Albritton joined the Equity Society last year, but delivered his crop to independent buyers here. Albritton is terror-stricken.

Columbia, Ky.—Miss Anne Warden started to refrain from eating meat last Wednesday and tackled fish. A small bone lodged in her throat and in the subsequent attack of coughing she burst a blood vessel and bled to death.

Overdose of Morphine.

Lexington, Ky.—Joseph Llewellyn, a young man 22 years old, died from an overdose of morphine, taken to relieve toothache. He is the son of Mrs. David Llewellyn, who formerly lived in New York.

Blew Open the Vault.

Paducah, Ky.—Robbers blew both doors of the vault in the post office at Dawson Springs and stole $904.37 in stamps and 60 cents in money. An attempt was made to break into the steel chest in the wall of the vault, which there was a large sum of money.

House Contests Settled.

Frankfort, Ky.—The contest cases against seven members of the house were brought up and disposed of. The members holding the certificates were declared entitled to their seats by a unanimous vote.

The Kentucky State Journal says: "The Memphis Commercial Appeal, which never loses a chance to misrepresent Kentucky Democrats, says: "When the news of his defeat was told to Gov. Beckham, he burst into tears, and for several minutes could not restrain his emotion. He had remained just outside the chamber while the election was in progress." This is the most bare-faced lie that has been told, not even excepting those which the Courier-Journal has told. Gov. Beckham did not have to be told of his defeat. He was right there and acknowledged to be by all who saw him, the calmest and most self-possessed man in the building. Gov. Beckham never loses his head. The Memphis Commercial Appeal never loses an op, ortunity to lie.

When people are building a school house they do not give enough attention to the lighting of rooms. Too many schools are built without any regard to ventilation; it means so much to the little child that sits in a close, stuffy room for several hours. Oftentimes the doors and windows are arranged so that if they are opened the little children will sit in the draft. Drafts are dangerous and are a sign of imperfect ventilation. If it is not possible to ventilate or to have fresh air without having drafts, then the children should move around, walk up and down in a march, or something of that kind during the time the room is being aired.

The RECORDER is in receipt of a proposition to run a large advertisement for the American Tobacco Company. The rate offered is an insult to a respectable paper and is on a par with the methods of the American Tobacco Company's dealings with Kentucky tobacco growers in past years. The American Tobacco Company can not buy space in the RECORDER at any price. No wonder the American Tobacco Company makes big dividends.

The Law and Order League organized in Montgomery county a few days ago is offering a reward of $500 for the arrest of any person who may be convicted of the crime of arson, or of destroying or injuring a tobacco bed, or for injuring or destroying any cattle or stock. The people in Montgomery county are going to have peace if they have to fight for it.

Both the political parties in Kentucky need to try the getting together act before anything for certain can be counted on by either. The Democrats have a stay-at-home vote of 25,000 or 30,000, but they may continue to stay at home for some time to come. The Republicans are in a fair way to create a considerable contingent of the same kind.

A dispatch from Bath county says about forty suits have been brought against tenants to prevent them from selling pooled tobacco, and hundreds of injunctions have been secured against others, and that tenants are mad, the landlords are mad, the Equity people are mad, and threats are flying thick and fast.

CORTRIGHT METAL SHINGLES

What never leak? Exactly; never leak, never needs repairs of any kind, and last as long as the building itself. Neither melting snow, nor the worst driving rain can possibly reach the interior of the building that's covered with Cortright Metal Shingles. Pretty good recommendation isn't it? In addition we might add they're fire-proof and lightning proof too. Think of it! and they are not as expensive as other forms of roofing. Step in and we'll show them to you.

Local agents wanted for sale of Lott's Rapid Steam Washer—greatest Washing Machine of the age.

A. S. of E. News.

Gallatin county tobacco growers, representing 2,129 acres, have pledged to grow no tobacco this year. In 1907 about 2,300 acres were grown.

All who have sold any pooled tobacco pledged to the Equity have been sued and will be prosecuted, therefore our citizens are letting the law take its course.—Carrollton Democrat.

The Lexington Herald's Owingsville correspondent says: "So far as can be learned no tobacco plant beds have yet been sown and it is most probable that very little of the weed will be raised in this section."

The local banks in Flemming have agreed to finance the pooled tobacco in that county, the money to be loaned on warehouse receipts based on a rate of 5 cents a pound and a $20,000 personal bond executed as additional security. The rate of interest is six per cent.

Several suits against parties who have disposed of pooled tobacco are on the docket and some of them are ready for trial. The cases against Brumback, Kemper, Carter and Smoot will likely be disposed of this court. The others will not be tried out till next term.—Owenton News-Herald.

To those who expect to raise tobacco this year we suggest the following method by which they can keep their plant beds from being ruined by the night riders: Just put up a little cabin by the side of your plant bed and get a smallpox patient to move in. The night riders will then leave them severely alone.—Blue Grass Clipper.

The 1906 crop of pooled tobacco grown in Grant county is about 3,500 hogsheads, about 2,000 hogsheads of which have already been shipped to the Farmers' and Shippers' ware house in Cincinnati for storage until the crop is sold, and the remaining 1,500 hogsheads are being hauled in and loaded for shipment right along.—Williamstown Courier.

Three hogsheads of the 1906 crop of Mr. Henry Drane were sold at Winchester this week at an average of 20 cents. The tobacco was sold by the Society of Equity where it was pooled, to independent buyers. This tobacco was unusually fine, samples of it taking three premiums at the Louisville Exposition in 1907.—Henry County Local.

All of the Independent tobacco buyers in Pendleton county have agreed to quit the field. They will purchase no more tobacco either in Grant, Pendleton or other counties. This agreement was reached at a meeting of the Independent buyers with Equity leaders. Seven buyers have been operating in Pendleton, and this latest action will relieve the tense situation in that county to a great extent.

The representatives of the tobacco growers of the burley district were with us again this week. Reports show the strenuous campaign which has been on for some time has had its effect, and that only a small crop will be set this spring. In the counties which, like Clark, have been thoroughly organized, the amount to be planted will be a negligible quantity and will have no effect on the market. In other counties, like our neighbor, Madison, which, for some reason has never been organized, there will be considerable tobacco grown.—Winchester Democrat.

A suit has been filed in the Clark County Court at Winchester, the headquarters of the Burley Tobacco Society (the Society of Equity), by M. P. Rehorn, State Revenue Agent, against the society for unpaid taxes on the 1905 crop of pooled tobacco for two years and the 1906 crop of tobacco for one year, the total valuation of which is placed at $100,000,000. A similar action has been filed by the Revenue Agent against the Board of Control in each of the 42 counties in the burley district. In case the suit brought at Winchester against the society as an incorporation, is not the proper procedure, action will be pushed in each of the 42 counties against the various Boards of Control.

Under the no crop agreement which has been almost universally adopted in the Burley Tobacco district, whether the crops now on hand are sold or not, the agreement not to grow will hold good. Many labor under the mistaken idea that if one or both of the crops now on hand is sold that this will release them from the no-crop agreement, but the Board of Control believes that in order to make the organization a success in the future they will have to reduce the size of the crop grown in 1908, even if it is not entirely eliminated. We have it on the most reliable authority that if no attempt is made to plant a crop in the Burley district, within fifty days the whole question will be settled and the tobacco sold at Equity prices.—Dry Ridge News.

To consider the offer of the American Tobacco Company at the conference held in Louisville, last week, for 1,000 hogsheads of the Equity tobacco of the 1906 crop, a meeting of the State Board was to be held in Winchester yesterday. It is further reported that the American Tobacco Company's representatives agreed to take an option on the entire 1906 crop with a view to purchasing the whole of it if the quality of the 1,000 hogsheads come up to the quality of the samples recently inspected by them at Winchester. This proposition, it is said, met with the approval of the sales committee, but, as the district board of the Equity Society recently passed a resolution not to sell any Equity tobacco to the American Tobacco Company unless they purchased the entire crop, it was impossible for the committee to close the deal without first placing the matter before the district board to pass upon.
